'HANDS UP!' CAN'T; SLAY HIM

WHEELER JOINS LA FOLLETTE; TO WAR ON DAWES

To "Make U. S. Safe for Democracy."

BY DONALD EWING.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic senator from Montana, today accepted the vice presidential "nomination" as running mate to La Follette which was offered him yesterday by the Wisconsin insurgents' national committee.

Wheeler, in his statement of acceptance, said he would run to help make "this, my country, safe for democracy." La Follette already has proclaimed his objective of making it "safe for republicanism," and the two plan to make a campaign on a plea of wedding the principles of Jefferson and of Lincoln.

To "Counteract" Dawes.

As the statement was given out, word also came that on Wheeler's shoulders will be placed the brunt of the campaign, that he will stump the entire nation in a tour greater than any candidate yet has taken, and that one of his chief objectives will be to counteract the fiery personality of Charles G. Dawes, Coolidge running mate.

During the progress of writing the statement, Senator Wheeler suddenly rushed from his office to that of David [illegible] Democratic [illegible] Walsh, Massachusetts, [illegible] (Rep., Wis.), La Follette's campaign manager, asked direct if Walsh would join the La Follette camp, said:

"I know just what Walsh will do and why Wheeler saw him, but it would be premature to say now."

Senator La Follette commented briefly on Mr. Wheeler's acceptance.

"Wheeler has courage, integrity, ability, and patriotism," he said. "In the struggle against privilege he has ever been in the front ranks of the people's army. In him progressives will find leadership in which they repose complete confidence."

Major Parties "Reactionary."

Wheeler's statement recalled that he had not wanted to be a candidate and reviewed the associations of both major parties with what he termed "predatory interests." He said the Democrats could not picture "Morgan's attorney as a progressive," and that Coolidge's reactionaryism was beyond dispute. The statement continued:

"In this situation I find myself unable to support either the Republican candidates who frankly admit their reactionary standpat policies, or the Democratic candidates who may claim in well chosen phrases that he (Davis) is a progressive, but whose training and constant associations belie any such pretension. Between Davis and Coolidge there is only a choice for conservatives to make."

Liberals Lose the Ballot!

He then says that liberals and progressives must flock to La Follette because between Davis and Coolidge they are disfranchised.

"The issues before the people were never more pronounced," he continues. "The Republican and Democratic parties deliberately and solemnly chose the path of indifference toward, if not in support of, the privileged interests. No one except those who believe in a government of special interests can vote for their nominees.

"The progressive, forward looking people of the nation, irrespective of party affiliation, who honestly believe in clean government, in the enforcement of the law against the privileged interests; those who still hold to the political principles and personal ethics of Jefferson and Lincoln, must needs find a political abiding place outside of the two old parties as they are constituted and managed today.

His Sort of Democracy.

"In accepting this call I do not abandon my faith in the democracy of Thomas Jefferson. I am a Democrat, but not a Wall street Democrat. I shall give my support and whatever influence I may possess to those candidates for office who have proved their fidelity to the interests of the people wherever they may be found, but I do not propose every man on whatever ticket he may appear who bears the party sign.

"Believing, as I do, that the presidential candidates selected by the Democratic and Republican parties for 1924 will be unable, if elected, to serve the best interests of the people of the United States, I therefore accept the call of your committee and shall do my best to help make this, my country, safe for democracy."

GREEK CABINET OUSTED AFTER DEPUTIES RIOT

ATHENS, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Greek cabinet headed by Premier Papanastasiou has fallen.

A stormy meeting of the chamber of deputies preceded the fall of the cabinet. The session broke up in a fight, in which a number of deputies were severely beaten.

A government crisis in Greece has been threatening since the early part of June, when Gen. Condylis and M. Tsouderos, respectively minister of war and finance, resigned. Gen. Condylis accusing the government of encouraging communism. It was believed then that other resignations would take place, and every effort was put forth by government leaders to avoid resignation of the cabinet.

SECY. DAVIS AT ELLIS ISL.; SAYS BAR MEXICANS

New York, July 19.—After a trip of inspection to Ellis island, Secretary of Labor Davis said today he had found conditions there satisfactory, with fewer immigrants on the island than at any time since he became secretary.

He urged more drastic restrictions against the admission of laborers from Mexico and more liberal admission of European laborers, saying:

"Why fill the copper mines of New Mexico with Mexicans when we can get 30,000 Cornishmen, who are skilled copper workers? Why lock the front doors of Europe and unlock the back doors of such countries as Canada, Mexico and the South Americas?"

Mrs. Julius Fleischmann Files Paris Divorce Plea

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—A petition for divorce was filed by Mrs. Julius Fleischmann, wife of the yeast king, in the Paris courts today. According to reports from America, Mr. Fleischmann told reporters in New York that his divorce was granted on Friday, July 11, but the papers filed today in Paris show that the process is only beginning. Mrs. Fleischmann intends to wait here until the divorce machine is definitely in operation, after which it is understood that she will become engaged to Jay O'Brien, Broadwayite, polo player, and former husband of Mae Murray and Irene Fenwick.

Cookeville, Tenn., July 19.—Word has reached here of the killing in this county Friday of Jones Carr, 59, by his brother, Wash Carr, a few years younger. The cause of the shooting is unknown here.

Find Girls in 500 B.C. Used Vanity Case

ODESSA, Russia, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—One hundred and sixty ancient Greek tombs of striking design and rare archaeological interest have been unearthed in the Dead City of Olyva, near here, by Prof. Semenov Zusser, Russian archaeologist.

Among the articles found in the tombs was a small linen bag containing a lady's mirror and believed to be the forerunner of the present day vanity case. In the bag there also were a rouge stick for the lips and a charcoal pencil for the eyes. The bag was found in a female grave, together with tufts of false hair and a number of silver bracelets, earrings, beads and other jewels.

Find Exquisite Pottery.

In other tombs were discovered pottery of exquisite workmanship, multicolored vases, amulets, knives and various articles of bronze and copper, all in a perfect state of preservation.

The excavations which have been in progress for many months, thus far have yielded more than 1,700 articles of great antiquarian interest.

Olyva, which means "merry," was once a center of Greek learning, culture and trade and it flourished about 500 B. C. Later, it became known among Russians as the "Pompeii of the Black Sea."

Became Pauper Colony.

Greek emigrants of Asia Minor selected Olyva, Herodotus records, because "it is free from malaria and its air is pure and transparent as crystal."

From a thriving prosperous port for the rich goods of the East, it became in the course of centuries a pauper colony existing solely on the revenue from occasional traders. Originally the population of the city worshiped the Greek gods in whose honor they erected temples. Today the city is a mass of ruins and the tombs excavated by Zusser are the only witnesses to its past greatness.

Boy Aiming at Tin Can Shoots Girl at Supper Table

Ellen Gillmore, 10 years old, while sitting at the dinner table in her home at 6610 South Loomis street last night, was struck in the left forearm by a bullet. It had been fired by George Le Moyne, 19 years old, 6811 Bishop street, who told the police that he was shooting at tin cans. At the request of the girl's father the boy was arrested.

RHODE ISLANDERS ON GAS BOMBER'S TRAIL ARRESTED

Providence, R. I., July 19.—Assistant Attorneys General George Hurley and John P. Hartigan, accompanied by Providence Police Inspectors John T. McGuire and Louis Godfrey, and by Thomas Lally and Matthew J. McGovern, the two men who charge Chairman William C. Pelkey of the Republican state central committee with having directed the placing of a bromine gas bomb in the Rhode Island senate last month, were arrested by Worcester, Mass., police as suspicious characters tonight. They were released on bail.

The party had left Providence for Rutland, where Republican members of the state senate have been harbored since the gas bomb incident. They were seeking to arrest "Toots" Murray, accused of having actually placed the bomb near the rostrum of Lieut. Gov. Felix A. Toupin. Murray is said to be a guard for the Republican senators at Rutland.

Gov. William S. Flynn of Rhode Island declared he considered the arrest of the officials as an outrage and said he intended to determine responsibility for it.

CRIPPLE SHOT BY BANDITS IN GAMING HOUSE

Mike Crowe's Place Shooting Scene.

A gray haired man lost his life late yesterday because he was unable to raise a crippled arm above his head in response to the command of a youthful bandit.

Two bullets—fired at such close range that they left black powder burns—crashed into his face and forehead and the victim fell to the floor dead. He was Frank H. Zahour, 53 years old, of 3432 Elaine place.

Shooting in Social Club.

The shooting took place in the Uptown Social club, a five room flat at 4866 Broadway, which police say has been converted into a gambling headquarters for the sporting gentry of the middle north side. It is operated by Michael Crowe, cousin of Ald. Dorsey Crowe of the 42d ward and a relative of Patrick Crowe, who achieved widespread publicity in connection with the famous Cudahy kidnaping case several years ago.

Michael Crowe, who apparently vanished immediately after the shooting, is being sought by the police for questioning. Two men—Jos. Shaw, 4816 Magnolia avenue, and Thomas Murray of 4866 Malden street—are in custody. They said they were "clerks" at the club.

Came to Cash Check.

To Capt. Martin J. O'Malley of the Summerdale station, Shaw told the story of Zahour's murder. Shortly after 5 o'clock, he said, the victim came in with his pay check of $64. As he was a "member" of the club, it was readily cashed.

"Just at that moment I heard footsteps coming up the stairs," Shaw went on. "I didn't pay particular attention, however, because I thought it was just a couple of the boys arriving for the evening. Then I spied a young man in the office doorway. There was a gat in his hand.

"'Stick 'em up and face the wall!' he ordered.

Holds Up One Hand.

"Murray and I obeyed in a hurry, and just as I was turning towards the wall I caught sight of Zahour with his one good arm raised above him. His pay money was clutched in that hand.

"The next minute there was a couple of quick shots that sounded like a cannon roaring. I heard the old man's body hit the floor—then the noise of two men rushing down the stairs. One of them was saying to the other:

"'Well, I got one of those guys.'"

That was all they got, however. Excited by the gunplay, the bandits did not take time even to snatch the roll of bills from the hand of the dead man.

Police believe that Zahour's inability to raise his crippled left arm brought on the shooting. The holdup men evidently thought the unraised hand was groping for a gun, and they hurried to be first on the trigger.

Flee in Car.

Residents of the neighborhood said that the slayers rushed into Broadway, crossed a vacant lot and jumped into a maroon colored Marmon touring car, which was parked in Magnolia avenue.

Police exhibited curiosity to know more about by-laws and social affairs of the club where the shooting took place. O'Malley admitted that his men six months ago raided another club which was then operated by Crowe at 4812 Broadway, a short distance from the present site.

"We had information that lots of gambling was going on there, but we failed to get any evidence," the captain said. "Since Crowe opened his new place we've been watching it pretty closely."

Known to Police.

Crowe has long been known to the police and the take-a-chance boys. He was a close friend of the late James Quinn, one time boss of the old 21st ward, and in decades past Mike Crowe was a familiar figure in the poker life as it once obtained in the giddy district between Chicago avenue and the Clark street bridge.

For a time he operated a place at Wells and Oak streets. Then the police got too industrious along the near north side and Crowe migrated up to the Wilson avenue district. His first stop was at Dakin street and Sheridan road.

Police think that the holdup men who visited his most recent club house expected to find the place filled with sports who were playing the handbooks. At the time they entered, however, most of the gambling boys were just leaving the Hawthorne track after the last race.

Woman Sues Rich Oil Man; Why? All Mum

GEORGE C. PRIESTLEY.

George C. Priestley, millionaire oil man, a close friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt and a leader in Oklahoma politics, yesterday was named defendant in the precipe of a suit for $250,000, filed in the Superior court here by Mrs. Florence Powell Gill, divorcee and daughter of a prominent Buffalo, N. Y., family.

Though no inkling of the nature of the suit would be given by Mrs. Gill's attorney, Philip A. Weinstein, it was said the charges would involve personal matters, since Mrs. Gill and Priestley have been friends of long standing.

Lawyer Is Mum.

The lawyer refused either to affirm or deny that the suit was for breach of promise to marry. He declared his client had obtained his promise to avoid publicity in the suit.

Mr. Priestley, who is 60 years old, is in Chicago on business and was interviewed at the La Salle hotel. An hour before he had been served with notice of the suit by a deputy sheriff.

"I was astounded to learn Mrs. Gill had filed suit against me," he said. He had known Mrs. Gill, who is 43 years old, for many years, and was on excellent terms with her family, Mr. Priestley continued. The suit savored of an attempt at extortion, he declared.

He is a widower, his wife having died only five months ago, and the father of five children. Mrs. Gill, the mother of a boy, was divorced from her husband several years ago. She lives in Buffalo with her mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Powell, widow of a prominent Buffalo cold storage operator.

Denies Marriage Promise.

"Mrs. Gill is a sweet little lady," Mr. Priestley said. "There must be some terrible mistake here, for I am sure she would not attempt to create a scandal with charges drawn from imagination."

"Did you ever promise to marry her?" he was asked.

"Never! It never entered my mind," he declared with emphasis.

"Our relations, her family's and mine, were always most cordial, but never was there anything personal between myself and Mrs. Gill," he continued. "It is absurd to talk about it. I have attempted to communicate with her lawyer, and have also put in a long distance call for Buffalo in an effort to determine the cause for the suit."

Active in Progressive Party.

In 1912 Mr. Priestley was chairman of the finance committee of the national Progressive party, and actively engaged in the campaign to reinstate Theodore Roosevelt in the presidency.

"Mrs. Gill and her mother were in Chicago only last week," Mr. Priestley said. "They were entirely friendly, though Mrs. Gill seemed in a highly nervous state. They came to attend a musical."

Early in 1911 Mr. Priestley started the Oklahoma movement for Col. Roosevelt for the 1912 nomination. His work was rewarded by a solid delegation from Oklahoma for Roosevelt in the Chicago convention.

In addition to his large interest in Oklahoma oil properties, Mr. Priestley has holdings in several gas companies and is a large stockholder in public utility companies in Bartlesville, Okla. His residence, he said, is in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Gill Away.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 19.—[Special.]—Persons at the Buffalo residence of Mrs. Sarah E. Powell tonight told reporters that Florence Gill, suing George C. Priestley, Chicago, was out of the city at present and they were not at liberty to tell anything of the circumstances, and shut the door in the reporters' faces.

"WHAT about Broadway? What about th' Gr-reat White Way?" asks Mr. Dooley.

"Well," says Tim, "it's a good long sthreet, but not as long as Halsted sthreet be a long sight."

DARROW READY TO LAY FRANKS CARDS ON TABLE

Reveals 'Hidden Hand' Tomorrow.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

What will Darrow do?

This question is the pivot point of legal drama scheduled to start tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Criminal court building when Attorney Clarence Darrow appears before Chief Justice John R. Caverly to argue motions for his 'teen age clients, Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb.

For seven weeks, ever since the dawn of May 31, when their own confessions revealed the two university youths as the kidnapers and murderers of 14-year-old Robert Franks, the nation has been talking about "what they did." The talk centered about a cold chisel and a rented automobile; a battered typewriter and a pair of horn rimmed spectacles.

What Will He Do?

But today the nation is speculating, in eager ignorance, on "what will he do?" The speculation revolves around legal documents and medical libraries; around alienists and definitions of psychosis.

And nobody, it was evident yesterday, has a ghost of an idea just what Clarence Darrow is going to do tomorrow, except Clarence Darrow himself, and Benjamin Bachrach, his associate counsel.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, in personal charge of the prosecution, and his assistants, John Sbarbaro, Milton Smith, Joseph F. Savage and Thomas Marshall, do not know. But they spent the better part of yesterday in special conference at a north side hotel, figuring out possible counter moves.

Alienists in Dark.

The prosecution's four alienists—Dr. William O. Krohn, Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, Dr. Archibald Church, and Dr. Harold D. Singer—do not know.

Neither, it is reported, do the twelve alienists engaged by the defense to tell all about ductless glands, about the endocrine system, about "folie a deux" (insanity of two), and other technical problems.

And, what is almost ironic, Nate and Dickie, the egocentric causes of the whole drama, are said to be in supreme ignorance as to what Mr. Darrow is going to do tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

May Be Real Climax.

The scene, after all its dramatic heralding, may taper off into a calm, flat, anti-climax, a matter of a few routine motions, and nothing more.

Or it may be a climax in a story of climaxes.

It is Mr. Darrow's move.

And here are twelve motions, any one of which he might make, and several of which he is sure to make:

1. Motion to quash the indictments. Will be made merely as a matter of the record, and will not be argued.

2. Motion to demand the state furnish a full list of its witnesses. Another routine motion.

Continuance Plea Seen.

3. Motion for a continuance. Attorney Darrow yesterday gave all but positive indication that he will ask for a continuance of thirty days, beyond the date of Aug. 4, for which the opening of the trial is slated. Granting of such a continuance might bring the case up for reassignment, as Chief Justice Caverly's tenure of office expires Sept. 1, and Judge Jacob Hopkins becomes chief justice.

4. Motion for a special insanity hearing, asking the appointment of a special commission to conduct the investigation.

5. Motion for a change of venue from Judge Caverly to another court of local jurisdiction. There have been hints of this.

No Venue Change Likely.

6. Motion for change of venue to a jurisdiction in another county of the state. It has been pointed out that this would be futile inasmuch as the case has already attracted widespread publicity throughout the country.

7. Motion to exclude certain evidence on the ground that it was illegally obtained. This would doubtless refer specifically to the confession, and to the scene, shortly following, in which the two boys retraced their steps and furnished the corroborating evidence.

Keep Cases Together.

8. Motion for a severance of the trials of the two. There has been every indication to the contrary, as the insanity plea, it is pretty clearly established, is to be based on the supplementary insanity of the two, forming a unit.

9. Motion to take the case out of Illinois jurisdiction and compel the state to prove venue. This would be on the grounds that the Franks boy, still alive, might have been driven in the automobile across the Cook county line into Indiana before his burial in the culvert at 118th street and the Pennsylvania tracks. In such an event the state plans to try the boys for kidnaping in Illinois, an offense punishable by death.

10. Motion for an immediate trial. This would be a surprise.

11. Motion to admit the boys to bail. Not likely.

12. Plead the boys guilty.

May Be "Surprise Motion."

And the thirteenth, and "surprise" motion which, according to rumor, Mr. Darrow has all ready to spring tomorrow.

Following a conference yesterday with the boys at the county jail, the defense attorneys refused to discuss the possible motions, except to intimate that a thirty day continuance might be asked.

Whatever the motions, the undercurrent of Mr. Darrow's defense, he yesterday indicated, will be for a jury who will "understand."

A Jury to "Understand."

Contradicting the state's charges that the defense wants to heap up crime on the youths so the jury will shake their heads and say, "I can't understand them. They must be crazy," Attorney Darrow intimated that he wants it just the other way around.

He wants to make the boys so completely comprehensible that the twelve men in the jury box will nod their heads and say:

"Why, we understand them. They're not entirely responsible. They mustn't hang."

DANCE FANS AT CAMP MEETING MEET REBUFF

Methodist clergymen in session at the Des Plaines camp meeting were "shocked" yesterday at a report that the young people were circulating a petition for a dance.

"A dance!" ejaculated the Rev. F. F. Farmiloe, senior pastor. "We can never permit such a thing. More young people have been damned through dancing than any other single agency of evil. The worldly people would throng our camp meeting and its high spiritual tone would be lowered."

The dance was not held.

"NOES" IN TRIAL BY RADIO STILL KEEP IN LEAD

They Have 4,774 Votes to Yessers' 3,363.

Public opinion expressed itself in a greater flood of letters and votes than ever yesterday over the proposal of THE TRIBUNE to broadcast the trial of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard A. Loeb for the murder of Robert Franks.

The mail for the day added to the 4,203 votes already received, brought the total of votes cast to 8,137.

So far, the "noes" have had the better of it. Of the grand total the summary now stands, 3,363 for, and 4,774 against the plan to send out the proceedings of the trial from station W-G-N.

Three of the afternoon papers, The Chicago Daily News, the Chicago Evening American, and the Chicago Evening Post, were among those to enroll themselves against carrying out the experiment.

Questions Sent to Publishers.

Wishing to refrain from influencing the prospective voter one way or another, but anxious to ascertain the reasons why its afternoon contemporaries should be so forcibly opposed to the broadcasting proposal, THE TRIBUNE sent identical telegrams to the publishers of each of these newspapers.

These were sent to Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Chicago Daily News; William Randolph Hearst, publisher of the Chicago Evening American, and John C. Shaffer, publisher of the Chicago Evening Post, as follows:

"We notice that you are protesting against the suggestion of THE TRIBUNE, offering to broadcast the Leopold-Loeb murder trial.

"Although you assign various high minded reasons why this advance in human efficiency should not be adopted to broadening the public participation in the dispensing of justice, you fail to touch on the following:

'Do you think the broadcasting of the Leopold-Loeb trial will interfere with the sale of the afternoon papers?

'If this trial is not broadcast, do you, as a newspaper publisher, intend to devote many columns of your space to the details of this trial?

'Your replies to these questions will be published when received.

"[Signed] THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE."

"Uninteresting," Says News.

Mr. Lawson, in his Daily News, reinforces the moral motive, expressed in yesterday's editorial, by assuring his readers that the trial will not be very interesting any way.

"In this country," he says, "legal procedure being what it is, such trials are certain to be tedious, exhausting, long drawn out affairs. As for the lessons and morals of an extraordinary criminal case, they are not to be drawn with ears glued to a listening apparatus. They have to be thought out at leisure or pointed out by psychologists, spiritual leaders, sociologists and educators."

Following his satiric editorial in last Friday's American, in which it was suggested that the White Sox park be used as an open air courtroom, Mr. Hearst continued his opposition to the trial by inviting that protests be sent to the radio editor.

He suggests that they be sent on postal cards and does not ask for opinions favorable to THE TRIBUNE'S suggestion.

Fears for Radio Future.

Mr. Shaffer fears for the future of radio. In his editorial in the Post, he agrees with THE TRIBUNE that such a test might be an epochal turning point. He is afraid, however, that it may "also effect the broadcasting business."

He also ignores the promise of THE TRIBUNE that the courtroom proceedings will be censored, if the project is carried through.

THE TRIBUNE is anxiously awaiting the replies of Messrs. Lawson, Heart, and Shaffer.

The opinions of these three afternoon papers, however, were only a small portion of the opinions, for and against, that came to Tribune Square.

Children Basis of Protests.

The question of the children again moved the majority of protests. On the other hand, those in favor of the test declared that they could keep their children from hearing the objectionable over the radio as they kept them from reading it in print or viewing it in the movies.

Many votes approving the idea of broadcasting the trial from W-G-N based their assent to the proposal on the promise of THE TRIBUNE that the proceedings sent out from the courtroom will be censored as carefully as will the accounts appearing in the daily news columns.

Ministers were universally against the plan. Among those who objected were John H. Creighton, Second Presbyterian church, Peoria, Ill.; Rayborn L. Zerby, Christian church, New Carlisle, Ind.; J. Pierce Newell, Glenview M. E. church, Glenview, Ill.; A. H. McKee, First Baptist church, Indiana Harbor, Ind.; William B. Warriner, M. E. church, Indiana Harbor, Ind.; Charles Gorman Richards, Rogers Park Presbyterian church; and Dean Thomas F. Holgate, president of the Chicago Church federation.

Wants Verdict Only.

"The proposal is so astounding that I find it difficult to take it seriously," read Dean Holgate's letter in part. "Already the publicity given to this crime and to the motives leading up to it has been suggestive of others of similar character if we are to trust the printed reports.

"It is not in the public interest that the details of a trial should go before all the people, and especially before the children in ur homes. It is sufficient that the court and the jury hear the evidence and that the public should know the verdict."

Robert Hillard, commercial manager, Illinois Bell Telephone company—This is an action maintained by the people of Illinois versus Leopold and Loeb, perpetrators of the most atrocious and cold-blooded murder in the history of the state. By all that is just and proper the people have a right to hear the trial and pass judgment on how it is conducted, and you are offering them the only way by which they can.

Question of Broadcasting Trial of Loeb-Leopold for Murder Stirs City

Although the vote by coupon and letter on the question of whether W-G-N shall broadcast the trial of Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold Jr., for the murder of Robert Franks, gives a preponderance to the negative, the several Inquiring Reporters, canvassing the city found most of those interviewed in favor of the project.

No attempt to color the answers of those interviewed was made. THE TRIBUNE wants an unbiased referendum. Appended is the third installment of the results:

Asked in the Loop.

Saul Dorfman, 3321 West Congress street, advertising — Yes, the general public will look forward with great interest to find how two boys brought up in an environment of education and culture could reach such heights of perversion.

Merle Minthorn, 137 South La Salle street, clerk—Yes. Only a limited number of people will be permitted in court. By broadcasting, thousands can hear the trial, if they wish.

Asked in Evanston.

Max Schreiner, 624 Davis street, cigar store proprietor—Yes, The family would enjoy listening to the progress of the trial on the radio. It certainly would be very disconcerting to try and squeeze into the crowded courtroom and then probably not be able to hear anything.

Virginia Trueblood, 2615 Railroad avenue, home girl—Yes. What's the use of traveling back and forth to the loop when I can sit in an easy chair at home and listen to the great trial? I think the idea of broadcasting the trial is a smart idea and every one should like it.

W. E. Ashwell, 1333 Wesley avenue, salesman—Yes, I think the trial should be broadcast because it has aroused nation wide interest and the radio will give every one an opportunity to hear the case besides the lucky one who will have a chance to get into the court room. It will give us all a chance to hear the noted attorneys in the case.

Jerry Morrison, 719 Noyes street, home girl—Yes. I'd rather stay at home for my excitement. Listening in on the radio to the trial will be much better than trying to get into a court room and being turned away by the bailiff. The radio in this trial is a wonderful idea.

Izetta Anderson, Greenwood inn, stenographer—No. I think it is anything but desirable to hear a murder trial or any scandal over the radio. A courtroom is the place for murder testimony. Such facts should not be inflicted on the world in general.

Asked in Wilson and Ravenswood Avenues.

Mrs. J. E. Carney, 4550 North Richmond avenue, housewife—Yes, I do think it ought to be broadcast. I have taken a great deal of interest in this case from the beginning and certainly would like to know the disposition of it. Having children of my own, it is only natural that I take an interest due to the fact that a child was the victim.

Mrs. Charles G. Julius, 1642 Estes avenue, housewife—No, absolutely. News like that I don't think should be broadcast. My reason for this is the children and young folks and the effect it would have on them. Frequently the children use the radio and for their young minds a murder trial is entirely out of the question.

Asked in Hyde Park.

Charles Kauffman, 4535 Lake Park avenue, railroad fireman — Certainly that trial should be broadcasted, because most every one has a radio, and then there are the country people. They are very interested. I know, for I have a small town at the end of my run. It will let the public know what is going on behind what will be, to all intents and purposes, closed doors.

Miss Helen Leibenstein, Decatur, Ill., student—I think it is a good thing THE TRIBUNE has thought of letting the public in on the trial through W-G-N. There is such a multitude that wants to listen in. On the other hand, it's a horrible thing to keep in the public mind. I'm almost undecided.

Miss Lois Foster, 5654 Kenwood avenue, university student—I am really neutral in the matter. I'd rather study a question before answering. I've not been reading the current news lately, so I do not know the latest developments in the case. Broadcast, however, if you want to.

Mrs. Evelyn A. Seguin, 4637 Ellis avenue, organizer — Yes. The trial should be broadcast, as it will have a broadening and humanizing effect on the public to hear both sides of this affair. After all, we have read in the newspapers but one side. Let us all see both.

E. M. Blair, Evanston, Salesman—Yes. These boys should be made an example, for the benefit of society. Let every one hear the trial, the testimony and the analysis of these boys and their crime. It would be a lesson to others who may be slipping in the same direction those boys have gone.

Miss Alice Fleming, 1537 Nort Robey street, home girl—I believe a general broadcast of this crime would be a good thing, preventing a repetition of such a horrible occurrence. Listening to this trial would give the foolhardy food for thought.

CITY AGREES TO TAKE $277,000 AS PAGEANT PROFITS

Title to a building worth $200,000 and the sum of $77,000 in cash, representing profits of the 1922 Pageant of Progress, will be formally turned over to the city tomorrow morning, as a result of a decree entered yesterday by Circuit Judge Francis S. Wilson.

Suit was brought, soon after the pageant, by Attorney Samuel Grossman, a taxpayer, against Former Mayor William Hale Thompson and other city officials, charging they had unlawfully diverted to various uses, the profits accruing from the Pageant, which belong to the city.

Grossman was victorious in the Appellate court, which ordered Thompson and the others to account to the city. A settlement was effected by which the city agreed to accept the building and the $77,000. An additionaly $13,500 may be received later by the city.

Seize Reinhardt Pictures to Pay Wife's Alimony

VIENNA, July 19.—Pictures and other art objects, valued at thousands of dollars, have been seized from Max Reinhardt's castle at Salzburg to satisfy his divorced wife's claim for alimony. Herr Reinhardt was ordered to pay $122 monthly to his former wife, the actress, Elsie Heim, which he refused to do. The court then ordered the seizure of his property to complete the sum due Miss Heim.

HAMILTON CLUB TAKES CHILDREN TO HISTORIC SITES

Members of the Hamilton club yesterday took some 400 children from the West Park district and members of the Western Union band on the first of the club's "Little Jonrneys" to historical spots about the town.

The Marquette cross was the first place visited. It stands at Robey street and the south branch of the Chicago river, in memory of the Marquette expedition. From there the children rode to historic Cahokia court house on the island in Jackson park. The monument marking the site of the Fort Dearborn massacre at 18th street and the lake was the last spot visited.

The trip was in charge of Alexander Fyfe, president of the club.

STRONG MEN SOB AS 75,000 GAL. OF BEER HITS SEWER

Wet Wealth of Druggan Goes Down Spout.

Beer drinkers wept real tears yesterday as 75,000 gallons of rich and creamy amber brew belonging to Terry Druggan, baron of the beer runners, was taken from the vats of the Standard brewery, 1223 South Campbell avenue, and ruthlessly poured into the sewers.

It was "Terry's best," going to pot on the orders of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. And sightseers groaned audibly as one after another of twenty-one big vats were opened to let their frothy streams run into the yawning mouth of the sewer.

But there was no sympathy for them. Deputy United States Marshals John J. Oros and John Emery, together with prohibition agents, went stolidly on with the nefarious work, although it was reported that grief was reaching a breaking point in Cicero as the destruction went on.

B. J. Bowman, president of the Standard Beverage corporation, also stood sadly watching the steady flow of wet wealth. He led the deputies down into the vat room for their sorry task with courtesy but grief.

Terry Runs Over Killer—Almost.

And as the amber flow rippled merrily down into the filth the story of how Wally Quinlan's gun made Terry chief of the Valley gang, and of how Wally came back to find Terry a landed squire, was being told.

Wally Quinlan, recently released from Joliet, where he had gone for "pouring a few slugs" into "Paddy the Bear" Ryan, who, until his demise, was the leader of the Valley gang, was out on the streets trying to make an honest dollar.

A big Cadillac swished close to him. It was a narrow escape. A little more and Wally's freedom wouldn't have meant much to him.

As he regained his poise, Wally heard a raucous laugh from within the handsome car. Then a voice—a laughing voice—reached his humble ears.

Some "Bicycle"—Terry's!

"Well, Bum," said the voice, "take a look. I guess Terry's riding on a bicycle these days. Shade your eyes and give this little vehicle the once over. SOME bicycle!"

Mr. Terrence Druggan, for it was no other, then uttered a crisp command to his chauffeur. "To the country estate!" he said.

The incident was full of underworld drama. When "Paddy the Bear" was killed, Druggan succeeded him as leader of the Valley gang, and placed himself in a position to make more than $1,000,000 out of beer—while Wally was "cooling off in stir."

When Mr. Druggan said "country estate" to the chauffeur he meant just that, for the Lake Zurich estate which he purchased last November from Charles Weeghman has thrived under the supervision of the beer baron and former gangster until it is one of the most beautiful of the scores of millionaires' farms in the district north of Chicago.

The huge barns are spotless white. The stock is the fattest in the land. The caretaker's cottage would have awed this parvenu lord of the manor with its fineness before the beer racket got so good. Mammoth shade trees abound. There is acre after acre of growing grain and rolling pasture.

Squire Doing Well, Thank You.

A luxurious country house dominates the estate. Here Squire Druggan has taken the time from his brewery interests to direct the operations of the farm. The estate shows the genius of a gunman who was able to run a shoestring into a million with the aid of a Smith & Wesson, the Volstead act, and not too much conscience.

When Federal Judge Wilkerson decided on July 11 that Druggan's immunity had gone far enough and sentenced him to a year in jail for contempt of court, Druggan was unseemingly wroth. And there were those who said it was all because the squire was anxious about the health of a prize litter of pigs that needed his attention.

Just a Mere $150,000.

The estate was snapped up by Druggan at a bargain—$150,000—at a time when Mr. Weeghman was anxious to liquidate his property. He holds it now at twice that figure, and isn't anxious to sell at any price.

All of his $1,100,000 worth of breweries are now under injunction, but it is said his seventy high speed trucks are still in good running order. They may be placed in use on the farm—and they may NOT.

Mr. Druggan may be thrown into the "boob" (his quaint name for the jail) shortly after Sept. 1. In the meantime, if you happen to be out Barrington way, you might drop in on the squire. But try to make it some afternoon when Mr. Wally Quinlan isn't there.

Foot Troubles

affect the body in many different ways. The feet swell, burn, ache; sharp pains under heels, ball of foot sore and feels as if walking on marbles; excessive perspiration with offensive odor, broken down arches, weak ankles, varicose veins, legs cramp, knees stiffen, pains in hips, small of back, shoulders and neck, poor circulation, extreme nervousness, with many kinds of skin disease. Do not be discouraged, regardless of whom you have consulted or what you have tried. Let Dr. Pinkston prove to you the cause and cure of all foot troubles.

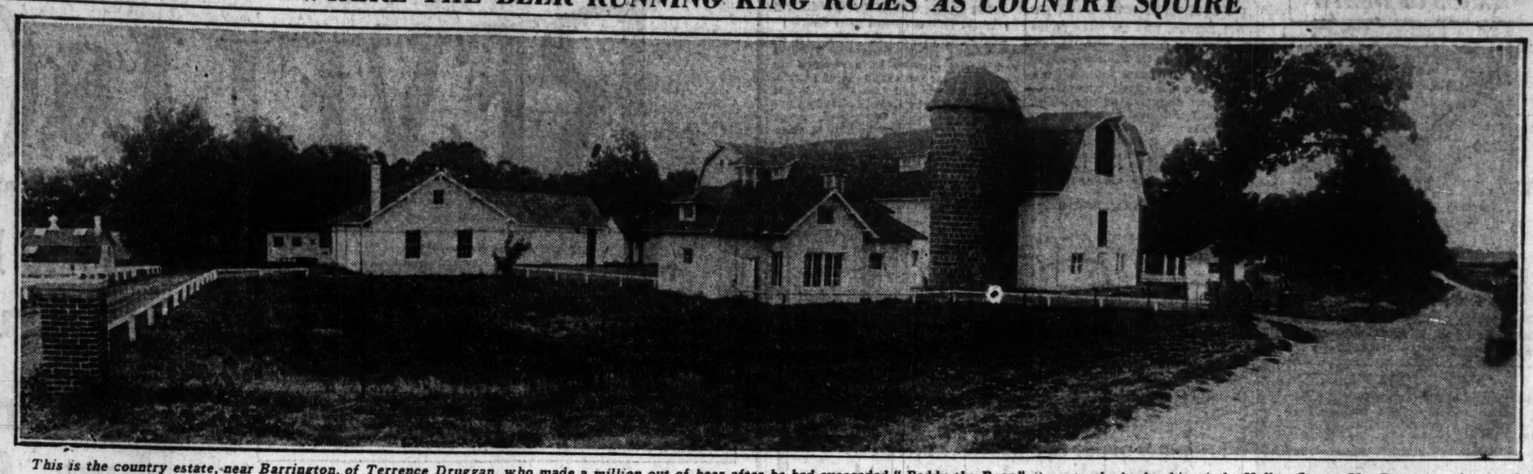
WHERE THE BEER RUNNING KING RULES AS COUNTRY SQUIRE



This is the country estate, near Barrington, of Terrence Druggan, who made a million out of beer after he had succeeded "Paddy the Bear" Ryan to the leadership of the Valley Gang. Mr. Druggan, who, by the way, is now under sentence to a year in jail, purchased the $150,000 estate from Charles Weeghman. It has thrived under the beer baron's supervision and is one of the most beautiful farms of the district north of Chicago.

DRY CHIEF PINS WHITE RIBBON ON CHICAGO COPS

Work a Tip for Gen. Butler, Says Haynes.

With the issuance of a statement lauding the Chicago police for their prohibition enforcement work and denying that changes were contemplated in any of the enforcement staffs of the middle west, Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes closed a one day conference with several midwestern aides here yesterday.

The commissioner stated that in no city is the federal force receiving more splendid coöperation from the police department than in Chicago. The eight hour shift patrol of the Chicago breweries by the police department which has resulted so satisfactorily here has just been instituted by Gen. Butler in Philadelphia.

Sets High Standard.

Commissioner Haynes said that the record of progress made here during the past year has set a high standard for all large cities of America and shows conclusively what can be done when there is the coördination of local and federal activities as contemplated under the concurrent power of the second section of the eighteenth amendment."

Mr. Haynes refused to comment on the report that Bert Morgan, director of prohibition enforcement in Indiana, was to be removed or be transferred to make way for Frank Rowley, Angola, Ind.

Owen to Hold Job.

He stated positively, however, that Percy Owen, who holds the same position in Illinois, is not about to retire, adding that "Director Owen was performing the important duties of director to the entire satisfaction of Washington."

Mr. Haynes left tonight for Winona Lake, Ind., where he is to address the conference of anti-alcohol leagues in session there.

VEGETABLES RUM CACHE

Chief Enforcement Officer Charles W. Vursell's rum sleuths yesterday continued to make life miserable for Chicago's weary and wary bootleggers.

In one place, the Robey Inn, a gay "honkey-tonk" at 809 North Robey street, the agents even went so far as to rip open bags of potatoes and beans and upset barrels of innocent looking flour.

And what do you suppose they found? You're right! The makings of a perfect Saturday night. In addition there were eight barrels of real beer hidden in the furnace and under a pile of coal.

Another resort where agents arrived unannounced was the Wooded Inn at 4910 Lincoln avenue. They arrested the proprietor and some of the attachés.

All Up to Date Gas Fixings.

Another raid precipitated pointed criticism of the Peoples Gas, Light and Coke company for alleged willingness in supplying equipment to be used in connection with stills.

When the agents visited moonshine factories at 823 and 843 South Winchester avenue they found both plants recently had been furnished with giant gas meters of the kind designed for use in big factories only.

In addition to seizing three sixty gallon stills in full operation the agents brought in 300 barrels of mash and a large quantity of alcohol.

Get $10,000 White Horse.

One of the richest hauls of the day was the seizure in transit of $10,000 worth of white horse Scotch. The stuff was tested and found to be the real McCoy. Agents Lyons and Peebles, who confiscated the liquor, obtained warrants for the consignor and consignee, whose names were withheld pending arrests.

CONDEMNED TO GALLOWS, TRIES TO SAVE HIS PAL

Walter Krauser, condemned to die for the murder of Policeman Ralph Souders, did some talking at the county jail yesterday in the hope that his confession might save the life of 19 year old Bernard Grant.

Last week the Supreme court turned down young Grant's appeal and ordered that he be hanged on Oct. 17 for his part in the policeman's murder. Krauser's case is now before the same tribunal.

Grant went to trial first before Judge Oscar Hebel, and Krauser took the stand to testify that the young school boy was his companion on the night of the shooting.

But now Krauser remembers the affair in a different light. Repudiating his former testimony, he gave out an eight page confession yesterday in which he said that Grant had "absolutely nothing to do with the killing."

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—William Gibbs McAdoo, accompanied by his wife, arrived at the Hotel Ritz this evening to join their son, daughter, and daughter-in-law.

"I pledged my support to Mr. Davis before I left New York," he said when questioned on the party situation. "It is too early to say just what part I shall take in the campaign, and it is not for me to discuss Mr. Davis' qualifications or chances. Naturally, he has all my best wishes."

MILLIONAIRE'S DAUGHTER HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Florence Thompson and 3 Students Injured.

The week-end party plans of Miss Florence Thompson, 17 year old daughter of John R. Thompson, millionaire restaurateur, were upset yesterday with the wrecking of an automobile in which she and three college students were riding along the Green Bay road in Lake Forest.

When within a short distance of the Thompson estate the machine struck a rut, veered sharply to one side, crashed into a stone fence and overturned. Miss Thompson and her three guests—Miss Katherine Peyton, Harry Thomas and Paul Berry—were caught under the wreckage.

Men Extricate Girls.

The men extricated themselves and then rescued the two girls. A passing chauffeur took them to the Thompson home, and Dr. J. A. Capps, the family physician, who was playing at the Great Elm Golf club, was hurriedly summoned. He reported that the injuries were not serious.

Thomas is a half back on the University of Chicago football team. He is a brother of John Thomas, famous Maroon full back. Berry is an ex-president of the Three Quarters club, the only freshman honorary society on the Midway. With Miss Peyton they were being taken from the station to the Thompson home when the accident occurred.

HARRY THOMAS.

Mrs. Katherine Mach, 2015 Fullerton avenue, was identified by her husband last night as physicians of St. Luke's hospital were fighting to save her life. She had been struck by a taxicab driven by John Ray of 320 North State street. Ray took her to the hospital and then left without giving his name. A nurse noted the license number of his automobile, however, and he was later taken into custody.

Two colored men and two colored women fled after their machine crashed into another car at Chicago avenue and State street, injuring Mrs. M. H. Austin of 3722 Pine Grove avenue and Mrs. R. S. Barney of 4526 North Ashland avenue. A pistol and a bottle of gin were found in the abandoned automobile. Police are checking up to learn if the car was stolen.

Order Driver Held.

A coroner's jury investigating the death of James Sheehan, who died Friday from injuries received last Sunday, when he was thrown from an automobile which collided with a 26th street car, yesterday recommended that George Blanchard of 1847 West Jackson boulevard be held to the grand jury on a manslaughter charge. Blanchard, who was driving the machine, fled after the accident.

HANDS OF DEATH

The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

Man Arrested Here on Bogus Check Charge

Robert Benson, who gave the police a false Sheridan road address, was arrested yesterday as he was leaving the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank after cashing a $60 check. Operatives of the Burns detective agency claim that Benson has opened numerous savings accounts and deposited bogus checks drawn on out of town banks. Then, without giving these checks time to clear, he has withdrawn most of the money credited to his name, the detectives charge.

Turks and Greeks Agree on Exchange of Citizens

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 19.—After long negotiations the Turkish and Greek experts have reached an agreement on the exchange of populations in Thrace and Asia Minor. While practically all the Greeks already have left the Turkish territories, many Turks have remained behind in western Thrace. They will now be able to take up the former Greeks' farms in the Pontus region and other parts of Turkey in Asia, which were formerly occupied by Greeks.

Many Fishermen Die as Gales Sweep Over Europe

PARIS, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The heat wave, which was so distressing to the Olympic contestants, was broken up today by a series of violent gales which wrought havoc throughout France and Belgium. Twenty fishing smacks are missing from Ostend, and it is feared all are lost. Twenty-six bodies have already been washed up on the beach. Ten more boats are missing from Portsmouth, and fifteen persons are reported drowned.

BUYING WITH CONFIDENCE

Confidence of the public is the greatest thing a man or firm can have. This confidence is built up by years of square dealing, and by pursuing the same straight policy through periods of good business as in periods of depression.

If a man builds so that he holds the confidence of the public, he has an asset that may not show on his ledger, but one that will survive all changes of conditions and carry him safely through any crisis.

LONDON, July 19.—The arrival of Secretary of State Hughes at the head of 500 American lawyers on the Bergenaria today aroused extraordinary interest among the delegates to the London conference on the Dawes report. All express the greatest optimism on his presence in England during the most critical stages.

Mr. Hughes told THE TRIBUNE that he is here in an entirely unofficial capacity and did not intend to attend any of the meetings of the international conference, although, of course, he is deeply interested in its progress.

"We are all anxious to see the Dawes report put into operation," he said. "We regard it as an essential step toward European rehabilitation."

Premiers to Meet Hughes.

Mr. Hughes' arrival has caused a change in the week-end plans of the delegates. Instead of entertaining his colleagues at Chequers, Prime Minister MacDonald will come to town tomorrow evening to dine at Crewe house with Ambassador Frank B. Kellogg and meet Mr. Hughes.

Premier Herriot will spend Sunday with Lord Parmoor, having at the last moment determined not to go to Chequers for fear of the political effect in France. It is likely that he will also be at Mr. Kellogg's dinner tomorrow night.

The big five—Ambassador Kellogg, Prime Minister MacDonald, Premiers Herriot and Theunis, and Signor di Stefani—will meet again on Monday morning in Downing street. This afternoon most of the delegates and experts attended a garden party at Wembley exhibition.

Take Up German Invitation.

The question of inviting Germany to attend the conference is to be raised Monday. The British and Americans are anxious to have them invited immediately as equal members of the conference, while the French want to adjourn after an allied agreement is reached, after which Germany would be called as an inferior to another conference in Brussels.

If the French view prevails, THE TRIBUNE learns, the Germans will send an inferior official, who will be empowered only to sign the documents presented to him, but if the British view is accepted Foreign Minister Stresemann plans to come himself.

Committees Nos. 1 and 3 concluded their work this afternoon. Committee No. 2 is still at work late this afternoon, and it was stated it would probably sit until it had finished in order to allow a plenary session of the conference on Monday.

Loan to Be First Mortgage.

Committee No. 1 arrived at a unanimous report on the basis cabled to THE TRIBUNE last night. It is agreed that the allies, in the event of a German default, will refuse to take sanctions which by interfering with German economy might impair the interests of lenders and service of the proposed $200,000,000 loan to Germany. They also undertake that such sanctions, if any are taken, will conform to the recommendations of the Dawes report, and undertake that any money recovered by such sanctions be devoted to the service of the loan, which is further secured on such proceeds.

The service of the loan is regarded as a first mortgage on the resources of Germany, which may fall into the hands of the allies. On a demand by the French, a clause was added reserving all rights at present enjoyed by the signatory powers.

An American is to be appointed a member of the reparations commission by the commission if it can reach an unanimous agreement, otherwise by the president of The Hague tribunal. The trustees under the Dawes report and an agent for transfers, both Americans, are also to be consulted on the question of default by Germany but without the right to make decisive votes.

At Odds on Ruhr Evacuation.

Committee number two, which has to devise a plan for the evacuation of the Ruhr and the restoration of German fiscal and economic unity, sat all day. A divergence of opinion between the British and the French developed on every single point, both economic and military. Therefore, a sub-committee of committee number two has been appointed to work all day Sunday to try to find grounds for an agreement.

The situation has been seriously complicated by the intervention of German financial experts who have appeared in London. Among them is Dr. Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, and Herren Bergman and Wassermann, financial experts. These men have seen the British delegates, especially Sir Robert Kindersley.

What Germany Demands.

The Germans have told the British that Germany will not accept the decisions of the conference to apply the Dawes report unless the following irrevocable conditions are accepted:

ONE. No French or Belgian employe to remain on the German railways, and all administrative powers to be concentrated in German hands.

TWO. The military evacuation of the Ruhr to take place on specified and determined dates.

THREE. Cologne to be evacuated in January (this means that France must agree on a date for the evacuation of the Rhineland to be calculated from the day of the inauguration of the Versailles treaty. It will be remembered that former Premier Poincare, in view of the repeated German defaults, always refused to agree to this point of view).

GERMANY WILL BALK

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 19.—The German government, it was learned from an official source today, cannot accept the French, British and American compromises which recognize as fundamental the right of the allies to take territorial sanctions in the future for Germany's failure to fulfill the Dawes reparations plan.

As all confidential public information from London indicates the acceptance by the conference there of the sanctions article, consternation entered the German camp, the shock echoing through Wilhelmstrasse. Until tonight Germany's policy concerned itself chiefly with obtaining the evacuation of the Ruhr as fundamental to the reichstag's acceptance of the Dawes plan. From now on, it is predicted, Germany will concentrate on demanding that the allies drop all territorial sanctions.

The nationalists and other opponents of the government parties are jubilant over reports that the conference demands territorial sanctions for the future. The nationalists believe that puts a lever in their hands to upset the government. Their plan is to rally all forces opposed to the Reichstag's acceptance of the Dawes plan.

HIGHER COURT SNAPS LOCK ON CERVENKA BEER

Knocks Out 2d Attack on Constitutionality.

Forceful attacks upon the constitutionality of the Eighteenth amendment were disregarded yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals when three judges, sitting en banc, affirmed Federal Judge Wilkerson's decrees granting permanent closing injunctions against the Pilsen Products brewery, owned by City Treasurer John Cervenka, and the Peter Hand brewery.

Aside from throwing out the new attack on the dry amendment the decision will bring about the immediate padlocking of the two largest breweries in Chicago and the destruction of 320,000 gallons of beer now in vats and barrels at the Peter Hand establishment.

Claims of Defense.

Attorney Benjamin Epstein and Emil Wetten had argued before Judges Page, Evans, and Fitzhenry that their clients had the right to operate under a permanent injunction under bond, that they had the right of jury trial before issuance of a court decree ordering destruction of their beer or other properties, and that they could not be enjoined under the abatement of a nuisance clause of the Volstead act after their plants had been seized and placed in the custody of the United States marshal under search warrants.

The Court of Appeals ruled against all of the contentions and sets a precedent on issues which have complicated most of the brewery decisions of the federal courts here and in most of the other districts in which "cheating" breweries were located.

Regarding the constitution, Attorney Wetten argued that all amendments subsequent to the fourteenth were illegal because the fourteenth nullified the fifth, and the fifteenth to the nineteenth were based on the fifth. This argument didn't appeal to Judge Page, who wrote the decision for the three jurists.

Nuisance Charge Denied.

The Peter Hand brewery was seized May 23, 1923, by Marshal Robert R. Levy and was guarded by deputies who allowed the manufacture of "Near-O." On June 3, 1923, the government filed a petition for a permanent injunction, claiming the brewery was a nuisance and should be abated. Taking into consideration the chronology of the two acts, attorneys argued that the brewery couldn't have been committing a nuisance while authorized deputies were present to see what was going on.

The Court of Appeals held that such a version, if sustained, would greatly hamper the government in gaining evidence upon which to base petitions for injunctions.

The injunction suit against the Pilsen company was begun after prohibition agents had made four seizures of truckloads of beer of more than legal alcoholic content. On one of the raids agents snared Barney Grogan, picturesque west side politician and former saloonkeeper. Mr. Grogan was present at the brewery in the middle of the night, but explained he was there on a political mission that had nothing to do with the beer traffic.

Must Face Trial.

Later Grogan was indicted, with Treasurer Cervenka and other officials of the brewery. The criminal charges are apart from the litigation passed upon by the Court of Appeals, and will be tried in the September term of court, according to Capt. William F. Waugh, the government's expert on liquor prosecutions. Criminal action will be taken against the Peter Hand concern at about the same time, Capt. Waugh said.

Attorney Epstein announced the appeals would be taken to the United States Supreme court. He said he would file a petition for a rehearing some time this week.

WORLD MUST BACK PLAN, DAWES TELLS FELLOW EXPERTS

LONDON, July 19.—[By Associated Press.]—"Our work must be and will be approved by the peoples of the world because always personal considerations were unknown in our effort to point out the practical, economic and common sense basis of future cooperation between the allies and Gedrmany," Charles G. Dawes declared in a message to his fellow members of the Dawes experts' committee, made public in part today by Owen D. Young.

The message was in reply to one of felicitation sent to the vice presidential nominee of the Republican party by his fellow members of the committee which drew up the Dawes report.

"It is my prayer and expectation," Gen. Dawes continued, "that the important conference now in session in London will demonstrate that the nations are facing away from the chaos left by the war and from hatred with a sincere determination to found an enduring and Christian peace upon common good faith."

ROGERS RELENTS; TO ASK SALM TO JOIN MILLICENT

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Col. Henry H. Rogers, father of Millicent, bride of Count Salm van Hoogstraeten, today was reported to have experienced a change of sentiment toward the former movie-extra count from whom he withdrew the purse strings to the Rogers millions.

Society friends of the countess at Southampton, L. I., understood that the bride was so grieved by separation from Count Salm that her father finally had decided to ask the count to return to America.

Consequently society circles are buzzing at Southampton concerning the romance, though confirmation of the fact that Col. Rogers had buried the hatchet could not be obtained.

Another report has it that the countess recovered her missing diamond solitaire, the one she said she lost July 4 at a golf club. It is not known whether that was the ring Count Salm had offered to have reset for her at the time of their engagement.

FALLS TWO STORIES.

Roberta Peterson, 6, was possibly fatally injured this afternoon when she fell from the second story porch at her home, 2937 West Van Buren street.

Hundreds of private invitations had to be refused because of the full program. Thirty West End clubs, golf and literary, have made the visitors honorary members.

The American delegation, which will hold a meeting for the first time overseas, includes supreme judges. Each state is represented by at least one judge.

CHICAGO GIRL LOSES IN QUEER MARITAL TANGLE

Wedding to Count Never Was, Court Rules.

[Copyright: 1924: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 19.—The Paris courts today judged a case extraordinary in marriage Odysseys of a Frenchman and a young American girl, when it declared to be non-existent the union contracted under romantic circumstances between Count Jacques, de Lesdain and Miss Mabel Bailey, daughter of Mrs. J. Somerville Bailey, formerly prominent in Chicago.

Count de Lesdain, now attached to the French consulate in Shanghai, was traveling in Mongolia in 1904 when he met the young American girl, then aged 19. The couple contracted "marriage" in July of the same year, going through the ceremony before two Belgian missionaries at Chambanor, Mongolia. The bride later had the marriage entered on the registers of the French consulate at Shanghai and finally at Dunkirk, where the count was domiciled.

Wants Marriage Annulled.

Count de Lesdain, who described his marriage in a book about his travels in Asia, asked the French courts to declare the marraige nul because it was contracted clandestinely without the parents' knowledge while the bride was a minor.

The court declared the marriage could not be annulled as it had never legally existed, having been performed by two individuals holding no power to perform a ceremony of this kind.

Formerly Lived in Chicago.

The "Countess" de Lesdain visited her sister, Miss Josephine Bailey, then living at 3428 Indiana avenue, in Chicago in 1906. She brought with her at that time her 5 months old daughter, Ora Mary Pauline Sommerville de Lesdain, and a Hindoo girl nurse—a young Indian widow whom she and the count had rescued from a native tribe.

Earlier, as a girl, the "countess" had lived with her mother and sister at 659 Park avenue, when that old number was still in a fashionable locality. From this home as Mabel Bailey the "countess," then only 16 years old, married the representative of a New York and Chicago department store. Her husband became the China and Japan silk buyer for his concern and the young wife accompanied him into the Orient.

At Singapore the silk buyer and his wife became acquainted with Count de Lesdain, owner of tea plantations and mines. About the same time the silk buyer after a brief illness died and his young widow, whom he had left a considerable fortune, was "married" to the count about a year later.

FIND DEAD CITY

Russian archaeologists have uncovered a large part of the dead city of Olyva, located near Odessa. It was founded by the ancient Greeks some time before 500 B. C. Articles found in tombs included a vanity case and a rouge stick, similar to those used by the women of 1924 A. D.

RAINS ADDED TO OLD SOL'S RAYS HASTEN CROPS

Sioux City, Ia., July 19.—[Special.]—Great advancement has been made by the corn crop in northwest Iowa, northern Nebraska, South Dakota and southwest Minnesota during the week just ending, according to the weekly reports had by the Sioux City Tribune this morning.

Scattered showers to heavy local rains have given desired moisture, while higher temperatures in the daytime have given growing impetus, though the nights have been unseasonably cool. However, the crop is in excellent condition, except on the low-lands, flooded early in the season, and will average not more than ten days or two weeks more than usual.

The small grain harvest has started and yields, especially of early oats and winter wheat, are unusually good, with grain of a high quality. Live stock of all kinds is in best condition.

Much fatted stock continues to be thrown on the market because of the scarcity and high price of corn.

Despondent Over Health, Ends Life with Shotgun

Hammond, Ind., July 19.—[Special.]—Alex M. Boyd, 40, last night fatally wounded himself with a shotgun at his home in Merrillville. He died at a Gary hospital. Boyd, who was prominent in Republican politics in this district, had been told by a doctor that he had an incurable heart ailment. He left the supper table and, pointing a shotgun at his face, pulled the trigger.

"Interest Money" Suits Against Small Put Off

Springfield, Ill., July 18.—After a brief session today, given over to technical evidence, master in chancery hearings in the state "interest money" civil suits against Gov. Small were adjourned indefinitely. Attorneys indicated that the charings would probably be resumed late next week.

RICH WIFE SHOULD PAY ALIMONY, IS RULING OF DAVID

Another 'Woman's Right,' Decides Court.

Woman's entry into an era of social and economic independence has brought her to the point, where if she is wealthier than her husband, she may be required to pay him alimony. Superior Judge Joseph B. David yesterday uttered this bit of legal philosophy when he offered to assess alimony against a wealthy woman.

The offer was made to William C. Meckling, 3820 Gladys avenue, a bank official, who declared his wife had deserted him to accept the greater luxuries tendered her by her rich father.

Father Hotel Owner Here.

The wife, Mrs. Nellie V. Meckling, now lives in New York with her father, S. E. Allison, said by Meckling's attorney, Covey F. Grider, to be controlling head of the Great Northern hotel in Chicago.

Their marriage in 1904 was followed, Meckling said, by fifteen years of happy wedded life. Then Mrs. Meckling's father became extremely wealthy and her husband's offer of a comfortable existence was eclipsed by the luxuries of life in her father's household, Meckling told Judge David.

The judge asked him whether, because of his wife's desertion and her independent status, he did not wish to receive alimony.

Another "Woman's Right."

"In this day and age," Judge David said, "when women claim the rights of men, to vote, to smoke, and to enter business, they should also be required to take upon themselves a responsibility commensurate with man's.

"There is no reason in law to deny alimony to the husband of a more prosperous wife, provided, of course, the wife has given cause for divorce."

Meckling, the first to be confronted with the possibilities of receiving alimony, smiled and shook his head.

"I have no desire for alimony, and would have none even though my earnings were insufficient, which they are not," he said.

"I cannot force it upon you," Judge David responded. "But if you wish it I will grant you a proper sum of alimony. Men, who after years of supporting their wives, are deserted because of the wife's new found wealth, are entitled, in no less sense than are women, to a share in the wife's fortune."

Mrs. Meckling was not in court, but was represented by Attorney Edmond Cummings.

YOUNG COUPLE FIND DEATH AT RAINBOW'S END

No Money, No Work, They Kill Selves.

Three months ago Louis Lockard, 30 years old, and his wife, Grace, 20, came to Chicago from a small Indiana town. The couple rented a tiny three room apartment in the rear of 29 East 110th place and Lockard started out hopefully to search for a job.

Day after day the hunt for employment went on. But though his tramps took him all over the great Calumet steel district and even as far as the loop, Lockard's efforts were futile. Everywhere there seemed to be a surplus of help. And each night he returned to the little apartment more and more tired and discouraged. His young wife often, with a worried look in her eyes, confided to the neighbor women that their money was getting low.

Yesterday morning Mrs. H. Gremway, who lives in the front of the building, felt there was an ominous stillness about the Lockard flat. The shades were drew. There were no signs of life.

Discover the Tragedy.

Uneasy, Mrs. Gremway tried the front door. It was locked and her fears were multiplied when a faint odor of escaping gas came through the keyhole. She called the Kensington police.

Detective Sergeants Crotty and Golden stumbled upon the body of Lockard lying upon the bedroom floor. On the bed lay Mrs. Lockard, also dead, her eyes closed as if in sleep. They were clad only in their night clothes. All the jets of the kitchen range were wide open.

One woman told of learning that Lockard made a recent unsuccessful attempt to kill himself. The detectives, listening to all the stories of the neighbors, formed the theory that the couple may have come to an agreement to "end it all." They believe that the husband, after turning on the gas, staggered weakly in the direction of the bedroom where his wife had lain down, resigned to die. No notes or messages were found.

DANGER OF SMALLPOX GROWS; 35 STATES REPORT DISEASE

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Apprehension over the growing number of smallpox cases throughout the country was expressed today by Surgeon General Cumming of the public health service, who said the presence of the disease in thirty-five states threatened serious consequences unless state health officers exercise the greatest vigilance in vaccination and re-vaccination.

Dr. Cumming is particularly alarmed that the disease has spread so widely in the spring and summer months. If it is not checked, he fears a more serious situation next winter, during the season when it usually is most prevalent.

Warnings have been sent to all state health officers, to the American Railway association, and to the American Automobile association urging that the greatest care be exercised to prevent a spread of the disease.

"There is grave danger of outbreaks all over the country," Dr. Cumming said today, "unless people are vaccinated."

COLD SLICED TURKEY

with cranberry sauce and dressing —only 50c at the North American

A generous portion of cold sliced Turkey, with cranberry sauce and dressing, is only one of our many popular summer items. The cost is only 50 cents—just about half what restaurants and hotels usually charge for a similar portion of Turkey—yet the quality cannot be excelled.

The North American's volume of business—which continues to break records all the year 'round—actually increases during the hot summer months when most dining places close entirely on Sundays and Holidays, and immediately after the dinner hour rush on week days. Consequently the North American has always found it necessary to stay open from 7 A. M. until Midnight, every day in the year.

One reason for this unusual state of affairs, aside from the finest quality of food and the low prices, is that this dining place is comfortably cooled, with an entire change of pure, dry, cool air every three minutes.

A few of our other specialties:

Pork Tenderloin: A big portion deliciously breaded 40c

Lake Superior Whitefish: A portion, enough for two 60c

Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

And for Breakfast:

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

For motor trip lunches or parties at home A whole Roasted Turkey $4.75

Take one of our cold roasted turkeys on your motor trips. We pack them in special containers for convenient carrying. The price for a turkey big enough for 6 or 8 people is only $4.75—including plenty of delicious stuffing and cranberry sauce. Or half a cold turkey for $2.50. ENVOY'S SLAYING BY PERSIAN MOB STARTS U. S. QUIZ

Murder Result of Anti-Alien Outburst.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Instructions were received by the Persian legation from its government tonight to express to the Washington government its deep regret over the killing of Vice Consul Robert Imbrie and to state that the Persian government will do "all in its power to fulfill its duties in this case."

The Persian government, it was added, is seeking "the guilty persons in the case and will take all possible steps to secure their punishment."

Mob Kills Soldier.

At the same time, the cable dispatch to the legation was said to indicate that the attack on Imbrie and his companion, Melin Seymour, was provoked by "their own carelessness in going to a sacred place and persisting in taking pictures."

The police and soldiers which went to their assistance, it was added, were attacked by the mob, three policemen being mortally wounded and a soldier dying a few hours later of injuries received.

The instructions were received at the legation while American government officials were awaiting further advices from Joseph S. Kornfeld, its minister at Teheran, concerning the case.

A thorough investigation was being made, it was stated, but as yet there was no disposition on the part of the Washington government to attempt to fix responsibility for the murder either on the Persian government or Teheran authorities.

Minister Sends Report.

First advices on the killing from Minister Kornfeld at Teheran were received today at the state department, but were regarded as too meager to form the basis of any decision as to responsibility for the death of Mr. Imbrie.

Summarizing these advices in a statement the department said:

"The minister reports that some days throughout the city there had been denouncements of Bahais, a religious sect, and many religious demonstrations. It appears that at 11 a. m. the vice consul, accompanied by Seymour, a prisoner in the consulate, stopped their carriage in front of one of these demonstrations and it was alleged that the vice consul had taken pictures.

"The mob rushed upon him crying out that he was a Bahai, and attacked them savagely."

Reference by Minister Kornfeld to Melin Seymour as a "prisoner in the consulate" was regarded by officials as presenting no unusual feature as he is understood to have been tried by the United States consular court in Persia for alleged mistreatment of native workmen engaged in oil development projects in which he was interested.

TEHERAN, Persia, July 19.—More than 100 arrests in connection with the murder of Maj. Robert Imbrie, United States vice consul, here by a mob of fanatical Persians Friday have been made.

Maj. Imbrie's body was transferred today from the police hospital with funeral military music and a very large guard to the American church for temporary burial. The body will be taken to America by Mrs. Imbrie some time later, when the Mesopotamian desert is cooler.

Surprise that Robert Imbrie, United States vice consul, killed by a fanatical mob in Teheran, Persia, did not know better than to attempt to photograph a religious ceremony in a Moslem country was expressed last night by Miss Dorothy Baugh, 819 Eastwood avenue. Miss Baugh is an intimate friend of Mrs. Imbrie.

DOROTHY BAUGH.

She lived with Mrs. Imrbie, then Miss Katharine Gillespie, during 1921 in Angora, Turkey, where both were engaged in near east relief work. It was at this time that the latter met and became engaged to Imbrie, then an observer in the state department.

Mrs. Imbrie spent a month in 1922 in Chicago with Miss Baugh. They have corresponded constantly ever since.

Fanatics on Religion.

"I cannot understand how Robert Imbrie, who knew the orient, would attempt to interfere with a Mohammedan religious ceremony," said Miss Baugh, "for he must have known the seriousness, the fanaticism, of the native's regard for his religious rites.

"Katherine and I were together in Angora during 1921. She knew some Persian dialects and was well acquainted with oriental customs, and knew the oriental mind. So did Mr. Imbrie. I know he knew of the savage disposition of the Moslem when his religious customs are touched by foreigners.

"I do not know of any sect proclaiming street miracles except the Whirling Dervishes. In Constantinople they used to proclaim miracles at their street meetings. It would be dangerous for any foreigner at a meeting, when the mob reached the frenzy such ceremonies always arouse. And if that foreigner made any false move, almost anything might happen."

ENGINE CO. 51'S GUARDIAN CHRIS DOLLED IN GOLD

Resplendent in a new coat of golf leaf, the statue of Christopher Columbus, symbol of good luck for engine company 51, once again came into its own in the vicinity of 63d street and Wentworth avenue yesterday.

Old "Chris" is no ordinary statue. "Chris" has a history, a story that Joe Kennyon, retired chief of the old Third battalion, never grows tired of telling.

"Chris" was one of the figures of interest at the World's Fair. At the time of the fire a number of Kennyon's men were killed in the cold storage building.

Shortly after the fire W. H. Mullins gave the statue to Kennyon in memory of his men who were killed. Ever since old "Chris" has stood beside the entrance of engine company 51. Italians in the neighborhood touch their hats when passing this statue of their countrymen.

So runs the story the firemen tell. "Chris" is to them their symbol of good luck. They refused to sell him, and now they have given him a new coat of gold.

OUR STUPENDOUS DECADE.

Ten years ago today, Monday, July 20, 1914, was the beginning of the most momentous fortnight in history. When we Americans look back upon the world of that day it seems the landscape of a dream. On that day, if we looked upon Europe at all, it was like a traveler who looks from the shore up the long slopes of a mountain, noting the white towns, the gray green olive groves and winding roads of peace, noting the blue sky but not the ominous cloud gathering over the crater or the vague echoes of subterranean thunders.

The crime at Sarajevo three weeks before had flashed upon us, but faded almost as quickly out of our consciousness. We had other things to think about, the stirring foreground of our crowded and hurrying American scene, and kings or princesses had been murdered before; Elizabeth of Austria, Humbert of Italy, George I. of Greece, and there was the slaughter but a few years before among these very Serbians of their king and queen and court. These crimes, like others of the sort, furnished brief bursts of romantic color down the long reaches of the old world's history, but for us in our new land of morning hopes what were they but crimes, crimes it is true of great éclat but seeming more of the stage than of any reality touching us.

So if we had been warned by some prophet that this killing of an Austrian prince in an obscure town we had never before heard of was a fateful link in an inexorable chain which presently was to draw 2,000,000 American citizens into European war, we should have given no heed. During the weeks following Sarajevo the pages of our newspapers gave as little attention to Europe as was usual in that time, which now we think of as an epoch long ago. It was of course different in Europe. A profound and widespread disquiet grew in spite of reassurances that war would be avoided. On July 6 the kaiser had gone cruising, a comforting sign, but exchanges were going on among the governments. The Serbian and the Austrian press were raving, but on July 21 the Serbian government told the powers it would accept Vienna's demands if they did not go beyond "judicial coöperation" for the ascertainment and punishment of the guilty.

But two days later the Austrian ultimatum shook Europe into full consciousness of the impending crisis. It was not until July 25 that the situation broke upon the front pages of the American press, and even as the American people were reading the tardy report, the period of the ultimatum was ending and the Austrian legation departing from Belgrade. Serbia's humble reply to Austrian demands had been delivered and Vienna had refused it. Russia and England, informed tardily, were urging upon the Austrian government extension of time for Serbia. Russia had begun to mobilize. On the twenty-seventh Austria declared that she did not intend permanent territorial compensations, but the next day she declared war upon Serbia.

We cannot follow the complicated exchanges among the monarchs and prime ministers, the foreign offices and ambassadors and general staffs, partly because there is not space to describe them, partly because the published documents, the varicolored books of official explanation which were put forth by warring governments eager to conciliate the opinion of their people and the world, were garbled and incomplete. But while the anxious counsels of moderation, the efforts at mediation and localization and all the hasty devices of diplomacy were beating against the ruthless advance of fate, the armies of Europe were gathering under their banners. On July 24 Britain had ordered the mobilization of the fleet, announced three days later. On the 29th the Russian army mobilized at Kiev, Odessa, Moscow and Kazan, and on the 31st Petrograd ordered a general mobilization. Belgium mobilized on the same day and France, withdrawing ten miles from her northern frontier, was massing her troops for the impending blow. The next day, Aug. 1, both France and Germany ordered general mobilization. Austria had ordered it the day before, and on Aug. 2 Germany declared war on Russia, issued an ultimatum to Belgium, and took Luxembourg. On the 3d Germany declared war upon France. On the 4th her armies advanced upon Belgium, and England issued an ultimatum to Germany upon that action and followed the next day with a declaration of war. Belgium protested the invasion and declared war and on the 6th Austria declared war upon Russia, while Germany and Serbia severed relations. Four days later France and Austria severed relations and on the 12th Great Britain declared war upon Austria. A week later Japan delivered an ultimatum to Austria, which was ignored, and on Aug. 23 the latter rounded out the formalities by declaring war upon Belgium.

Before this, Aug. 8, Liege had fallen before the battering German or Austrian guns and the German armies had swept on to Brussels, taken Aug. 23, while the Russians had entered East Prussia Aug. 17, and on the 19th gained a victory at Gumbinnen which, though promptly followed by the great victory of Hindenburg, was to have a decisive influence upon the whole conduct and military result of the war. Belgian neutrality had been violated and her ordeal had begun. That, too, was registering its influence on a people 3,000 miles away, a people little dreaming of the unseen current already carrying them toward the flaming vortex at which they looked in amazement and horror.

Thus opened the great tragedy, in those days which now seem so far away. The traveler gazing at the mountain with its great bulwarks, solid, they seemed, as mother earth, at the quiet villages on its slopes and peaceful vineyards under a serene sky, suddenly beholds the mountain burst into thunder and flame, the sky is hidden, the foundations of the earth shake, and peaceful villages and vineyards are gone. Hell has fallen upon the friendly earth.

So it seemed to the naïve thought of the America of that hour. Now we know that the great catastrophe was not the incredible manufacture of an assassin or the sudden accident of a day or year. We know that it was the culmination of forces long at work, some of them as old as Europe and some as old as the warring soul of man. Nevertheless their work still astounds us and fills our soul with dark uncertainties. Looking back at the Europe of July, 1914, who could have dreamed of what it is ten years later, a moment in the vast score of time. The German empire towered over the human scene. Her army was the most powerful on earth. Her navy and merchant marine grew apace threatening the mistress of the seas. In industry, in science, in the arts, in ordered government she rivaled all nations, and her commerce spread a widening web about the earth. Russia loomed as a vast empire of immeasurable possibilities, backward, but of titanic power. England, mistress of the ocean ways, benign mother of mighty dominions, august giver of laws to myriads of the earth's peoples, sat secure on her mighty throne. The Austrian empire, threatened from within but still a strong fabric; Italy with her aspiring nationality; the Balkan peoples, entering a new era of independence and progress; even Turkey under her new influences seemed all a part of a structure destined to stand for generations.

Now all that vast edifice has disappeared. The mighty walls of imperial Germany are in the dust. Her shining armor is broken, her masterful dynasty is a family of subdued citizens, and a Socialist republic struggles desperately to preserve the remains of her nationality. Her great navy lies under the waves of Scapa Flow. France takes the watch on the Rhine; Alsace and Lorraine are lost and the powers are wrangling over her mortgaged future. Russia is dismembered and in the clutches of communism; her czar lies in a bloody grave. England, her ruling class overthrown, experiments with a Socialist government, her empire reduced to a weak federation of states connected by a fading loyalty to a declining throne. Austria and Hungary have dwindled to petty states, struggling for bare existence. Italy, escaping from the communist morass, hopes for a new life under the dictatorship of a man unheard of outside of Italy in 1914. Montenegro has disappeared; Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, Latvia, Esthonia, Lithuania, are new nations struggling to be born. Poland restored finds her new status a desperate adventure. Finland is free. The balance of power is no more. The great alliance and the great entente have vanished. Europe is in confusion. Its former ties and relations are torn to pieces. Old barriers are down and new have risen. Internal and foreign problems, finance, trade, armament, are in a state of flux. Classes have been wiped out, great stores of wealth dissipated. It is the making of a new world.

Compared with this travail, America is a land of peace and safety. Yet we too find ourselves in a new world, with new problems and responsibilities. Our wealth is enormous, our power and prestige cast their shadow, or their light, across the world. Our aid, our favor, is the key which all the governments and all the peoples reach for. A few Americans on the eastern seaboard, influenced by the mixed motives of financial gain and social servility, wish to approach Europe in a sense of political inferiority. But most of us are not dizzied upon our new eminence, perhaps because we cannot realize that we are there. We have no taste for domination, no conception of flunkyism. Our wish, deep in the American nature, is for independence and for peace. Under that influence we can give of our strength, when the giving will serve the ends we approve, and not surrender ourselves to the manipulations of foreign ambitions or entangle ourselves in competitions which are or ought to be alien to our sympathies and irrelevant to our destiny as a nation.

LABOR BANKS.

Rapid growth of labor banks since 1920 confirms the view long held by liberals that the present economic structure of society is flexible and can be accommodated to modern needs. "The combined financial power of labor is almost unlimited," says Roger Babson. "If the working people really mean to get together on these lines, it will be a very significant event in our industrial history."

Labor is finding that it can utilize the instruments prepared by modern financiers, and gain, by peaceful means, a hand in the control of industry. Control of large scale industry has passed in the last twenty-five years in large measure from the industrial capitalist to the financier. If labor comes now as the financier, it can command many of the resources now in the hands of Wall street. It can redirect capital to some extent. It can try its great experiment in ownership by workers in an orderly and an American way.

The strike as an economic method has become more and more a failure all around. It impoverishes the workers. It lowers their buying power and injures business. It cuts production and raises prices. It hurts labor. It hurts capital. It hurts the country. Labor funds for strike benefits nowadays usually do more work for labor in a labor bank than they do in paying grocers' bills for strikers. "The labor unions of this country," says Otto Kahn, "claim a membership of 4,500,000. If every man laid aside one dollar a week, the available sum at the end of one year would amount to $234,000,000. That is a pretty tidy fund to start business with in various lines." As a matter of fact, American trade unionists, according to Richard Boeckel, lay aside much more than that. Formerly labor invested those funds in fields beyond its own control, and often opposed their influence later when a strike was called. Today the tendency of labor is more often not to strike, but to use business methods, through the instruments of financial control. Labor banks, it may be predicted, will gradually replace the strike. Labor will use capitalistic methods to gain its ends. No business man can complain of that.

The seven railroad brotherhood banks in the United States alone show resources of more than $24,000,000. Twenty-six labor banks have been established in the four years since the Mount Vernon Savings bank of Washington came under labor control. They have weathered severe industrial fluctuations with a sound record. Although the test of a general strike has not yet been applied to them, there is reason to believe that they are beyond the experimental stage. They have become a recognized part of our financial and industrial system.

When a billion dollar bank welcomes the advent of labor banking, Americans in general need not fear a disastrous upset of our present economic system by labor financiers. "More savings," says Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City bank of New York, "more banking business, increased demand for labor, greater prosperity, and an impetus to social progress" will come of the labor bank movement. Bankers see that labor banks will teach saving and economic methods to a great and powerful group of citizens not now adequately reached. They see that labor's money turned into the stream of American industry will greatly augment its volume and power. They cannot and do not object to labor's rising interest in controlling its own money.

"It has been our pleasure to coöperate closely with the brotherhood banks in a recent distribution of securities," continues President Mitchell. "This in itself has demonstrated that, if we are looking for opportunities for coöperation instead of for conflict, we shall find the former instead of the latter." The situation is full of hope for the industrial future and peace of America.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Mid July offers delphinium and white phlox in the moonlight, in splashes of amber and banks of shadows with the odors of roses. Elder blossoms and syringas top the thickets. In the moonlight it is a world of pure fancy with the realities shut out. At the edge of the garden the night is a wall. Nothing is beyond it. Everything is within. There is a beneficent restriction of perception. The world is reduced to the stature of man, to the cloister in which his egotism can expand and be large in a space grown small and granted an effulgence from a light which imaginably could have been swung up overhead just to give splashes of amber and banks of shadows to his space on earth. Even the great suns which obliterate his dimensions are dimmed and cannot disturb his importance. Great realities are locked out but small ones attack. The mosquitoes sail out from the thickets. There is an army in the moonlight. The world belongs to it.

THE TECHNIQUE OF LUMBER SUPPLY.

Midsummer forest fires are again upon us. This time the Pacific coast is the sufferer. Elsewhere there are not so many forests left to burn.

Trees in America are destroyed four times faster than we are producing them. Already twenty-eight states must import much of their lumber. More than half of America's paper or its materials must come from foreign sources. At the present rate of destruction, twenty years or so will see the exhaustion of American forests. "The timber famine," says Col. W. B. Greeley of the U. S. Forest service, "is no longer a distant and theoretical danger; it is here."

One-fourth of the soil of the United States is adapted only to timber crops. Much of that land lies idle. What should be growing timber is growing nothing. Rural depopulation, community bankruptcy and the breakdown of local industry result. With a timber famine upon us, timber lands lie idle. The slow maturity of the crop has discouraged individual timber farmers. But there are no fundamental reasons, says Col. Greeley, why, with the right technical guidance, the commercial and industrial energies of the country cannot enter this field on a large scale.

What is that technical guidance? First, a science of forest culture in America must be created. On our 470,000,000 acres of forest growing lands there is every combination of soil, climate and growing conditions to be analyzed. Growth requirements of 200 commercial species of trees, problems of rotation, of relative yields and the like must be known. This will require at least ten experiment stations. Today we have five. Universities should take it up more extensively. Farmers should study their wood lots as well as their clover fields.

Second, a study of economy in timber should be made. The application of what we now know in this field would spare the destruction of our forests by 20 or 25 per cent. By the use of by-products and wastes, by the study of seasoning and of fungicides, by a more careful application of wood engineering to construction, 13,250,000,000 board feet of wood could be saved every year. That is worth saving.

Third, a study of the economic facts of forest resources and the use of wood is needed. Surveys of forests, young forests and forestable lands should be carried out. Surveys of shortages and of the needs for timber could be added. A national program of land use, a study of timber transportation problems and a general coördination of the timber problem with other economic problems in America should be made.

These, says Col. Greeley, are the scientific backgrounds of our forestry situation. The colonel in this case is worth listening to.

The Other Side

MR. DAVIS AND INDEPENDENTS.
[New York Times.]

The nomination of Mr. John W. Davis by the Democratic convention puts a special obligation upon the growing numbers of Americans who swear by no party. They are accustomed to criticize both parties for not bringing forward leaders of a higher character. They often single out in advance the names of men of eminent merit who, they say, ought to be nominated for the most important offices, but who probably will not be for the very reason that they stand too much above the ordinary run of politicians to be acceptable to them. But this year the thing that was too good to be true has come to be true in the case of Mr. Davis. He was the one man among the independents oftenest singled out as the "ideal" candidate who ought to be selected, but almost certainly would not be.

There is a duty here which runs beyond any question of personal liking or admiration. Independents ought to consider the matter as it affects the attitude and the future tendency of one of the great political parties.

Now they have the opportunity to throw all their influence on the side of a man whom they acknowledge to be of spotless character, uncommon ability and noble aims. If they do not do it, with what face can they hereafter mourn over the debasement of politics or talk dolefully of the bars which politicians raise in the path of men of high talents and worthy motives? Certainly no independent can be allowed without rebuke hereafter to rail at the Democratic party for its selection of unfit candidates, if he does not hold up the hands, by voice and vote, of one who is eminently fit.

POINTERS FOR THE EYES.

THE Eyesight Conservation Council of America tells us that the Dupont company had the eyes of 1,600 employés in their dye works tested. Men with defective vision were not put on jobs around acids, caustics, and other chemicals. The rules as to wearing of goggles were rigidly enforced. In consequence, the eye accidents in the works were reduced two-thirds. During a six months' period only three men lost time on account of eye accidents.

Men who work around acids and alkalis are subject to splashing accidents. The splashed chemicals occasionally get into the eyes, and when they do they make bad burns. Men who see well are in less danger from splashing accidents and the wearing of goggles is a great protection.

One sometimes wonders why glass blowers and bottle makers do not have regular vision tests and do not habitually wear goggles while at work. If they would take these precautions, they would lessen their cataract rates.

As I go around, I notice that welders using high heat methods of welding always have their goggles on. The strain on the eye of the glass blower is not as acute as in the case of a welder, but, continued a long time, it produces cataract and blindness.

Prolonged exposure to irritating dust is another cause of cataract. Perhaps in time men who work in dusty air may find it advisable to wear goggles in order that they may have vision when they get old.

The Eyesight Conservation council issues the following rules for illumination:

1. The light should shine on the object under gaze, but not in the eyes of the observer.

2. The first remedy is the use of the diffusing glass globes, reflectors, or shades.

3. The contrast of brightness should be within the ratio of 1 to 100. This means the adoption of indirect or semi-indirect lighting in which the brightness of the bowls is reduced.

4. Localized lighting should be used only in conjunction with some general system of lighting, so as to avoid marked contrasts.

5. Avoid the glare of reflection from polished surfaces.

6. Both excessive illumination and inadequate illumination strain and fatigue the eye in order to obtain sharp definition.

7. Intrinsic brilliancy of more than five candle power per square inch should be reduced by a diffusing medium if the rays enter the eye at an angle below 60 degrees with the horizontal plane.

8. Flickering, unsteady or streaked illumination strains the eye and produces irritation in the eye in its attempt to maintain vision.

9. Special protective glasses should be used to protect the eye from ultra-violet radiation in excess of that present in daylight as well as infra-red radiation from high temperature molten surfaces.

10. Windows should form as large a percentage of the total wall area as possible.

11. Window shades used indiscriminately are conducive to contrast glare effects. Translucent screens and shades are generally preferable.

12. Ground glass and the like should be avoided in window sashes which are below the level of the eye, as they cause an increase of brightness in the retinal images thrown on a portion of the retina accustomed to such brightness.

13. Dark colored finishes, walls and ceilings should be avoided if eye comfort is desired, since they are likely to introduce glaring contrasts.

BE VACCINATED AGAIN.

S. W. C. writes: About thirty years ago when I was a kid my vaccination took and left a good sized scar. Since then I have been vaccinated about six times without result. Ten days ago I was vaccinated by the health department doctor and received a pamphlet to the effect that if it didn't take I should try it twice more before I could consider myself vaccinated. I followed the advice and yesterday tried again and the health department doctor said it wasn't necessary.

Now, whom shall I believe, the health department doctor or the private doctor?

REPLY.

The health department. Their opinion is worth more than that of one of their employés.

You probably are immune and cannot be successfully vaccinated, but do not assume that you are until you make the number of attempts required by the department.

Smallpox has killed many in your city recently.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters to this department must be signed with names and addresses of writers.

ABSENT TWENTY YEARS.

Chicago, July 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I was married to a man who left me twenty years ago. I heard he was going to be married. I was never served with any papers in regard to a divorce. Can he marry after being separated without a divorce? K. B.

No, but it is possible he might have secured a divorce on notice by publication which failed to reach you.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LITTLE ARGUMENT.

Chicago, July 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I was walking with a friend of mine and a lady passed us, my friend remarked "that is the Greek's wife," having reference to a Greek who runs a fruit store in the neighborhood, but my friend did not specify fruit store or anything else, all he said was "the Greek's wife."

Now it so happens that we have another Greek in the neighborhood running a candy store and I thought my friend had reference to this man, and I contradicted him, stating that that was not the woman. After a little argument we bet $5.

Finally we discovered that my friend had reference to one man and I had reference to the other, but neither one of us specified anything else; all that was said was "the Greek's wife." He said nothing more and I said nothing except that it was not.

Now the question is who wins the $5. I claim that neither one of us do.

D. G. M.

We agree with you.

There was no meeting of the minds, since each of you intended a different person by "the Greek."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

Chicago, July 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly tell me if there is a protective tariff for American birds? The bill for the taxation of imported birds was introduced in the House of Congress by Congressman Clarence McGregor of Buffalo, N. Y. It was referred to the Ways and Means committee. I should like to know if it was passed. MRS. L. T.

Public 318 67th Cong. H. R. 7456, Par. 1419 of the tariff law passed Sept. 21, 1922, provides "that the importation of birds of paradise, aigrettes, egret plumes, or so-called osprey plumes, and the feathers, quills, heads, wings, tails, skins, or parts of skins, of wild birds, either raw or manufactured and not for scientific or educational purposes, is hereby prohibited . . . except as to such plumage or parts of birds in actual use for personal adornment (or) . . . for scientific or educational purposes, shall be presumed for the purpose of seizure to have been transported unlawfully after Oct. 3, 1913," unless the possessor shall establish the contrary.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE FENCE BETWEEN.

Chicago, July 17.—[To th Legal Friend of the People.]—It is necessary for me to have a fence built between my property and my next neighbor. He does not want the fence. Is he obliged to pay for half of it? M. V. D.

We are of the opinion that he can be obliged to contribute if his property is inclosed on the other boundaries.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 20, 1864.

MEMPHIS.—A report prevails in the city and is generally believed that Gen. A. J. Smith has met Gen. Forrest and utterly defeated him.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Sherman announces that he has advanced his whole army five miles south of the Chattahoochee river and crossed Peachtree creek without resistance from Gen. Johnston's forces. This move forces Johnston inside the defenses of Atlanta and places the city within range of Gen. Sherman's guns.

WASHINGTON.—The Norfolk New Regime has a report that a great battle has been fought in Georgia, resulting in the complete overthrow of the rebels and the capture of Atlanta with 15,000 prisoners. It is believed the report is premature.

WASHINGTON.—The Richmond papers are highly spiced with sensational dispatches stating that Washington has been captured by the confederates.

ST. PAUL.—Advices from Brackett's cavalry battalion at Fort Sully on the Missouri are that 150 lodges of friendly Sioux are at the fort, and that Gen. Sibley made a treaty with them.

NEW YORK.—Nathaniel Marsh, president of the Erie Railroad company, died suddenly.

CHICAGO.—Ross Ebbitt and Miss Letitia Abbitt were married by the Rev. Robert Collier. Another marriage was that of Charles L. Stokes and Miss Jennie Goldsmith.

JULY 20, 1899.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Fairbanks of the joint high commission, who recently personally investigated the situation, reported to President McKinley that the United States is correct in its contentions in the Alaskan boundary dispute and urged that the government yield not an inch in the matter. The report brings the dispute to a crisis and the United States may send troops to Pyramid Harbor.

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Alger has at last been forced out of the cabinet. He has placed his resignation in the hands of the President, who had requested it through Vice President Hobart. Alger has long been under fire for alleged mistakes during the war. It is said Gov. Roosevelt of New York may be offered the portfolio.

LONDON.—Danger of war with the Boers is past, according to an inspired article in the London Times, "provided cablegrams from Pretoria are correct."

NEW YORK.—A strike was called on the electric lines of the Metropolitan Street Railway company in Manhattan. There was fierce rioting on the 2d Avenue line all day. Rioting also continued in the strike on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company's lines.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

AND NOW DOC EVANS IS ALL WRONG, TOO.

Chicago, July 16.—Referring to your editorial of July 10, "Compulsory Good Health," it contains striking testimony to the fact that orthodox medicine has lost the people's confidence and is fighting with its back to the wall for its very existence. Hence the necessity for compulsory laws, diligent propaganda, lies and chicanery.

You use the word "quack," but apply it too narrowly. If quack means a doctor who pretends to be what he is not or to cure when he cannot, then it will include medical orthodoxy from top to bottom. The quacks are the scurvy crew who keep their hold by getting laws to force their dope. They are the fellows who usurped the right to the exclusive care of our boys in the army. In 1917 and 1918 they shot them full of calf pus and typhoid germ soup; men refusing were court martialed.

Were they "saved from typhoid"? Well, not when they were in a typhoid environment. Of course, they did not get it when sanitary conditions were good. In Europe the chief surgeon of the American expeditionary force, Col. Walter G. McCaw, had to reprimand the medical officers of the army for relying on inoculation. The ignorant asses had supposed that typhoid vaccination protected! (See United States public health service report No. 13, volume 34.)

When Dr. Evans admits, "Frankly, we cannot even cure a common boil"; when scarlet fever, according to Chicago statistics, is declining three times faster than diphtheria, though the former has no "preventive" and the latter has, and also a "sure cure," and when "organized medicine" can flourish only with the aid of the policeman's club, you may be sure, Mr. Editor, you have a lot of readers who are disgusted with your medical propaganda; and, though they do not take the time to write you as I have done, nevertheless they do some thinking—and then buy other papers.

P. L. CLARK, M. D.

WHY WE LIKE JEFFERSON AND DAVIS.

Chicago, July 16.—Dear Sir: Jefferson, the father of the Democratic party, is admired because in spite of the fact that he was one of the country's richest men he championed the popular cause not through circumstance, but through love for the common people. We are apt to admire this quality in Mr. Davis.

Again, for those who feel embarrassed upon being considered democratic, it should be refreshing to know there are at least a few aristocrats with plebeian tendencies. They may take courage and "keep the faith," for some day it may be possible to move to Hyde or Oak Park, or even Evanston, and not have to change their convictions to avoid the sting of ridicule. ROBERT E. DOWNS.

WHAT A SCHOOL GIRL THINKS OF THE PLATOON SYSTEM.

Chicago, July 10.—In today's paper you have an editorial on the platoon system. I agree with you: it is good for the student. I have just finished the four year high school course and can speak from my own experience. I know that when I was in the grammar school with one teacher all day long teaching all subjects I learned less than when I had different teachers for the different subjects. No one knows everything. We are more efficient in some lines than in others. Then, too, when a student has the same teacher all day long he notices that quite often important subjects are left out for days at a time because the teacher has taken too much time for the subject she likes and there is no time for the other, or the other subjects are burdensome for her and she just leaves them out. While in the platoon system each subject is allotted so much time thereby leaving time enough for each subject. Then, too, the student becomes more interested because the change of teachers gives him a change of atmosphere. I hope they continue carrying out the platoon system in Chicago and when I'm a teacher, about two years from now, I'll be glad to be one in the platoon system. AN INTERESTED READER.

"BUT GIVE A FRENCH GIRL A GUNNY SACK AND A BIT OF RIBBON —"

Chicago, July 15.—Any one who knows the French and Italians as well as I do will realize that Mr. Baroni-Donati's letter is not so much a boost for the American girl as it is a knock for the French girl.

You are not telling us anything we don't know, Mr. Baroni-Donati. Any one with one eye knows that the American girl is physically the best looking girl in the world. Perhaps some credit is due to the race of men who win every Olympic.

However, the fact remains that the French girl is the most feminine, and the homeliest French girl could win a man from the best looking American girl without half trying.

As to the American girl's being the best dressed, I gather that Mr. Baroni-Donati has never lived in Paris. The average American girl can afford more expensive clothes, it is true, but gives a French girl a gunny sack and a bit of ribbon, and she will be the best dressed. That's the reason the women's styles are copied from the French, Mr. Baroni-Donati. H.

THOSE MEN WITH MUD ON THEIR FACES.

Chicago, July 16.—Is there a law which prevents the barber from having a shade or some sort of a screen across his window so that the public cannot see what is going on behind the scenes? It is far from pleasant to go past a barber shop and see the men sprawling there with their faces full of clay or lather.

Should not something be done to alter this situation? ESTELLA.

ASK THE ICE MAN NOT TO SHOUT.

Chicago, July 14.—Is there no law against peddlers and ice men shouting in the areaway of the building where one resides? Every morning at 7 o'clock the ice man goes through the areaway clicking his tongs and shouting "Ice!" He makes one call at 9 and one at 11; also one in the afternoon, shouting each time. Is there no way to stop this?

HARRY QUDEN.

WHY ARE BACHELORS?

Marion, Ia., July 14.—Why talk about taxing the bachelors? Over two-thirds of the bachelors are unmarried because women are getting too much education and good-paying jobs they will not marry. They find they can make their own living without a man to bother with.

W. E. KEARNS.

CHURCHES AND CARNIVALS.

Chicago, July 14.—To G. A. L. regarding church carnivals and paddle wheels: You darn old cheap skate, we sure would have a wonderful world if everybody followed your example. When our Chicago churches give their outdoor carnivals the money is used for a good cause, and we certainly don't want people like you, who turns a dime over three times before they spend it. You better leave Chicago and go and live in some unknown place where there is no amusement, and let the rest of us enjoy ourselves. People like you ought to have a sign pinned across the front of themselves: "We are stingy guts." I think this will settle you for a while.

MRS. M. E.

NO ENDURING AMERICAN.

Chicago, July 15.—Before the United States becomes too "chesty" over the Olympics it might be well to pause and consider this fact: Not in one single contest in which endurance was the test did the Yankees win. Not one! What's the matter? CARTOL.

SHAVER ASSUMES CHARGE OF GOOD SHIP DEMOCRACY

Davis' Campaign to Be Run from Washington.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Clem Shaver today took over active charge of the Democratic national committee from Cordell Hull with the announcement that Washington "would be the heart of Democratic campaign activities," with branch headquarters in Chicago and New York.

Smaller bureaus will be established around the country, at least one in the south and two or three in the west, one of the latter probably being on the Pacific coast.

Replying to queries as to whether it was necessary for the Democrats to make an active drive in the south Shaver said the bureau there would merely be in "recognition of the south's aid to democracy."

Shaver to Keep Moving.

"The south is part of the party—it should be recognized," he said.

Shaver, himself, will spend a majority of his time here in Washington with frequent short trips to Chicago and New York as the occasion demands. He will go to Clarksburg, W. Va., tonight to discuss notification plans with chieftains there, returning Monday to resume the settling of campaign details, particularly personnel of bureaus, funds, and speakers.

He would not speak directly as to Davis' campaign plans, but said that "a man who is candidate for President of the United States probably should pretty well cover the United States in his campaign."

To Have Corps of Spellbinders.

Davis' stumping will, of course, be augmented by an adequate speakers' bureau which already is in process of organization.

As to whether Davis' probable appearances in the west would be indicated by Charles W. Bryan will be stumping in the east, Shaver said that would be left "entirely to Mr. Bryan as will all details of his notification."

BERLIN, July 19.—The failure of the soviet government to pay the bigger prize—100,000 gold rubles ($50,000)—in a recent drawing of the government lottery, is leading to an examination of high soviet officials. The name and address of the winner were found to be fictitious. Officials explain this by saying that the holder of the ticket wished to remain unidentified and had pawned his ticket.

50 YEARS WED

MR. AND MRS. W. R. GERMAIN.

Five children and seven grandchildren attended the celebration of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Germain last Wednesday at 39 North Lotus avenue, the home of their daughter, Mrs. E. W. Miller.

Mrs. Germain's parents were pioneer settlers here, coming to Chicago in 1835. She has lived here practically all of her life.

Mr. Germain is 79 years old, a civil war veteran and is an employé of the McCormick Harvester company.

The children present at the golden wedding anniversary were: George B. Germain of Los Angeles, Mrs. Edward Ganka of 4041 Waveland place; Leslie R. Germain of 932 Massasoit avenue; J. Wallace Germain of 2907 West Adams street, and Mrs. E. W. Miller, the hostess.

CATCH TWO IN ACT OF LOOTING GAS STATION

Two men were captured early yesterday morning by Lieut. David Schwartz and his squad from the detective bureau, in the act of looting a gasoline filling station at 4007 Armitage avenue. A man and woman were later taken into custody as accomplices.

Those found in the filling station gave their names as James Hall, 20 years old, 2036 Stave street, and Raymond Seymour, 18 years old, same address.

Hall told the police he had planned the burglary of the station with Harry Kuhlman, 2060 Stave street, an employé, who was working his last day. Police arrested Kuhlman at his home, in company with a woman who gave the name of Mabel Johnson. Both denied complicity in the burglary.

Aged Man Leaps to Death at a Los Angeles Hotel

Los Angeles, Cal., July 19.—E. W. Helwig, 80, city treasurer of Lincoln, Neb., committed suicide here today by leaping from the ninth story of a downtown hotel. His crushed body was found on the roof of a garage seven stories below. Ill health is believed to have prompted the suicide. Hellwig left a note saying, "I cannot stand it any longer. This is the end."

DIXIE WILL RULE BOTH HOUSES IF DAVIS IS WINNER

Members in Line for the Choice Committee Jobs.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Democratic success in the November election will bring the south back into control of congress.

While two favorite son presidential candidates from southern states were sidetracked by the Democratic convention, Democratic members of congress from south of the Mason and Dixon line are counting on monopolizing the choice committee chairmanships if their party comes into power.

The control of the south in congress will be even more secure than during the Wilson administration, when the southern states boasted most of the positions of influence in the senate and house.

Northerners Lose Rank.

Several of the northern Democrats who otherwise would have been in line for chairmanships went down to defeat in the Harding landslide of 1920 and, while some of them came back to congress in 1922, they lost their original rank in the seniority list. Representative Rainey [Dem., Ill.], for example, would have been in line to become chairman of the powerful house ways and means committee if he had not been defeated in 1920. He was reëlected in 1922, but now is listed eighth among the Democrats on the committee. Representative Garner [Dem., Tex.] now is ranking minority member of this committee and will become chairman if the Democrats come into power.

Almost the only northern Democrat in the house who, under seniority rule, will be in line for chairman of an important committee is Representative Sabath [Dem., Ill.], who is at the top of the minority list on the immigration committee.

The present minority leaders of the senate and house, both of whom are from the south, will become majority leaders in the event of Democratic success. Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.] will step into the shoes of Senator Lodge [Rep., Mass.], present majority leader of the senate, while Representative Garrett [Dem., Tenn.] similarly will take over the majority leadership now exercised by Representative Longworth [Rep., O.] in the house.

Will Rule on Appropriations.

The appropriations committees in both houses, as important and powerful as any, will be headed by southerners. Representative Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] is in line for the chairmanship in the house, while Senator Overman [Dem., N. C.] can have the place in the senate, unless he should prefer the chairmanship of the judiciary committee, of which he also is the ranking minority member.

The interstate and foreign commerce committee in the house will have Representattive Barkley [Dem., Ky.], as its chairman, while the corresponding senate committee, known as the committee on interstate commerce, again will be headed by Senator Smith [Dem., S. C.], who is now chairman by virtue of a Democratic-radical Republican combination.

The rules committee of the house virtually controls the legislative program. Representative Pou [Dem., N. C.] was its chairman in the Wilson administration and still holds his position of seniority. Senator Overman will step into the chairmanship of the rules committee in the senate if it does not interfere with his holding another important chairmanship.

FLAPPER BANDIT AND PALS RAID W. SIDE STORE

"Sheik and Sheba" bandits—two young men and a chic young woman—riding in a black sedan of powerful lines, yesterday robbed the clothing store of David Goodman, 3100 West 22d street, of $1,000 worth of silk stockings and other silky, shimmery things and escaped in the car.

Neighbors called the police when they heard the burglar alarm ringing, but by the time the "flivver" squad arrived the looters had fled. One witness described the men and their feminine companion and the big sedan in which they escaped.

CUBS IN BUNCH TO SIGN UP IN NATIONAL GUARD

What promises to be one of the greatest events in the recruiting history of the National guard will take place tomorrow afternoon when the entire Cub team is to be sworn into the 122d Field artillery by Col. Frank R. Schwengle.

Accompanied by a special detail from the regiment armory at 234 East Chicago avenue they will march down Michigan boulevard to Madison street and then to the front of the Castle theater at State and Madison streets. There they will make formal application to Col. Schwengle for membership in the Illinois National guard.

A cub bear will lead the Cub team, as dressed in their baseball uniforms, they go to offer their services to the olive drab. Motion picture camera men and photographers by the score will add to the realism of the scene.

Two Died by Drowning, Coroner's Juries Find

Coroner's juries yesterday decided that Edward Strange, 68, 939 Orleans street, and John Gorman, 22 East Kinzie street, came to their deaths by drowning. The body of the former was found in the lake off Chestnut street. That of the latter was floating near the Municipal pier. The jury in the first case decided death was accidental, and in the other the verdict was left open.

AIR OF MYSTERY STILL SHROUDS COLOMBIAN OIL

Finds Only 1 Big Concern Operating Wells.

BY FREDERICK WRIGHT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

COLON, Panama, July 16.—There have been many conflicting stories circulated regarding the discovery of oil and the development of the oil industry in the republic of Colombia since this region was mentioned in connection with the Teapot Dome scandal at Washington. The truth about the situation is not easily obtained. Even government officials at the capital can not or will not give out any definite information.

In order to get reliable data on the situation of the oil industry I made a visit to the fields now under development. The only operations of any importance found were those of the Tropical Oil company, which is incorporated in New Jersey. The Tropical company's concession is located in the department of Santander del Sur, about four hundred miles up the Magdalena river from the Caribbean coast in the heart of the Colombian tropics.

The concession known as the Demares concession and contains approximately 1,250,000 acres. The first oil discovery in the republic was made in 1905 by Roberto Demares, a Colombian. On Dec. 6, 1905, he secured a concession from the government to work the property which now bears his name.

Drills Three Wells.

In 1916 Demares transferred the concession to the Benedum L'Trees interests of Pittsburgh. They organized the Tropical company, drilled three wells, and got oil from them, but not in any great volume. The first well brought oil in 1917. In 1919 the International company of Canada took over the Tropical company's interests and began active operations.

The International is held by the Imperial Oil company of Canada, and 50 per cent of the Imperial stock is held by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey.

The oil fields where the drilling is now going on are thirty miles east of Barranca. The field headquarters are at Infantes and are located near the center of the concession, which covers all the territory bounded by the Magdalena, Sagamosa, and Carare rivers and a mountain chain on the east.

Company Now Has Thirty Wells.

The Tropical company now has thirty wells. The depths run from 370 feet to 2,500 feet. The potential productions of these wells are not definitely known, as there has not been sufficient tankage erected to permit the wells to flow for any length of time.

The estimates place the production at 500 barrels daily for the smallest well and 2,500 barrels for the largest. This is generally believed by the drillers to be a fair estimate and the average flow of the wells now completed is about 1,500 barrels each. The grade of oil runs from 27 to 37 degrees Baume.

The Tropical company had eighteen strings of tools working on July 1, eleven of which were rotary rigs and seven standard. A refinery with 1,400 barrels daily capacity has been erected at Barranca to supply the gasoline demand in Colombia as required in the concession.

Negotiate for Pipe Line.

At the present there is no means of getting fuel oil to the coast. A company known as the Andean National of New York has asked the Colombian government for a concession to construct a pipe line from Barranca to Cartagena, a distance of approximately 400 miles. The request was granted with a reservation regarding the fixing of the tariffs, which is unsatisfactory to the directors of the Andean company, who rejected the proposal.

Negotiations are now being carried on with the government with a view to eliminating the objectionable clauses.

The cost of the construction is estimated at about $30,000,000. Until the pipe line is built the Tropical company will be unable to market the output of its wells. The great distance from the coast, the lack of transportation facilities, and the unhealthy condition of the country, which requires large expenditures for sanitation, makes the oil development of Colombia exceptionally costly, in fact, too costly for any but the biggest companies to undertake.

The Tropical company has invested $17,000,000 in Colombia to date, and many more millions must be invested before the Demares concession can be made a paying proposition.

Wells, but No Oil.

There are 280 foreigners, mostly Americans, employed by the Tropical company. During 1921-'22 more than 200 American firms and individuals sought oil concessions in Colombia, but none attempted development. The Texas Oil company and Henry Doherty have a concession in Colombia along the Venezuela boundary. They drilled two wells and got a small quantity of oil, but have not attempted any further development.

The Gillispie interests drilled one well in the department of Santander without getting any oil. The South American Gulf company drilled one well in the department of Bolivar, also without results. The Transcontinental company has a small well on the upper Magdalena river and the Standard Oil company of California is now drilling in the department of Bolivar, but has failed to get any oil.

FLY OVER EUROPE

BY LIEUT. R. J. BROWN JR.

[Chairman World Flight Committee.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—With the landing of the flyers at the San Stefano airdrome, ten miles west of the city of Constantinople, the route throughout the fourth division was completed.

Early in the morning of July 12 the flyers left Constantinople for London via Bucharest, Vienna, and Paris. They arrived at the British capital on July 16.

After remaining one day in London the flyers left for Brough on the Humber, 150 miles north, where the final touches will be given the planes prior to their attempt to fly the Atlantic.

The United States navy has placed the scouting fleet, in command of Admiral Magruder, at the disposal of the army air service while the flyers are crossing the North Atlantic, and the present plan of cooperation provides that there will be at least four naval vessels on every flight over the water. On the longest flight, from Iyigtut to Indian Harbor, Labrador, a distance of 572 miles, at least seven naval vessels will be spaced at intervals across the Davis straits.

ARRESTED, HE BLOWS UP HIS SHIP OF RUM

Los Angeles, Cal., July 19.—[Special.]—Boats in the harbor were endangered today when the 125 ton motor ship Skandalia Pacific, with 500 cases of Scotch, was blown up by the skipper.

Three police officers had gone aboard and arrested Capt. George H. Childs. He asked to go below to start the engine and move to another location.

Members of the crew leaped ashore while the patrolmen were unloading the whisky. Suddenly the entire ship broke into flames with a deafening roar. The policemen jumped to the dock while burning oil spread over the deck. The skipper got off just as the boat careened into the midst of twenty fishing vessels. The harbor fire department saved them.

The Skandalia Pacific was valued at $50,000 and the liquor at $60,000.

COST OF FOOD NOW ON SLIGHTLY HIGHER LEVEL, U. S. REPORTS

Washington, D. C., July 19.—The average family's expenditure for food increased between May 15 and June 15 in forty-four representative cities, the labor department announced today, while declines were reported in seven cities.

The general level of food prices, as disclosed by the weighted index of the department's bureau of labor statistics advanced about 1 per cent during the month, leaving the change for the twelve months which ended June 15 a decline of only 11-3 per cent, though an increase of 46 per cent since 1913 was recorded.

Increases, ranging up to 5 per cent on butter, 8 per cent on oranges, and 14 per cent on potatoes, were listed on fourteen articles during the month, while declines were registered for sixteen, including 10 per cent on sugar and 25 per cent on cabbage.

The greatest general increase by cities, 3 per cent, was reported in Detroit, and the greatest decrease, 1 per cent, was shared by Birmingham, Cincinnati, Mobile, and New Orleans.

HARRY H. TAMMEN OF DENVER POST DIES SUDDENLY

Denver, Colo., July 19.—Harry H. Tammen, 67, editor and part owner of the Denver Post, died here early today after a short illness. In addition to his interest in the Post, he possesed a private fortune estimated at $5,000,000.

Mr. Tammen had been ill about four months. About three weeks ago he was operated on at Johns Hopkins hospital at Baltimore, Md., and returned to Denver last Monday in the private car of J. Ogden Armour, a close personal friend.

Mr. Tammen is survived by his wife, Mrs. Agnes Tammen, and a brother, Frank Tammen of Denver.

Mr. Tammen, with his partner, Fred G. Bonfils, formerly owned the Kansas City Post. They also were former owners of the Sells Floto circus.

Mr. Tammen attributed much of his success to the fact that Mr. Bonfils and himself were constantly "on the job." As a rule, when one of the owners was away the other remained on duty at the Post.

FEAR ATTACKS ON FOREIGNERS IN CANTON STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, China, July 17.—The general strike in Shameen, the foreign controlled territory at Canton, followed by the landing of British, French and American sailors and marines to prevent disturbances, and the stoppage of water and food supplies, has led to considerable uneasiness here regarding the general south China situation. The situation is aggravated owing to threats against foreigners, following the outrage against the governor of French Indo-China, resulting in the killing of six Frenchmen by bombs.

The Canton strike of servants, private and municipal employés, is due to the enforcement of a law that Chinese entering the area must submit to a search.

The strike of Chinese telephone operators here over a wage dispute has tied up two sections of the exchange in the international settlement, necessitating the employment of foreign operators.

ILLINOIS WOMEN LOOKED TO FOR CAMPAIGN FIRE

Signs of Some Lively Contests Appear.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Women may furnish the fire that will bring the simmering Republican politics of Illinois to the boiling point and possibly to the point of boiling over.

The men folks, repressing the heat remaining from the April primary, are comparatively cold and deliberate in their determination to avoid open trouble, but the feminine disposition, it has been rumored for ages, is slightly different.

The whole thing hinges right now on how the women's activities in support of the Coolidge campaign are to be conducted and there was considerable signs of warmth yesterday when the Coolidge national headquarters announced informally that the woman state manager is about to be selected.

Woman Vice Chairman Sought.

This unofficial statement was that the state committee at its meeting at the Congress hotel next Wednesday will choose a woman vice chairman. This is construed to mean that the Small and Deneen committeemen on the committee will select one of their women leaders for the post. Following the Small victory in the primary the anti-Small forces permitted the organization of the state body to go by default, and it is probable they will follow that precedent on Wednesday.

In other words, the women see in the program an intention to "crowd out" the McCormick-Brundage-Barrett leaders, and particularly Mrs. Medill McCormick, elected national committeewoman at the Cleveland convention. They construe the state vice chairman step as meaning that a woman lieutenant of Gov. Small or of ex-Gov. Deneen will handle the state for Coolidge.

Indicated at Cleveland.

At Cleveland Frank L. Smith, chairman of the state committee and of Gov. Small's commerce commission, demanded before the election of the new nation committeewoman that Mrs. McCormick make plain her position as to a choice between Gov. Small and Norman L. Jones, the Democratic nominee for governor.

She declined to comply with the demand, but even prior to that time she and other leaders of the Illinois Republican Women's club, an independent organization, had blocked its state meeting from indorsing Jones. Possibly for that reason the Smith demand was not maintained and she was elected to the national committee with an understanding that she would handle the Coolidge campaign in the state.

MOB THREATENS MAN WHO ABUSED AND KILLED GIRL

Bellaire, O., July 19.—[United Press.]—Kondrat Gwozdenkow, 38, was spirited away to St. Clairsville today when a mob of 300 miners surrounded the city jail threatening to lynch him as the murderer of Anna Kuskon, 7 years old, whose abused body was found last night near her home in Big Run, near here.

Gwozdenkow, who said he had lost his memory during a moonshine drunk, was brought to Bellaire today and placed under heavy guard.

The mob assembled last night in response to the girl's screams. She was attacked on her way home from a store and was dead when physicians reached the scene, her mouth stuffed full of grass and a rope of vines and grass bound tightly about her neck.

Her alleged assailant fled as the mob approached. A few minutes later he was overtaken on the banks of the river and severely beaten.

Mob Lynches Negro.

Meridian, Miss., July 19.—[United Press.]—Harry Shelton, young Negro, was taken from the jail at Scooba, forty-five miles from here, last night by a mob and swung to a tree. The body was riddled with bullets.

5 Die as Car Breaks Bridge; Mother and Baby Saved

Buena Vista, Colo., July 19.—Five persons were killed near here last night when their automobile broke through a bridge and dropped fifty feet into the Arkansas river. They were Bryon Tipton, 36; Miss Ruth Skeels, 26; Billy Tipton, 10; Catherine Tipton, 8, and Jack Tipton, 6, all of Florence, Colo. They were driving to Buena Vista to visit relatives. Mrs. Tipton was dangerously injured, and an infant was unhurt.

COOLIDGES CRUISE ON CHESAPEAKE FOR WEEK-END HOLIDAY

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Laying his official duties aside and abandoning all political conferences, President Coolidge boarded the Mayflower this afternoon for a cruise down the Potomac river.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, his father and his son and Dr. and Mrs. John S. Hitchcock, former neighbors of the Coolidges at Northampton, Mass. The Mayflower will return Monday morning after cruising down as far as the upper portions of Chesapeake bay.

TWO NABBED FOR BASEBALL POOL ON LANDIS' TIP

Acting on a tip from the office of Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, Sergts. Carroll, Egan, and McFarland of the detective bureau yesterday arrested Leo J. Rehm, 133 East 22d street, and L. J. Thompson, head of the Franklyn Typesetting company, 426 South Clinton street, in connection with the running of baseball pools.

In Rehm's cigar store, the officers said, they found $10,000 in currency, which was apparently to be used in the "pay off," and some 13,000 printed tickets. Thompson was arrested when sixteen linotype machines in his concern were found printing "Lucky Strike" pool tickets.

Every mother will want this nourishing bread for her children

A good old recipe of our founder, Robert Boyd Ward, was the starting point of your new loaf—the recipe he thought a loaf of bread should be made from. We added to it still more nourishment—considerably more milk, extra sugar, and shortening, until we had as nourishing and as rich a loaf as we could make.

Therefore your new loaf is the kind of bread that children like. It contains the nourishment children need—for they eat bread oftener than any other food.

Your new loaf is just right to make substantial sandwiches for lunch or a picnic—sandwiches that will keep moist and fresh longer.

It makes delicious toast.

It is a real, honest loaf of good bread, containing the things that belong in bread—and nothing else. We're proud of it—we've given it our own name, Ward's Fine Bread.

Before we put the loaf on sale, we went this far to find out your taste: We got the leading loaves of bread and this new loaf, and we sliced platefuls of samples of each and numbered each plate. We invited women to come in and test the different samples and vote for the one they preferred. 9 out of every 10 picked this new loaf first.

Our own employes prefer it to all of our other loaves.

When you have tried it, please write us what you think of it. We would like to hear from you.

WHAT'S LIFE OF CHILD WORTH IN PLAIN DOLLARS?

Figure It Out and Then Dig Down and Give.

Be a Life Saver.
Give to the Camp Algonquin fund.
Give to the free ice fund.
BE A LIFE SAVER.

How much is a child's life worth?

It is a question that can never be answered. It is a question that is beyond computation. How much is the life of your child worth? Try to answer that.

Chicago rises in protest every summer against the killing of children by automobiles. Chicago rises in generous response to appeals to help the starving children of the near east. Chicago gives freely to the hungry little kids of Germany, Chicago gives to the widows and children of Japan, to the victims of floods, fires, holocausts. Chicago's hand is rarely slow.

But They're Right Here.

Yet in Chicago today are scores of little children who are desperately in need of food, of fresh country air, of vacations in the country, of sweet milk, of ice. Perhaps none of these children will die tomorrow, next week or next year, but who can tell? They are all under weight. They all have weak lungs and limbs that are tender because the muscles are undernourished. Who can say that they will not die? Many a doctor has pronounced them in desperate need of the country, good food, good air, and lots of sleep.

There are hundreds of these little pathetic children in Chicago, right in our own back yard, and yet, after almost two months of campaigning, THE TRIBUNE Camp Algonquin fund and THE TRIBUNE free ice fund have but little more than a total of $4,000. A glance at the bottom of this column will give the correct figure.

What Two Funds Accomplish.

These two funds are the means of saving the lives of these children. One gives them a fortnight or more of life in the beautiful Fox river valley. The other provides free ice for the mothers of the poor. Ice keeps the milk sweet. Milk gives the babies health and strength. What two funds could be responsible for a more glorious work? It means the saving of lives of Chicago's kids, not the kids of the near east, nor the kids of Japan, though it is granted that they need it. Charity begins at home and these two funds should be swelled by hundreds of contributions.

That's why Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick of Lake Forest and a host of other social leaders have united in giving a benefit baseball game at the Cubs' park next Sunday. The funds need money and every cent that is taken in next Sunday will go to these funds.

Tickets for this benefit can be purchased at THE TRIBUNE public service store, 11 South Dearborn street, at the loop sporting goods store of Thomas E. Wilson & Co., or at THE TRIBUNE plant, 431 North Michigan avenue.

The baseball game—THE TRIBUNE vs. the Algonquin Indians—will be worth seeing. Society leaders will attend. The Ilg Electric Ventilating company's band will play. The fun makers among THE TRIBUNE's roster of cartoonists will entertain. Beautiful young women from "Artists and Models" will sell score cards. It will be well worth the price of admission. The general admission is $1. Boxes will sell for $10.

Chicago should support this benefit game. Let firms buy tickets and distribute them among their employes. Let Chicago give generously.

Be a Life Saver.

URGE DAUGHTER OF DR. BUTLER TO BE A CANDIDATE

New York, July 19.—Friends of Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, daughter of Nicholas Murray Butler, are backing her as a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress from the 19th congressional district, it was learned today.

Miss Butler, although still under 30, is vice chairman of the Republican state committee and has long been recognized as one of the most promising of the younger women in politics.

A congressional career has been suggested to her many times, but she has always treated it as a joke. The women with whom she is associated, however, never have lost their faith that some time she would become the first woman member of congress from New York. Miss Butler said at the Republican convention in Cleveland that she never would run for office.

DAKOTA HAIL DAMAGES CROPS.

Dallas, S. D., July 19.—[Special.]—Thousands of dollars in damage was done to crops in this vicinity today by a hail storm that swept a strip twenty miles long and eight miles wide. The hailstones were eighteen inches deep in some drifts.

HEARST ASSAILS GOV. SMITH AND NOMINEE DAVIS

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—William Randolph Hearst, in a signed statement on the front page of tomorrow's New York American, fires a broadside at the movement to get Gov. Smith to again make the race for governor and urges, instead, the nomination of Lieut. Gov. Lunn.

"Gov. Smith," the statement says, "is always willing to hear the public demand when the big interests want him to, and the big interests always want him to whenever there is a genuine progressive, honestly loyal to the public, likely to secure an important nomination."

Hearst says Lunn is not subject to the influences of big financial interests, adding:

"In fact, if Lieut. Gov. Lunn develops any special strength before the public as a candidate for governor, we shall probably see Gov. Smith once more ready to make the personal sacrifice of his private business and run again for the protection of the water power exploiters and his other friends among the big interests."

Hearst urges Lunn's nomination to help "hold progressive Democrats in the party," which, he states, is under "the somewhat severe strain of nomination for the presidency of an attorney for Mr. Morgan."

STEEL WORKERS TO TEST THEIR VOICES TONIGHT

Harry Barnhard, widely known leader of community singing, has led a chorus of thousands in South Side parks during the last few weeks. Tonight he will lead steel workers and others in the Calumet district at Calumet park, 100th street and the lake.

Mr. Barnhard believes that Chicago in time will have a chorus superior to the 50,000 voice New York chorus which he has directed for several seasons in Central park.

Fireman Dies, 1 Hurt in $500,000 Car Barn Blaze

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 19.—Fire in the Hall street car barns of the Grand Rapids Street Railway company early today resulted in the death of one fireman, serious injury to another, $500,000 property damage and complete disruption of street car service in the southern section of the city.

300 POLICE ARE ON BOY KILLING CASE ON STATEN ISLAND

New York, July 19.—More than 300 detectives, uniformed patrolmen and special investigators, the greatest number ever assigned to run down a criminal on Staten island, continued the hunt tonight for the murderer of 8 year old Francis McDonnell.

The identity of the man who strangled the boy in a thicket near Port Richmond last Monday still remains a mystery.

Capt. Ernest Van Wagner, chief of Staten island detectives, said his forces are devoting themselves to a process of elimination. This means a thorough questioning of more than 2,000 patients, inmates and employes of the Sea View hospital and of the city poor farm.

The women's police reserves are taking an active part in the hunt.

'The Luckless Volunteer,' by D'Annunzio to Appear Soon

MILAN, Italy, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Treves brothers, publishers of the works of Gabriele d'Annunzio, announced today that he had approved the proofs of his new book, "The Luckless Volunteer," and that the work, of 175 pages, would appear at the end of the month. D'Annunzio wrote it in two months, working from fourteen to sixteen hours daily.

MAN FOUND DEAD ON TRAIN WAS A MURDER VICTIM

New York, July 19.—A man believed to have been Victor Petersen of Detroit, who was thought to have died of heart disease when his body was found on a New York Central train at Poughkeepsie last Wednesday, today was declared by police to have been murdered. An autopsy disclosed that he had died of strangulation. His body was found in a smoking compartment by a trainman ten hours after leaving Detroit.

CAUGHT IN STOLEN AUTO.

Edward Johnson, 10455 Corliss avenue, 18, and Edward Fletcher, 10632 Langley avenue, 17, were arrested by highway police yesterday in a stolen automobile.

"DUNES DIANA" ASSAILANT IS KILLED BY COLT

Gary, Ind., July 19.—[Special.]—Eugene Frank, 65, Miller, Ind., fisherman and hunter, who sprang into some prominence a year ago when he struck "Diana of the Dunes" over the head with a revolver and shot her "cave man" husband, Paul Wilson, in the foot, in self-defense, as he said, was instantly killed at Miller Beach last night. He attempted to ride a vicious colt, who threw him to the ground and rolled on top of the rider.

Frank leaves a widow and five children, two of whom are residents of Chicago, where Frank conducted a small bird store fifteen years ago.

FATHER OF TOWN HE BROKE SEIZED; TO FACE VICTIMS

Haywood, Wis., Official Gives Up in Oregon.

Portland, Ore., July 19.—[United Press.]—Henry E. Rohlf, former president of the First National Bank at Hayward, Wis., surrendered here today at the office of the United States marshal and Monday will leave in custody of an officer for Hayward to answer a complaint alleging embezzlement of $300,000.

Rohlf denied that he had taken a dollar of the bank's money, explaining that the institution failed Mar. 5, for about $250,000. The cashier, he asserted, defaulted nearly a year ago, and died a short time later. The large loss from the defalcation was not revealed until last spring.

Rohlf has been in Portland about two weeks, coming here from Los Angeles, where he had gone after a stay in Louisiana. He said that he was "flat broke" and had come here to raise money. He insisted that his every movement since leaving Wisconsin was known to his attorney in Hayward.

FATHER OF TOWN HE BROKE SEIZED; TO FACE VICTIMS

Haywood, Wis., Official Gives Up in Oregon.

Portland, Ore., July 19.—[United Press.]—Henry E. Rohlf, former president of the First National Bank at Hayward, Wis., surrendered here today at the office of the United States marshal and Monday will leave in custody of an officer for Hayward to answer a complaint alleging embezzlement of $300,000.

Rohlf denied that he had taken a dollar of the bank's money, explaining that the institution failed Mar. 4, for about $250,000. The cashier, he asserted, defaulted nearly a year ago, and died a short time later. The large loss from the defalcation was not revealed until last spring.

Rohlf has been in Portland about two weeks, coming here from Los Angeles, where he had gone after a stay in Louisiana. He said that he was "flat broke" and had come here to raise money. He insisted that his every movement since leaving Wisconsin was known to his attorney in Hayward.

The Father of Hayward.

Hayward, Wis., July 19.—[Special.]—Henry E. Rohlf, reported arrested in Portland, Ore., today on a charge of embezzling $300,000 from the First National bank of Hayward, Wis., of which he was president, was the first mayor of Hayward and was affectionately known as "the father of Hayward." He took an active part in the county's welfare and was generally the executive officer in practically every industry and civic organization. He handled the moneys of most of them.

Rohlf was toppled from his high position in Sawyer county, of which Hayward was the seat, last March 8, when state bank examiners closed the doors of his bank with losses then estimated at $100,000. Two days previous Rohlf had informed a meeting of depositors of the situation. He attributed the bank's difficulties to heavy withdrawals of funds by patrons. The bank examiners refused to state any reason as to the failure.

Almost Wrecked the Town.

The closing of the bank is reported to have nearly wrecked the town financially. Schools and libraries were reported affected, as a large portion of the city and county funds were on deposit in the bank.

Rohlf, when the bank was closed, was city treasurer, chairman of the Sawyer county board, chairman of the Sawyer county Republican committee, supervisor of the First ward, clerk of the Hayward Town Free High school district, secretary-treasurer of the Sawyer County Fair, association, secretary-treasurer of the Federal Farm Loan association, business manager of the Sawyer County Record, the city's only newspaper.

Hayward, a town of 1,500, is located in a prosperous dairy community.

Fathers and Mothers!

Don't Platoon Your School Children to Save the Tax Dodgers

"In a democracy such as ours it is always fitting to discuss problems of education with the people. Upon them rests the final responsibility for determining policies and deciding issues."

The Issue: "Shortage of School Revenue"

The Housing Commission says — "Platoon the Schools"
The Teachers say — "Stop Tax-Fixing and Tax-Dodging"

Why the Children Are to Be Platooned

One-Tenth of the Value of the Taxable Property in Chicago Bears the Entire Tax Burden

If the tax burden of Chicago were distributed over the entire value of the taxable property in Chicago, the present school revenue could be doubled and—

The tax rate could be cut down to one-fifth of the present rate

WHY ARE THE CHILDREN TO BE PLATOONED?

Answer: To save the big tax-dodgers at the expense of the little children.

The Commission on Housing appointed by the Board of Education reported—

"A shortage of school revenue seems imminent" • • •

"The platoon system in Chicago will reduce building cost."

The Commission recommended the introduction of the Platoon School. The Board authorized the Superintendent to platoon the elementary schools. The Superintendent is not limited to any specified schools, or to any specified number of schools.

The Business Manager of the Board is quoted as saying:

"Between 40,000 and 50,000 seats can be provided by platooning 150 elementary schools." • • •

"Present school buildings can be converted at little cost to the platoon system, and an increase in seating from 25 to 33 per cent is claimed by proponents of the plan." • • •

But there would be no "shortage of school revenue," no platooning of children, if the Tax Laws were enforced.

Everybody admits that our Tax Laws are not enforced. The "shortage of school revenue" is due to false assessments, under-assessments, unequal assessments, "fixed" assessments, and no assessments of legally taxable property.

The poor man, small property owner, and small business man are assessed on high valuations. Renters are told that rents are high because taxes are high. Tax rates are high because billions of dollars worth of taxable property—especially loop and corporation property, valuable sites held for speculation, stocks and bonds, etc.—are shamefully underassessed or not assessed at all.

Illegal tax evasion by the rich is loading the tax burden on the poor, and at the same time robbing the children of their rightful educational opportunity.

Vicious, interlocking, tax-fixing syndicates in Chicago, composed of tax officials and other officials, corporations, coal dealers, insurance agents, contractors, owners of valuable buildings and sites in the loop and elsewhere, are profiting enormously by "assessment-fixing." These syndicates are a rich source of campaign funds for political parties and candidates.

These campaign funds are used to elect tax officials and other public officials who keep up these tax-fixing, campaign-collecting syndicates at the expense of the honest taxpayers and the children.

The present system of taxation is out of date, but all attempts to get it changed by legal, orderly procedure, through legislative enactment, or to secure its strict and impartial enforcement, are defeated by the powerful combinations of these tax-fixing syndicates who profit by the existing tax situation.

The Board of Education, the City Council, the parents, teachers, and citizens generally should unite to end this intolerable tax situation—and do it now.

Evasion of their sworn duty by tax officials should not be allowed to cause the disorganization of our schools, and the limiting of the educational opportunities of our children. We of this generation have no right to cripple the children educationally and then to pass on to them this increasingly difficult task that we ourselves are too indifferent to undertake. There is grave danger that the next generation may accept this situation as a matter of course. And why not, when we are now so perilously near thus accepting it? Let us act now before it is too late.

The teachers of Chicago are ready and willing to do their share in this task of safeguarding the interests of the school children and taxpayers. Their good faith is shown in the fact that they have contributed $50,000 to be used for this purpose.

WHAT IS A PLATOON SCHOOL?

A Platoon School is a plan of organization by which from 10% to 70% more children are enrolled than there are seats for in classrooms. This is done by "dumping" the 10% to 70% on the playground, and into the auditorium or basement, and by keeping all the children rotating from room to room, teacher to teacher, so that the same 10% to 70% may not be kept waiting longer than thirty consecutive minutes to get into classrooms.

Even the six-year-old children have six or seven teachers a day and twelve to thirteen a week in some cities. Teachers handle as many as four hundred different pupils a day and a thousand a week.

A mother who withdrew her children from the Detroit Platoon school writes:

"These long lines of little children marching—marching—marching—looked to me like nothing so much as the lines of uncompleted Ford cars in the factory; moving always on, with a screw put in or a burr tightened as they pass by; standardized, mechanical, pitiful."

Nine Chicago classroom teachers spent a week last December visiting the Detroit Platoon schools and reported unanimously against the platoon system as detrimental to the children.

The only member of the Chicago Housing Commission actually engaged in elementary education presented a minority report to the Board of Education characterizing the platoon schools as "exactly the factory system of labor applied to the education of the child."

The two elementary teachers on the Commission sent by the Milwaukee Board of Education to visit platoon schools in eastern cities submitted a report strongly condemning the platoon system as being unsound educationally and injurious from the standpoint of health and hygiene.

The reports of these three groups of teachers have been printed and are available.

CIVIC LEADERS JOIN FIGHT ON MAIL ORDER GUN

Judge Caverly Pledges Vigorous Action.

Gun toting, mail order guns, and promiscuous issuing of permits to carry them by justices of the peace is to be fought harder than ever this year, Chief Justice John R. Caverly of the Criminal court announces.

"We are going to make a fight for the repeal of the Sadler act, particularly that portion of the act granting J. P.'s the right to issue gun permits," said the judge. "I have appointed a committee of men to work with me who are well versed in the matter."

Wants New Law.

The judge said that they hope to have a new law similar to the Sullivan law in New York, which makes it an offense punishable by seven years imprisonment in the penitentiary for any former convict to be found in possession of a revolver.

Those on Committee.

The personnel of the committee appointed includes Roy D. Keehn, of the Hearst papers; Victor F. Lawson, of the Chicago Daily News; John C. Shaffer, of the Chicago Evening Post; John C. Eastman, of the Chicago Daily Journal; Joseph M. Patterson, of THE TRIBUNE; Attorney General Edward J. Brundage, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, State Representatives David Shanahan and Michael L. Igoe; State Senators James J. Barbour and Edward J. Glackin, Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins, Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague, Henry Barrett Chamberlain, and Judges John M. O'Connor, Jacob H. Hopkins, and Harry Olson.

FULLER, M'GEE ARE FREED IN CONTEMPT CASE

New York, July 19.—Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee, bankrupt stock brokers, held in custody on Governors Island since last fall for contempt of the federal courts, were purged of the charge today by Federal Judge Goddard.

They agreed to appear as witnesses against William J. Fallon, their former attorney, who is charged with jury bribing, and Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, charged with the bucketing customer's orders. Both trials are on the calendar for next Monday.

Fuller and McGee were held in contempt for refusal to produce in bankruptcy proceedings records of their brokerage house.

NEW PASTOR OF ST. JOHN'S WILL OFFICIATE TODAY

Announcement was made yesterday that the Rt. Rev. William D. O'Brien, L. L. D., vice president and general secretary of the Catholic Church Extension society, recently appointed by Cardinal Mundelein as pastor of St. John's church, Eighteenth and Clark streets, will celebrate his first mass there at 11 o'clock this morning. Many of Monsignor O'Brien's old personal friends in Chicago will attend. Mgr. O'Brien was the first north side boy, years ago, to receive high degrees, including the L. L. D. at De Paul university.

ASSERTS FOREIGN POWERS MAY ACT IN BRAZIL REVOLT

BUENOS AIRES, July 19.—[By United Press.]—Intervention of foreign powers in Brazil to protect the rights of their nationals was discussed by the Argentine press today.

Italy and other European nations are expected to make an immediate gesture of protest against the inability of the government at Rio de Janeiro to give assurances that the rights of foreigners will be maintained.

The Buenos Aires newspapers point out that the censorship, which cut off all news from Brazil, has increased the apprehension of foreign interests and given rise to fears for the safety of foreign citizens. Sentiment among the rebels against the report of the Montague mission and against foreign financial intervention of any sort ran high at one time, and it is feared this might find expression in demonstrations against foreigners.

Little Girl of 4 Is Poisoned by Moonshine

Anna Marie Kurek, 4, was taken from her home at 1022 South Leavitt street to the county hospital early yesterday. Marquette police said she was suffering from moonshine poisoning. Mrs. Margaret Kurek, the mother, told the police the child had found a small bottle of the poison booze while playing around the house. The child will recover. No arrests were made.

SENATORS WILL SIFT DAUGHERTY PACKER ACTIVITY

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Investigation by the senate special department of justice committee of facts surrounding the entering of the packers' consent decree has been requested by the Farmers' National council through its managing director, Benjamin C. Marsh.

The request has been directed to Senator Brookhart [Rep., Ia.], chairman of the committee. He is asked to "investigate the conditions and reasons affecting the entering of the so-called packer consent decree, while A. Mitchell Palmer was attorney general, and the effort made in 1921, by H. M. Daugherty, while attorney general, suddenly to secure the modification or setting aside of decree without providing for a public hearing thereon."

One of Rail Brotherhoods Says It Will Aid La Follette

Detroit, Mich., July 19.—[By Associated Press.]—Senator Robert M. La Follette's presidential campaign will be given the unanimous support of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employés and Railway Shop Laborers, it was announced at the union's headquarters here today.

CAPTAIN KIDDS OF HIGH SEAS TO ROUT RUM ROW

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Liquor pirates will be of great assistance to prohibition enforcement officials in getting rid of the "rum row" nuisance. Capt. Bernard Camden, executive officer of the coast guard of the New York district, predicted today.

He declared that the booze fleet will be terrorized and eventually dispersed by the raiders who were responsible for the looting of the French steamship Mulhouse and a swarm of other desperadoes who will follow their example.

SALESMEN WANTED

One of our clients, a manufacturer of a very high grade product, is in need of salesmen to fill four good territories in the central west. The product has been nationally advertised for eight years. It has a broad market which is growing rapidly.

The men needed must be of the merchandising type. They must be the kind of men who know how to sell a plan for making more profit rather than the kind of men who sell so much material for so many dollars. We want only men who are interested in staying with us over a long period of time.

Salary and expenses are paid for securing a minimum amount of business. A bonus is paid on all business over the minimum. An ambitious worker can make $5,000 a year; expenses paid. Married men, close to 30 years of age, preferred.

SETTING OUT TO MAKE THE WHOLE WORLD GO DRY

Anti-Alcohol League Is Reinforcing.

Warsaw, Ind., July 19.—[Special.]—Possibilities for world-wide prohibition were discussed today at the conference of the World League Against Alcoholism, in session at Winona Lake.

The league's program for waging an aggressive campaign in every country on earth was given impetus by addresses of dry workers who have already invaded foreign fields successfully.

"America has set the pace," said William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, who has given an eye to the cause of prohibition and who plans within a week to sail for Egypt to resume his fight against the liquor traffic there.

600,000,000 "Religiously" Dry.

"With America setting the example, the world will eventually adopt prohibition," he continued. "There are 600,000,000 people who have been taught total abstinence as a religious principle for 1,200 years."

"Great universities and colleges afford the best medium for a short cut to world prohibition," said Dr. Ira Landrith, president of the Intercollegiate Prohibition association and once candidate for Vice President on the Prohibition ticket.

"Our great universities have been too conservative and too diplomatic to lead the prohibition fight as they should. But the time is still ripe. The world will never go dry unless the colleges and universities mobilize."

Looks to Alien Students for Aid.

"Included in the enrollment of the great American colleges are more than 10,000 foreign students," declared Cora Frances Stoddard of Boston, general secretary of the Scientific Temperance federation. "These students will be leaders in their home countries and will be a force for prohibition if the prohibition idea is inculcated here."

Judge Richard J. Hopkins of the Kansas Supreme court said the saloon "is a parasite to business and Kansas has proved it."

The conference will close tomorrow, with addresses by Bishop William P. Anderson, Mrs. Ella Alexander Poole, vice president of the W. C. T. U. of America; Dr. Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon league; Roy Haynes, federal prohibition director; Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World league; Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, and Bishop James Cannon Jr.

PUSH DRY MOP

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, now in conference at Winona Lake, Ind.

F. Scott McBride, new general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

2 Bandits Rob Waukegan Storekeeper of $400 Cash

Waukegan, Ill., July 19.—Two unmasked bandits walked into Benson's men's furnishing store at Waukegan tonight and after asking the proprietor, Harry Benson, to cash a check for them, covered him with revolvers, locked him in a lavatory and escaped with $400.

NEW HOOTCH WAR PUT IN HANDS OF PITTSBURGH MAN

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Appointment of Arthur W. Henderson of Pittsburgh, Pa., as special assistant to the attorney general to handle rum smuggling cases under the direction of Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt, who has general charge of prohibition matters in the department of justice, was announced today by Attorney General Stone.

With the increased personnel and additional facilities granted to the coast guard by the last congress, the government intends to take vigorous steps to control the rum smuggling situation by the forfeiture of vessels engaged in that business and the prosecution of all persons connected therewith. Prosecutions will be instituted under the national prohibition act, the tariff act, and the smuggling provisions of the revised statutes under the extended jurisdiction permitted by the recent treaty with Great Britain.

LEAGUE CLOSES 26 VICE RESORTS IN EIGHTH WARD

Twenty-six vice and "bootleg" resorts have been closed during the last year, due to the efforts of the Eighth Ward Law and Order league, according to a report made to its board of directors by John G. Rietz, retiring president. This is the first year of the league's existence.

Mr. Rietz told the board that this record betters the record of any similar organization in the city during a similar period. United States District Attorney Edwin A. Olson commended the work of the league.

Officers elected for the coming year, who are to be installed July 29, are as follows: Norwood Straton, president; C. H. Boughton, vice president; the Rev. C. J. Anderson, secretary, and J. A. Farkhurst, treasurer.

SEIZE MAN AS ACCOMPLICE IN MAJOR'S SLAYING

Columbus, Ga., July 19.—Louie Johnson, suspected of being an accomplice in the slaying of Maj. Samuel H. McLeary near Sheraw, S. ROME, July 19.—[By the United News.]—More than 100 women have been refused permission to attend papal public audiences in the last two days owing to their failure to conform to the dress styles demanded by the pope. $650,000 FIRE AT EVANSVILLE, IND.

Evansville, Ind., July 19.—A four story brick building housing the Sterling Products company was destroyed by fire here tonight with an estimated loss of $650,000.

BRENNAN, BACK FROM EAST, SURE OF PARTY SUCCESS

George E. Brennan returned from New York yesterday more confident than ever of Democratic success next fall. He had been in conference with the party's presidential nominee, John W. Davis, and his advisers.

"Reports have begun to come back from the leaders who returned home from the convention," he said, "and they show the prospects even brighter than they seemed at the time Mr. Davis was nominated. His personality continues to impress itself strongly upon those who meet him, and it is certain that his candidacy will grow as the country becomes better acquainted with him."

There will be a Democratic headquarters in Chicago soon, but Brennan said the question of the personnel of the management had not been settled. The best information that has come from New York is that William A. Comstock of Detroit may be in charge, and that Scott Ferris of Oklahoma will assist him. Clem L. Shaver, prospective national chairman, is expected to divide his time between New York and Chicago.

TOLLER TELLS OF BRUTALITIES IN BAVARIAN PRISON

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 19.—A plea from Ernst Toller, most famous of Germany's young poets and dramatists, released after years in a Bavarian prison for participating in a revolution, was read in the reichstag today. The document described the brutalities in the Bavarian prison which political prisoners suffer.

Herr Toller, who last night saw one of his four successful plays for the first time on any stage, today made his own drama when describing the injustices of the Bavarian prisons. He told how his fellow prisoners, some poets and writers, were dying slowly from starvation, while Count Arco Devally, Bavarian monarchist, who assassinated Herr Eisner, former head of the revolutionary republic, is enjoying his freedom.

Herr Toller asked the reichstag to permit him to spend all his money bending food to his fellow prisoners, inasmuch as the Bavarian prison authorities refuse to permit food to enter for political prisoners.

Meeting the Power Demands of Diversified Industries

WHILE the Public Service Company supplies electric light to 160,000 homes, stores, offices and factories, and furnishes electric street lighting for 137 communities, that part of the electricity it sells represents only 19 per cent.

Eighty-one per cent of the electricity sold by the Company is power. Electric power business of the Company has exceeded the electric lighting business ever since 1913.

In the twelve years ending 1923, electric power business increased 491.4 per cent, as compared with the gain in lighting of 241.5 per cent. And up to June 30 of this year 931 new power users have been added to the customer list of this Company, which includes this wide field of productive activity:—

KEWANEE

Burns Oil With Great Efficiency

The public mind is full of oil, and many prospective builders are asking if Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers can use it advantageously as fuel. We hasten to reply that in those cities adjacent to the big oil fields, these boilers are used in most of the medium and larger sized buildings, and have been used for years.

The Kewanee is undoubtedly nearer perfection for oil burning than any other boiler made. Because of the extreme heat produced by oil burning, a boiler with a large water content is absolutely necessary. It is also essential that this water shall circulate rapidly in contact with the heated surface of the tubes and firebox.

Two No. 111 Kewanee Smokeless Oil Burning Boilers

Kewanee Boilers are designed to absorb the extreme heat of oil fire and still carry a steady water line—likewise to afford opportunity for a perfect mixture of the gases of combustion. Hence, the Kewanee firebox is neither too long, too high nor too wide. It is perfectly proportioned. If you are an oil bug, get in touch with our branch office nearest you and ask for detailed information.

Or, write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler and request a slice of his practical wisdom which has made Kewanee Boilers famous for efficiency and long life

MEXICO TO OPEN NEW DICKER FOR MRS. EVANS' LAND

U. S. Envoy Tells Status of Controversy.

By FREDERICK NEUMEIER.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, July 19.—Ambassador Charles Beecher Warren at a farewell meeting with United States newspaper men this morning outlined the situation in connection with the seizure of lands owned by Mrs. Rosalie Evans.

She is a former American woman, now a British subject, who has been fighting against the taking of her hacienda near Puebla. Her case has attracted world wide attention, and was said to be one of the reasons why the Mexican government secured the recall recently of the British charge d'affaires.

Mr. Warren said Mrs. Evans originally had 1,066 hectares in her hacienda, and that since 1922 up to last year several pieces of property had been taken as "ejidos."

Sought Land for School.

He stated that in 1923 a presidential decree had been issued expropriating the entire property for public utility for an agricultural school, this action having been taken for the purpose of negotiating for the purchase of this land by the Mexican government for public utility. The negotiations, however, never reached a basis for purchase, and the decree still stands. The case is now awaiting commencement of new negotiations under this decree.

In the spring of this year the agrarian district near the Evans hacienda secured an "ejido" of from 150 to 200 hectares as a grant to one of the villages. The land is an approach to Mrs. Evans' irrigation system, and therefore important to her. She was permitted to harvest the wheat crop on this land. She is still combatting these expropriations and is living in her ranch home.

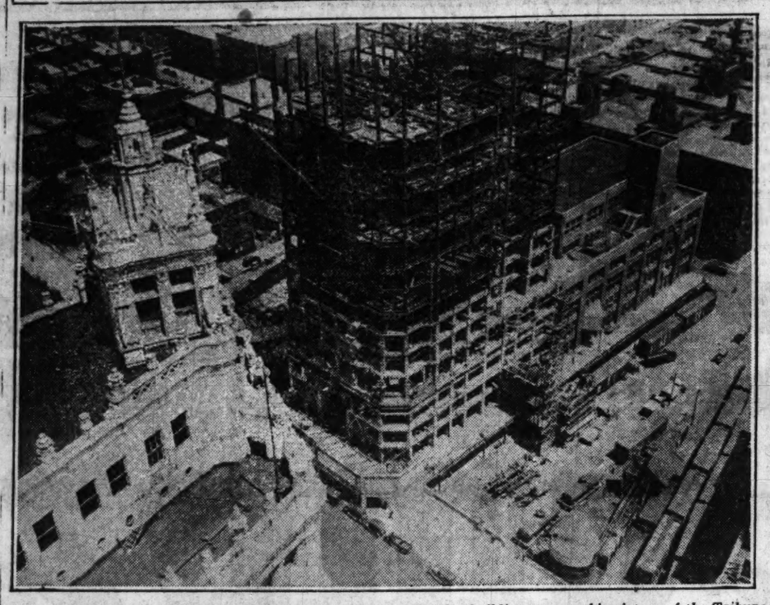
Mr. Warren made his investigations after the affairs of the British subjects were turned over to him when British Charge d'Affaires Cummins was recalled to London.

American to Get Settlement.

Relative to the expropriation of property of A. S. Sharpton, an American, in the state of San Luis Potosi as an "ejido" some time ago, Mr. Warren stated the Mexican government had advised him that a proper adjustment would be made.

Mr. Warren will leave here Tuesday for his home in Detroit. After a few days there he will go to Washington and resign.

TRIBUNE TOWER KEEPS REACHING SKYWARD



The photographer climbed to the top floors of the Wrigley building to snap this picture of the Tribune Tower. Construction work on "the world's most beautiful building" is being pushed steadily forward, and it will not be many days until the steel structure is completed.

HOFFMAN STILL IS ON ANXIOUS SEAT IN DRAFKA CASE

Sheriff Peter Hoffman's appeal to be removed from his position "between the devil and the deep blue sea" yesterday met with little sympathy from Federal Judge Wilkerson, who affirmed his injunction restraining the sheriff from serving state warrants on eight federal officials ordered arrested by Criminal Court Judge William J. Lindsay.

Judge Lindsay ordered the arrest of the federal officials after they had refused to appear before him on subpenas.

Judge Lindsay has indicated he will not weaken in his determination to stage a jurisdictional "fight to the finish."

As a consequence of the decision Sheriff Hoffman now faces contempt of court proceedings from the state if he obeys Judge Wilkerson's injunction and a similar action from the government if he tries the other way.

250 SOLDIERS AND 12 PLANES READY AT FOREST FIRES

San Francisco, Cal., July 19.—Two hundred and fifty soldiers from San Francisco were ordered to the forests today and began fire patrol duty. Twelve airplanes were made available for patrol work.

"The situation is serious, but is not out of control," was District Forester Reddington's characterization of the situation.

Reports showed that practically all of the coast forest fires today were of minor importance compared to the conflagration of last week. Troops will be used to relieve rangers, whose time is largely occupied with patrol and lookout work.

POLICE HUNT MISSING YOUTH.

Police are searching for Mathew A. Connor of 1203 Benton street, Joliet, Ill., who disappeared from 4506 Prairie avenue seven weeks ago. Connor was a student at the Greer College of Automotive Engineering. Mrs. S. J. Connor, his mother, is dangerously ill.

HOOTCH FLAVORS 35 PCT. OF JUNE PROBATION LIST

187 Liquor Cases Out of 533 in Courts.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

More than 35 per cent of the adults placed on probation last month in Chicago were either makers, sellers, possessors, or drinkers of intoxicants. The figures were compiled by Chief Probation Officer John W. Houston. He makes no comments, no comparisons, nor draws any conclusions.

Some bone dry advocate might be certain that the man who manufactures whisky thereby deliberately sets out to violate the law and should be given a heavy penalty. Ninety-nine per cent of the 265,000 auto owners in Chicago would probably declare without hesitation that the drunken driver should be lodged in jail instead of being placed on probation. But former Judge Houston's job, in his opinion, is to see that every one obeys the conditions of his probation. He outdoes Coolidge for silence.

Figures Show Conditions.

Here are his figures. The total number of adults placed upon probation during June in both the Criminal and Municipal courts was 533. Of these 187 were liquor cases, which may be classified as follows:

OFFENSE—	NUMBER
Having a "still"	2
Selling "moonshine"	3
Driving auto while intoxicated	15
Having liquor in possession	40
Plain drunks and wife beating while drunk	127
Total	187

It is not possible to indicate by the probation records whether excessive use of intoxicants is on the increase or decrease. This is the first time that records of this kind have been compiled by an official who has no interest in what they reveal. Former Judge Houston's object was to ascertain in detail the character of the offense that his office might be more proficient in handling each probationer.

Probationers on Increase.

Incidentally, the number of persons placed on probation in the last few months is on the increase. At the rate of the first six months of the adult probation year there will be 4,900 persons who will escape punishment by being placed on probation. The highest number in any one year heretofore has been 4,696. The tendency in the Criminal court in the last few months has been to reduce the number of probationers, while the Municipal court is headed in the opposite direction.

Mrs. Myra H. McCarthy yesterday was granted a divorce and $400 monthly alimony from Justin G. McCarthy, wealthy interior decorator, with offices at 1832 South Wabash avenue. 1,200 TEACHERS SEEK PLACES IN JUNIOR HIGHS

Twelve hundred elementary school teachers are prepared to take examinations for teaching in the new junior high schools, William H. Campbell, secretary of the board of examiners, announced yesterday. The tests will be given on Saturday, July 26.

Only 200 teachers are needed for the new schools. Those who head the list will be chosen, the remainder will continue in the elementary schools and be moved up as soon as new junior high schools are built.

South Haven Girl and Escort Have Disappeared

South Haven, Mich., July 19.—[Special.]—Marian Triece, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Triece of this city, has been missing since Thursday evening about 9 o'clock. Mrs. Triece and her daughter attended prayer meeting and on the way home met Legrand Siver. He walked to their door and Mrs. Triese went in. That was the last seen of Miss Triece and Siver. It is thought by the family that they may have eloped to Kalamazoo or to Chicago. Both young people are popular in school and both good students.

Oil-Burners for the Smallest Bungalow to the Tallest Skyscraper

for small homes—by a new plan

A perfect oil-burner that fits your present furnace, proved in thousands of homes. Now offered small home-owners at a new low price—within reach of all. Get facts.

HERE is clean, wasteless heat for small home-owners who annually struggle with dirty, expensive coal furnaces. Now offered at a new low price, with terms to suit the convenience of all.

This offers a new oil-burner—now perfected for smaller homes, too. It brings to 6 and 8-room houses, bungalows, 2-apartment houses, luxurious, healthful heat without care, attention.

Oil heat has long been the accepted new-day way to heat homes. But there has never been an oil-burner made for smaller homes. The regular burners supplied too much heat—hence were wasteful. Now we offer this new smaller oil-burner, the lowest priced completely automatic burner on the market. The prices quoted include all installation.

Here's how it works

This new oil-burner fits right in your present furnace. Part of the equipment provided is a thermostat which goes in your living rooms.

When cool weather begins you simply set the thermostat at the desired heat you want. After that this oil-burner does all the thinking. When a cold snap comes it automatically opens the valve allowing more oil to feed in. And closes it on warmer days. You can simply forget it. For the temperature will remain uniform in every room in the house—24 hours a day—all winter.

Think what a relief this is! Coal furnaces need early morning attention. And a good-night banking. They're apt to die on the coldest day—when the family is alone in the house. Then, too, coal is dirty, bulky, sooty. The smoke is disagreeable.

Oil is clean, wasteless. Every last drop gives up its heat—no ashes—no smoke.

And now on monthly terms

Small home-owners asked us to make this oil-burner for them. They knew how successful this system was in larger homes. After 18 months' experimenting, our engineers were successful. Now, tested, proved—this oil-burner should be in your home, too.

So we have arranged for special terms. Really just a few pennies a day will bring this new oil-burner to you. And you'll thank us every day this winter when it's in.

You pay the furnace man $15 a month, and there's $3 a month for the ash man. That's $18 you save toward your oil-burner. If you do this work yourself your own time is worth that.

Now for a small down payment and as low as $25 a month this burner will be installed complete in your home. That's really but $7 a month—less than 25c a day—over what you save by oil. And the joy of a comfortable home—the relief from the uncertainty, the dirt and soot, of coal.

Get the facts now. Send the coupon today for our new book on oil burning, free. Do not delay. Act now.

Send coupon for book—Get the facts today

This new oil-burner banishes coal-furnace annoyance. It brings a new freedom, a new comfort to small home-owners. Here is heat—constant, controlled, steady—24 hours a day, without the bother of coal. You pay for it almost out of your savings—just a few pennies a day.

HORSE SHOW AT MAYSLAKE CLUB BRILLIANT EVENT

Jolly Old Time Spirit Pervades Meet.

BY PANDORA.

Memories of the old time horse show at Lenox, Mass., hovered in the air yesterday, casting golden shadows on the third annual equine showing at Mayslake Hunt club. For, instead of the formality that is threatening to disrupt the simplicity of summer outings hereabouts, there was the spirit of the picnic.

Even the club luncheon, which "Jack" Peabodys gave to those gathered on the outskirts of Hinsdale, was served on plaid gingham table covers in and out of doors.

Meekers on Hand.

The Arthur Meekers arrived for luncheon, and afterwards, while Mrs. Meeker wandered about greeting friends, Mrs. Meeker, with Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody and Mrs. Robert Hall, held court in one of the impromptu motor car boxes.

Many Women Ride.

Many feminine entrants rode, now on their own horses, and again on those of others. "Libby" Chase came in third in the ladies' hunter class, riding Golden Sunrise, Mrs. Paul Llewellyn's horse, to her sister Janet's second. Golden Sunset, although she had a hard time with one of her mounts, the temperamental Lucy Glitters, owned by E. J. Prendergast, chairman of the club entertainment committee. It was in this class that Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, riding Grey Cloud, one of Benjamin Behr's prize steeds, took the blue ribbon.

In the first event of the day, for hunters and jumpers, Mrs. John Hertz's Lumber Jack, came out victorious, with Kliconnell of Arden Farm second, and the famous Golden Heart, ridden by Jack Peabody himself, third.

In the pony class, little Beatrice Dickinson on Sir Grub, captured the first prize, with young Medill McCormick second on his brown and white Snip, and Authora Naylor, the smallest entrant of all, third, on Snowball. Mrs. Medill McCormick, in a trim linen frock and the popular tangerine shade, held the youngster's bridle until they went out on the field, then hurried around to the other side to watch them.

Hundreds Watch Show.

Over the white railing and in the automobile gallery were hundreds of watchers, young and old. Mrs. William E. Swift, in a cocoa colored suit and white felt hat, arrived about the middle of the afternoon, as she was riding, although when the show was arranged, she had planned to do so. Owing to Strike Breaker's accident which hurt his knee, he was withdrawn.

Mrs. James Minotto brought several of her guests of last evening from Lake Forest for luncheon. She wore a sports frock of lemon yellow, augmented in crimson. The Hemp Washburnes had Virginia and Charles Dennehy Jr., and C. F. Clarke with them. Bill Beeson and Mildred Hubbard sat in Libby Chase's car while Janet Chase and her sister were getting through their paces.

All In Fine Form.

Mrs. A. C. Thompson and Mrs. M. M. Harris carried off the honors in the Ladies class of the day, but the lookers awarded extra honors to Mrs. James G. Alexander, Miss Ida Miss Alice Coonley and Frances Emily Hamill, daughters of the Hamills of Hinsdale.

Of course both the Hamills were there, and the Prentiss Coonleys, Austin H. Niblacks and the Dirk Ingens, the Otto Lehmanns and E. J.'s, and others, including Larned, Henry Hooper, Miss Ina Prince, the John D. Matzes, the C. bus Healys, and the W. P. Saun with Miss Louise Townsend and Roberts as their guests.

BORI ACHIEVES NEW SUCCESS IN RAVINIA OPERA

Sings Lyric Farce to Wide Acclaim.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

This being Lucrezia Bori's busy week, she sang two rôles at Ravinia last night. One was the Countess in "The Secret of Euzanne," the other the part in which she scored 100 per cent in the public liking the opening night of the season, Nedda in "Pagliacci."

"The Secret of Suzanne" came first. In this merry campaign document of the pro-cigarette she played and sang with light, deft touch making her points quite as certainly as she had the night before in the tragedy of the love of the three kings.

In other words, she is as good in lyric farce as in the heavier and gloomier works which by custom hold the stage when opera is to be performed. She was a gladsome and light hearted figure in her crinolined costume amply assisted in this case by Vincente Ballester as the count.

In Baritone's Front Rank.

This talented baritone has accomplished a remarkable vocal comeback since the first nights of the season. He needs few apologies for the condition of his throat now, being just about where he was at the corresponding date last summer, which means that he is marching in the front rank of baritones.

He played the piece in a fine spirit of farce, well paced, and perfectly timed. Another asset of the performance was the pantomine part of the butler as done by Giordano Paltrinieri, who has developed the rôle into an outstanding comedy bit.

Altogether the piece went with more effect than I have seen it do in several seasons, chiefly, one would imagine, because it betrayed the symptoms of having been more carefully rehearsed.

Mariobasiola Earns Applause.

There was only one change in the cast of Pagliacci over the former performance. That one was in the part of Tonio, where Mariobasiola lent his meaty voice to the song in the prologue and earned several loud rounds of deserved applause by so doing. Elsewhere there was the magnificent singing of Giovanni Martinelli, and the fascinating performance of Miss Bori, greatest of the Neddas.

SOCIETY PLAYS AT CIRCUS TO HELP CHILDREN

Three sharp trumpet blasts, the shrill cry of the ringmaster's whistle, and the gay, rollicking circus costume benefit held Friday night at the Lake Forest home of Louis F. Swift was under way. The benefit is an annual affair, the proceeds going to the Children's Memorial hospital.

Society was there in force, playing the rôles of cowboys, clowns, bandits, tight rope walkers, the ladies of the ring, and, lastly, the farmers and their lassies. Mr. Swift's daughter, Mrs. James Minotto, with Mr. Minotto, acted as host.

The side shows, presided over by Joe Marks, proved quite as entertaining as the "big tent." "Hit the colored baby and win a great, big doll!" shouted the barker, and society tried its luck. Later there was dancing in the "Old Stables" of the Swift place, and the party continued till the first streaks of dawn.

IDENTIFY FAKE BANK TELLER AS FORMER CONVICT

"Charles Reene," the suave young man who attempted to get employment at the West Side National Bank of Chicago by means of stolen references, was identified yesterday as John M. Barry, alias numerous other names.

About six months ago he was paroled from Sing Sing penitentiary after serving several years for grand larceny. Since then, it is charged, he stole more than $100,000 from six New York banks after getting jobs as a paying teller with the aid of references taken from reputable bank clerks. In March he was indicted for embezzlement, but last month he escaped from the custody of a deputy United States marshal in New York and fled to Chicago.

Among Barry's effects at the Planters hotel, where he was registered as "George Platt," were found an alphabetic code and a bottle of peroxide to use in bleaching his hair. Hhe prisoner was turned over to the federal department of justice.

Auto Crash Four Years Ago Cause of Death

A coroner's jury decided yesterday that an automobile accident which occurred four years ago was the indirect cause of the death Thursday of Edward Johour, 4727 South Avers avenue. A piece of windshield glass which was lodged in his right temple worked through to the brain, and Johour died following an operation to remove it.

James Murphy, 57, 3525 Fifth avenue, died yesterday at Mercy hospital, where he was taken Friday after being struck on the head with a heavy cable.

HASKELL IS FOUND INCOMPETENT TO HANDLE ESTATE

Franklin S. Haskell, wealthy secretary of the Haskell Trunk company, 218 North Wells street, and living at the Edgewater Beach hotel, was adjudged mentally deranged by a jury in Probate Judge Henry Horner's court yesterday.

His wife, Mrs. Emma H. Haskell, will be appointed conservatrix of Haskell's estate, said to be worth approximately $100,000. The jury's finding was based on the testimony of Dr. E. I. Davis and Haskell himself, who denied his identity.

Recently Haskell was fined $200 and sentenced to ten days in jail for contempt of court by Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan. Haskell had defied an injunction restraining him from interfering with the removal of the stock of one of his tenants, Arstens, Inc.

THOMPSON GOES DOWN SOUTH; NO WORD TO SMALL

Contrary to expectations, William Hale Thompson left Chicago last night without formally severing the ties between him and Gov. Len Small.

For months he has been insisting that Small choose between Thompson and Lundin and has said that unless he is made the governor's Cook county leader he would "go fishing" during the campaign. He has left to join his Borneo-bound ketch, the "Big Bill," but his last word was that he will return to Chicago following a St. Louis celebration when the vessel reaches that port next Thursday. Then he plans to take part in a New Orleans banquet on Aug. 14.

He said he had nothing to say about politics before his departure. "That means you have given the governor a few more days of grace?" he was asked. The answer was in the affirmative.

COLOMBES, France, July 19.—[By Associated Press.]—The United States won the first of the finals in the Olympic tennis championships this afternoon when Miss Helen Wills and Mrs. George Wightman defeated Miss Kathleen McKane and Mrs. Phyllis Covell, Great Britain, 7—5, 8—6.

Members of the American Olympic squad will be on one side of the nets in the finals for the three other principal championships, the men's singles, women's singles and men's doubles, and there is a further possibility that the Stars and Stripes may flutter from the side of the scoreboard when the fifth and last event, mixed doubles, is concluded Monday.

Vincent Richards, who will meet Henri Cochet, France, tomorrow for the foremost of all five titles to be won on the Olympian courts, that of singles champion, has also reached the finals in the men's doubles. He and his partner, Francis T. Hunter, today vanquished the slim and fleetfooted French team, Borotra and La Coste, in five sets of fast play, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4, 5—7, 8—3.

French Doubles Team Wins.

Their opponents will be another Gallic pair, Brugnon and Cochet, who greatly pleased their countrymen today by defeating the South Africans, Condon and Richardson, 5—7, 6—3, 7—5, 10—8.

Richards has an opportunity to carry the triple title away from Colombes. Not only has he reached the finals in both singles and doubles, but, paired with Mrs. Marion Jessup, he is still in the running for the mixed doubles championship. Richards and Mrs. Jessup this afternoon reached the semi-finals in that event by an easy victory over the Spanish couple, Eduardo Flaquer and Senorita Alvarez, 6—3, 6—1.

The finals for the women's title between Miss Wills and Mlle. Vlasto, France, is scheduled for 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, with the men's title to be decided after the two young ladies have settled their match.

Large Crowd Sees Match.

The battle for the women's doubles championship this afternoon was intensely interesting throughout.

For the British, disappointment twice followed hope and joy, their team having led the Americans at 5—2 in both first and second sets. Indeed, the British players were once within a point of taking the second set, 6—2.

From the start of the match to the end Miss Wills was the star player of the quartet. Her errors were few, her fine finishing shots were many. Throughout, her judgment was good, and when she and her partner were behind and seemingly about to lose the set it was her fighting spirit that flashed out above the solid foundation of the sound, steady tennis that Mrs. Wightman played in emergencies, to lend bright magnificence to their forged, yet dashing, battle against the British women.

Under the fury of Miss Wills' driving and Mrs. Wightman's neat backhand shots, made in a manner all her own from midcourt, Mrs. Covell faltered, then failed. This happened in both first and second sets, and all that Miss McKane could do would not ward off defeat.

Several Close Decisions.

There were several close line decisions during the match. One of them was called at a time when Mrs. Covell was serving, and the British pair had but one point to win to capture the second set. It was on a high lob which Mrs. Covell lifted deep over the American's court, and the linesman called it out.

There were cries of "No!" in both French and English from the stands, and perhaps Mrs. Covell was not only disappointed, but a little flustered at the vent. She proceeded to serve a double fault, and the score became uoce. From this point of equality the Americans went ahead and took the game on two more errors by Mrs. Covell. Then they took several more games.

In the next to the last game of the match, with the score six and all and Miss Wills serving, a similar long lob from her racquet, which was pronounced inside the back court line, evoked a chorus of "booes" from some of the crowd. The shouts of disapproval, however, were not made in English.

Helen Leads Way to Win.

Calm and solemn as she always is on the court, no matter what happens, Miss Wills awaited for the noises to subside, then went ahead with a good service and ultimately won the game, to lead at 7—6. It was the first time the Americans had been in front in the second set.

In the last game the Americans smashed through Miss McKane's service to win the match. They rushed to the net after each serve, Miss Wills and then Mrs. Wightman forcing Miss McKane to net their first returns of her service by driving hard at her feet. She got the score to 15—40, when a smash from the British side flicked off the wood of Miss Wills' racquet. In a subsequent exchange of shots Mrs. Covell was unable to return a hard drive by Miss Wills and the set and match were over.

OLD ELI—WORLD'S ROWING CHAMPIONS

J. S. ROCKEFELLER.

YALE BEATING NAVY OFFICERS AT PHILADELPHIA.

ED LEADER.

Yale's great varsity crew, by virtue of its recent Olympic victory on the Seine in Paris, can rightfully claim the world's rowing title, while the name Ed Leader, the Bulldog's coach, goes to the head of a long line of successful crew coaches. Yale's claim to the title is undisputed, as it was won in six great races over varying distances. On June 14 the crew won the right to represent America in the Olympics by defeating the Navy Officers and the Navy varsity crews in a mile and a quarter race on the Schuylkill at Philadelphia. Six days later, over the four mile course on the Thames at New London, Yale's ancient rivals, Harvard, were taken into camp, and then, last week, on the Seine in Paris, the Yankees defeated the crack crews of Canada, Italy, and Great Britain over the 2,000 meter Olympic course. On May 3 Yale beat Penn and Columbia over a mile and three quarters course on the Housatonic, and two weeks later cleaned up Princeton and Cornell on Lake Carnegie. The Bulldog oarsmen won their way to the finals in the Olympic trials on June 13, beating the Navy varsity, the Navy junior varsity, and the Undine Barge club. J. S. Rockefeller, a relative of the oil king, is No. 4 and captain of the crew, while the other members are, bow, Carpenter; No. 2, Sheffield; No. 3, Wilson; No. 5, Miller; No. 6, Kingsbury; No. 7, Spoch; stroke, Lindsay, and, coxswain, Stoddard.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Bill Killefer's kids punched the ball all over the north side park yesterday afternoon and knocked the forlorn Phillies flat in both games of a double header, thus getting four victories out of the series of five games. They romped home in the first combat, 9 to 3, and bagged the second with ease and grace, 7 to 2. If it interests anyone, they picked up half a game on the Giants, but they still are eight full sized combats behind.

It was timely punching in both games that made the victories so ridiculously easy. As a rule, it's easy to win when the boys are hitting. They seem to have quite recovered from the batting slump that put them and the manager and half the population of Chicago into the slough of despond during the last three weeks, and if they had only regained that punch a week earlier the New York Giants might not have humiliated us in such fashion.

Statz Hits 'Em Far.

Nearly every player on the team has regained the old punch, but yesterday the honors of the day were gained by Young Jigger Statz, who suffered such a terrific slump recently. Jigger could hit anything that was thrown up to him yesterday, and he knew it, and before the afternoon was over he had the Saturday afternoon crowd applauding him. In the first contest he got a triple and a single in four times up, out in the second nothing could stop him. He was up five times and he made four singles and a three bagger, which is quite some clouting.

Sparky Adams, who knocked the daylights out of the Phils on the preceding day, had a lot to do with the victory in the first game yesterday with three blows in four times up. Leo Cotter, who faded and died many times while the club was in the slump, got a base on balls, two singles and a double in the second game. Young Denver Grigsby poled a homer and a single in the second game, and Heathcote and Hollocher delivered timely blows in the opener. Just seemed easy to win with the boys slapping the old pill.

First Man Hits Homer.

Tony Kaufmann was sent to the rubber in the opener and the first man who faced him knocked the ball into the left field bleacher for a home run, indicating that the gang was in for trouble, but Tony tightened up, his mates tied the count in their half of the first because of clever base running by Adams and then in the third, they went outand slaughtered the Phils for four runs. Carlson was on the rubber, but he disappeared after that inning, Couch taking the job. In the fifth Mr. Couch was knocked for a row of four tallies and was rushed out of sight, a young

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question J. D. Grarson, 1655 N. Ashland avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Name the ranking sports in your estimation.

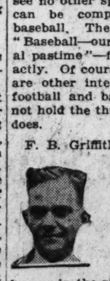
Where Asked.

Diversey parkway and Clark street.

The Answers.

Rex Bain, 906 Oakdale avenue, real estate salesman—Sports in my opinion should be ranked as follows: Golf, baseball, and tennis. I favor golf over all other sports because everybody can play it. In my opinion it will be only a question of time before it will be our national game.

Walter Adamowski, 2745 North Ashland, retired—Baseball absolutely ranks above any other sport. I can see no other sport that can be compared to baseball. The phrase, "Baseball—our national pastime"—fits it exactly. Of course, there are other interesting sports such as football and basketball, but these do not hold the thrill for me that baseball does.



F. B. Griffith, 906 Oakdale avenue, signal operator—Boxing above all in my opinion. The art of self-defense is a manly art in every sense of the word, and for that reason I favor it over all other sports. Seeing two evenly matched boxers in the ring furnishes more of a kick for me than watching two baseball teams battling on the diamond.

Thomas Schweitzer, 2816 Greenview avenue, chauffeur — I favor motoring, although it scarcely can be classed as sport. There is nothing better than a nice, long trip through the country where one is away from the throngs that gather at some of our popular sporting events such as baseball games now and grid battles in the fall.

E. B. Cameron, 1454 Berteau avenue, salesman — I would rank sports in the following order: Tennis, swimming and baseball. I believe tennis is the best of the numerous sports we indulge in, not only for the amusement itself, but also for the exercise one gets while playing it. I always have been an ardent devotee of this interesting game.

FRENCH OLYMPIC BOXER IS BARRED; RIOT FOLLOWS

PARIS, July 13.—[By Associated Press.]—The United States enters the Olympic boxing finals tomorrow evening with only four contestants—Fidel La Barba, Los Angeles A. C., in the flyweight; S. Tripolle, Yonkers, N. Y., in the bantam class, and Jack Fields and Joe Salas, both Los Angeles A. C., in the featherweight class.

If the United States wins all of these bouts she will clinch the championship, thanks to the elimination of Porzio of Argentina, by Von Porat of Norway in the heavyweight class.

La Barbara Beats Italian.

Labara defeated Caste of Italy in his bout today. The Yank led the entire distance, showing some classy infield ability. Tripolie remained in the competition by taking a close scrap from Andren of Sweden. He sent his opponent to the ropes frequently and landed numerous hooks to the jaw.

After an almost even match, Calas was awarded the decision over the Belgian, De Vergnies. It looked in the third round as if the Belgian might win, but the Yank came back strong and landed enough punches to gain a margin.

Police reserves were called to quell a riot caused by the announcement that Brousse, the French star, had been disqualified for biting the Englishman, Walten, in their match last night.

Fields Beats Argentinian.

In defeating Quartucci, of Argentina Jack Fields put up a good bout. At the end of the second round it was about fifty-fifty after a quick cross-fire exchange of blows.

In the third the Argentine seemed to have a slight edge, sending Fields off his feet for an instant, but Fields was up before the referee could begin the count. The American boy finished fresh and got the decision.

The welterweight Mendez, Argentina, defeated Dwyer, Ireland, on a technical knockout. McKenzie of Great Britain defeated Ray Fee, of San Francisco on points.

In the lightweight class Fred Boylstein, United States, was defeated by Neilsen, Denmark, in a bout in which the Dane led all the way. Boylstein did some pretty boxing in the first two rounds, but the Dane's ability to reach the body gave him a decided advantage.

"Yes," replied the smuggler placidly, "I thought at first of dressing the pigs up as millionaires and members of parliament."

BASEBALL PENNANT RACES.

WITH both New York baseball teams leading their respective leagues, one of the long puncture proof traditions of baseball is likely to be shattered this season. That tradition is: A major league team cannot win four pennants in succession.

Since the American league expanded in 1900 and gained equality with the National after a bitter baseball war no team in the junior organization has performed the feat. Detroit clinched the gonfalon in 1907-'08-'09 and then was ousted by the great Philadelphia Athletics, whose "$100,000 infield" became a byword. The tenure of Connie Mack's machine, which took four pennants in five years from 1910 to 1914, was broken by Boston in 1912.

In the older league we have to go back to the period of 1872-'75 to find a four time consecutive winner in Boston, and that in reality was in the National association, as the National league was formally organized in 1876. In 1885-'88 St. Louis of the American association, of which Charles A. Comiskey was manager, was a four ply winner. The National did not concede this body equal ranking, although the Browns beat Chicago's White Stockings in a post-season series in 1886.

The old Chicago White Stockings, noted for their batters and "stonewall infield," the great Baltimore Orioles of McGraw, Jennings, Keeler, and others; the Pittsburgh Pirates of 1901-'03; the Chicago Cubs of 1906-'08 with Frank Chance at the helm; the New York Giants of 1911-'13, could not add that fourth consecutive pennant.

Present Giants and Yankees both have three pennants in a row. In advance of the season Yanks were regarded as better prospects to repeat than Giants. McGraw's outfit has piled up such a lead, however, that only an unexpected slump can stop it. It is a neck and neck affair in the American league, with experience and staying power favoring the Yanks.

It would be strange if this tradition of many years' standing were brushed aside in both leagues the same year.

YALE-HARVARD NET TEAM WINS FROM BRITISHERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 19.—In the first provincial match of their tour the Harvard-Yale tennis team today beat the West of England team at Bristol, eight matches to one. The Britishers put up a game fight, but the Americans were more aggressive and more accurate. Arnold Jones and W. W. Ingraham again created a very fine impression, both excelling with their service and on volley, while Ingraham made many fine returns to service on back hand.

WHITE SOX GET EVEN BREAK IN PAIR WITH MACKS

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 19.—[Special.]—After slipping the Mackmen a good spanking in the first game today the White Sox went into bankruptcy insofar as runs were concerned, and an even break on the day's toil was the result. The opening engagement ended with the Chicagoans out in front by 11 to 4, but in the nightcap they were out of luck by 8 to 4, making only two victories in the six games played here. Not so good!

Young Sam Gray, the fellow who sprayed whitewash on the Sox last Wednesday, came back with hopes of repeating in the first game and was handled without kid gloves. The Evers men hopped on him for a grand assortment of twelve hits, waited him out to the extent of nine passes, and meanwhile Urban "Red" Faber, after a bad opening inning, as is his custom, went sailing along smoothly to his fifth triumph in a row.

George Lacks Stuff.

George Connally, who was a bit peevish as the result of being manhandled earlier in the series, tried another shot at the Macks in the afterpiece, but his rubber arm lacked its usual stuff.

The home talent fairly rained base hits on him and he beat it in the third round. By that time the Macks had such a comfortable lead that the Sox couldn't catch them and the tail enders added a couple more late in the game off Leverett and a new comer entitled R. A. Lawrence.

Due to the injury of Hooper's leg and Mostil's and the day previous the Sox had to perform with a slightly revised outfield, but the new combination worked satisfactorily, particularly as it pertained to Archdeacon, the speed king. In the first game he beat out a bunt, singled once and doubled once, the latter coming with the bags loaded, and marking the turning point of the battle.

Hammer Gray Hard.

Strangely enough Gray fanned only one batter in the opening game and that led to his ruination. The batter, who was Falk, survived the strikeout on a passed ball and that was the opening incident of the second inning. Then Kamm was hit, Barrett went out and Crouse walked. Faber filed out and Archdeacon followed with his double that sent three runners scampering home.

The Sox kept out in front with another run in the third and one in the fifth, but in the eighth they uncorked a real attack that netted a half dozen tallies after two were out. Four hits with a couple of passes did it.

Knock Connally Out.

When the second game got under way the Sox helped themselves to a run on a pass to Archdeacon and a double by Sheely. That tally didn't help much because the Macks marked their opening stand with three successive hits off Connally, two scoring. Then they added a couple more in the second because Lamar doubled after Connally had passed Slim Harris and hit Dykes. Two more went across in the third, one on a home by Hauser, and Connally was no more.

The Sox got a big mess of hits in the second game, but couldn't make them count. They knocked Harris off the rubber with six blows in two and one-third innings. Then Denny Burns was trotted out for better or worse and the Chicagoans hit him hard all the way, but couldn't get enough runners around to the plate. In the ninth, for instance, they held the bases filled with one out, and then both Kamm and Barrett popped out to left.

Chicago

southpaw named Pinto finishing the game with good style.

Kaufmann's only distress came in the sixth when Harper doubled and Wrightstone poled a homer into the left bleacher. He got the rest of them out in that round and then disappeared, Vic Keen coming forth and setting the Phils down with neatness to the finish.

Phils Tie Score.

In the second combat, Elmer Jacobs was pitted against Glazner and Elmer had all the better of it. His mates got him a run in the first when Statz and Hollocher busted the ball and Adams produced a sacrifice fly. They got him another in the third after two were out when Grigsby punched his homer into the bleacher, but in the fifth, the gang cracked on their defensive play and helped the Phils to a couple of tallies which tied the count.

Holke singled to left and Grigsby booted the ball, letting him reach second. Ford singled, scoring Holke and Ford dashed to second on a peg to the plate. Then Hartnett tried to pluck Ford off the bag and made a bum shot, letting the man take third from where he scored on Glazner's punch to right with the infielders drawn in close.

That made it look like a battle but in their half of the same round the Cubs settled the dispute. Cotter doubled and scored on Friberg's single. Friberg was forced at second by Grigsby who then stole second and went to third on Heathcote's out. Hartnett was purposely passed and then he and Grigsby started a double steal. The catcher shot to the pitcher and Grigsby was trapped between third and home but he ran up and down until he finally beat some throw to the plate. Hartnett made third on it after which Jacobs walked and Statz followed with a triple scoring two more.

That finished Glazner and brought in Mr. Betts, who finished and held the Cubs to one more run which they didn't need.

STIFF BREEZE AS YACHTS START ON MACKINAC RACE

A stiff southeasterly wind sent twenty-two yachts roaring out of Belmont harbor at express speed yesterday on the nineteenth annual race to Mackinac Island. It was the largest fleet ever to start on the longest fresh water race decided any place in the world.

Two hours before the race there was a heavy sea but little wind but by the time the starting gun boomed for the first class the wind was blowing strong and with every starter crowding canvas, the water racers squared away on the course to Point Betsie with hardly a lee rail in the fleet showing above water.

The tiny schooner Chipmunk, working up to a splendid position, shot across the line ahead in the schooner class but was soon overhauled by the big Milwaukee entry, Ranger. Gavietta went over a few seconds behind Ranger with Natant following. Wendameen got a poor start, crossing nearly a half mile behind her class.

Vanadis Takes Lead.

Vanadis took the lead position in the yawl class with Kayoshk II. only a few feet behind on her weather quarter. Siesta crossed third with Circe following. Truant had trouble after leaving the harbor and did not cross the line for nearly twenty minutes.

Virginia, cup defender, had a sharp brush in the small sloop class with Siren and Jackson Park II. Al Peterson worked Jackson Park to an admirable position and went across almost with the gun but Siren and Virginia, coming up on a better weather position, took the lead from Peterson and Virginia rushed ahead to lead position of the class.

Chaperon broks its peak halliard a few minutes before the start and was forced to return to the harbor, finally getting under way more than thirty minutes behind her class.

Intrepid In Good Start.

While Intrepid and Dorello were fighting for the lead position in the start of the big sloop class Seboomook came from a weather position and crowded both out of the lead. Dorello crossing behind and Intrepid a close third. With weather position Prather pushed Intrepid ahead of Dorello and was threatening the lead of Seboomook as they disappeared northward. Mavourneen got across a bad fourth, but began sailing in earnest after rounding the buoy and straightening out on her course.

Gordon Seagrove's sloop, Dorinda, was scratched at the last minute because he could not get light canvas. Florence, of Milwaukee, was forced out through inability to muster a crew.

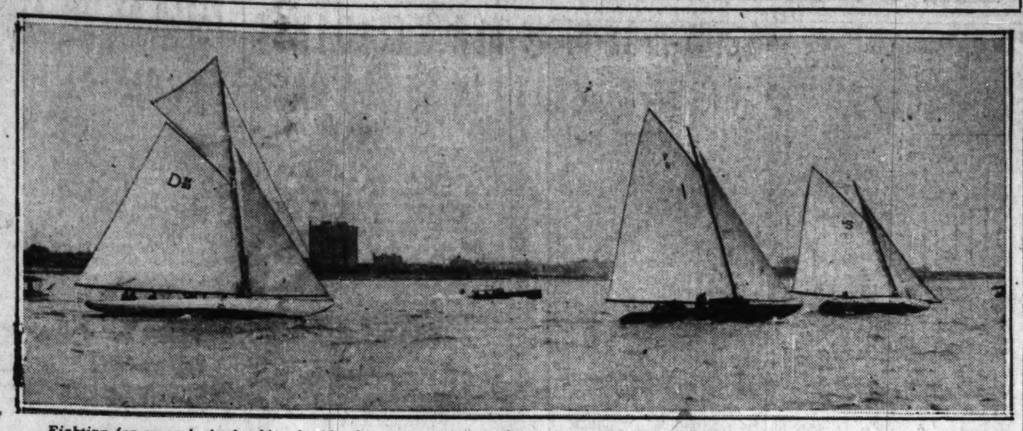
With the wind blowing stronger as the yachts bore northward on their 203 mile stretch to Point Betsie, every yacht crowded on canvas and were hull down a short time after the start. Skippers of the big schooners and yawls, getting the kind of weather they had been wanting, were taking full advantage of it while the smaller sloops hung tanaciously to every foot of canvas they could safely carry.

Fight Comes Near Finish.

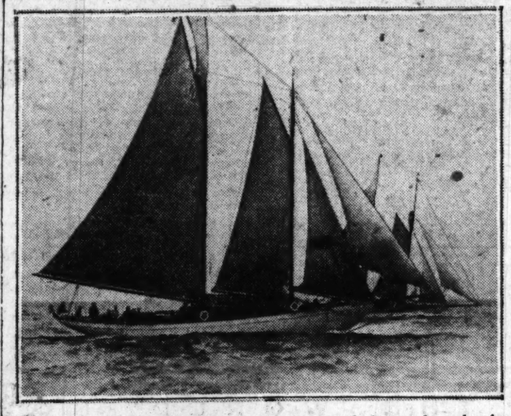
In all the eighteen years' history of the famous racing classic there has hardly ever been a race in which gales of varying force have not been encountered, but for years the fleet has not begun the 331 mile battle in as stiff a wind as sent them bowling along in yesterday's start. With open water for more than 200 miles, every skipper was prepared to keep on canvas, no matter what the weather and the Michigan shore line about Frankfort was expected to be sighted before today's racing is over.

From there it will be a fight, not only with wind and water, but with almost continuous procession of dangerous reefs, shoals, shifting currents and narrow channels until the line is crossed at Round Island light at old Mackinac Island.

FIRST SKIRMISH IN THE MACKINAC RACE



Fighting for an early leadership, the big sloops engaged in a sharp skirmish going across the starting line in the race to Mackinac island. Seboomook (S) got the lead position, but the mahogany flyer Intrepid (I), which was beaten across the line by Dorello (D) got the weather position of the topsail sloop, overtook it, and then dashed after the speeding Seboomook. [TRIBUNE Photo.]



The big schooner Wendameen got away to a bad start, but what few moments were lost then Skipper Jack Handley rapidly overcame as he ordered clouds of canvas aloft that sent her northward after the leaders at a pace that threw her lee rail under and left a boiling wake. A heavy blow is what Handley is hoping for, as that is his best chance of winning out.

CHICAGO MISS WINS JUMP IN DETROIT MEET

Detroit, Mich., July 19.—[Special.]—Nellie Todd, a 14 year old youngster, was the only member of Tom Eck's famous Chicago team to compete in the first annual track and field meet held for women of the middle west at Belle Isle Saturday afternoon. Miss Todd, who holds four world's records, totaled 10 points, including a victory in the broad jump.

Other members of the famous team that were entered but did not appear were Helen Filkey and Katherine Lee, world's record holders, and Mildred Horrocks.

With 28½ points, athletes representing Pennsylvania Railroad A. C. of Cleveland captured first place.

Cleveland's misses showed to advantage in the track event in which they picked up 20 of their points. They did not create much of a stir in the field.

Florence Wolf, Detroit, took high individual honors with 17 points. This performance gave her school, the Eastern high, second place in the team totals, 4 points ahead of Woman's Aquatic club, Detroit, which finished third.

Christine Pylick, Cleveland star, tied the world's record for the 50 yard dash for women when she was timed :34. Miss Pylick shares this record with Edith McBeth, United States, and Mile. Mpeslova, Czecho-Slovakia.

The meet was conducted entirely by women officials who should profit greatly by the experience gained in this meet. The contestants showed a sports manlike spirit throughout. Summary in which the Chicago girl featured:

Broad jump—Won by Nellie Todd, Chicago; Marie Hass, Pennsylvania Railroad A. C., second; Grace Kreit, Detroit Turners, third. Distance, 14 feet 6 inches.

80 yard high hurdles—Won by Marie Hass, Pennsylvania Railroad A. C.; Nellie Todd Chicago, second; Hattie Murphy, Atkinson Community, Detroit, third. Time, :10 2-5.

100 yard dash—Won by Ruth Holmes, Pennsylvania Railroad A. C.; Christine Pylick Pennsylvania Railroad A. C., second; Nellie Todd, Chicago, third. Time, :12 5-10.

SWIM RECORDS FALL BEFORE YANKEE STARS

LES TOURELLES, France, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—World's records went tumbling today when the American women swimmers, winning in the 100 meter free style semi-finals and in the 100 meter backstroke elimination heats in the Olympic competition proved that they were in a class by themselves.

Miss Mariechen Wehselau of Honolulu tonight holds the world's record in the 100 meter free style, with 1:12 2-5 while Miss Sybil Bauer, Illinois A. C., accounted for the 100 meter backstroke record, setting it at 1:24 flat.

The graceful American women divers, Elizabeth Becker, Caroline Smith, and Helen Meany, all qualified in the plain high diving contest and helped to make the next to last day of the Olympic swimming tournament another real feminine triumph for the United States.

Men Show Stuff.

The men members of the American team, while they did not shine with the brilliancy of their feminine comrades, gave a good account of themselves. Johnny Weissmuller did his daily work with customary usefulness, just swimming fast enough to keep ahead of all opposition in the 100 meters free style. Duke and Sam Kahanamoku also won the honor of representing the United States in the final of this event tomorrow.

Clarence Pinkstone, Al White, and Dave Fall appear certain to finish one-two-three in the finals of the fancy high diving event, and, taking today's results generally, although no Olympic points were added to the American total, the qualification of the entire list of American entrants is fair indication that America at the conclusion of the competition tomorrow night will have won in the water sports by a greater margin than in any other branch of the Olympic program.

Illinois Girl Shines.

Caroline Smith's high diving was perfection in itself. Miss Smith, who hails from Cairo, Ill., held 10,000 spectators enthralled by soaring through the air from a height of ten meters or more like a graceful bird and striking the water with but the slightest of splashes. Her dive from more than thirty feet was beautifully executed.

The defeat of the American polo team was the only shadow on the closing of a perfect day. They lost to Belgium, 2 goals to 1, and although they protested the Belgian victory it is generally conceded that the Americans lost fairly.

Following are today's summaries:

Tilden Meets H. Kinsey Today for State Tennis Supremacy

BY CLARK KELSEY.

William T. Tilden of Philadelphia and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco will raise their rackets this afternoon to battle for the singles championship of Illinois at the Skokie courts. Tilden slid into the finals yesterday with a straight set victory over A. H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass., while Kinsey took three out of four sets from Brian I. C. Norton, the eighth ranking player in the country, in intervals between showers.

Doubles championship honors will be contested between Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood of Australia, and the Kinsey brothers of California, who eliminated the George Lott-Axel Gravem and Brian Norton-Wray Brown two man teams yesterday.

Tilden Plays Best Game.

Tilden played the game that made him champion of the world against Chapin. He displayed most of the strokes of which he is master, with his sliced volley taking numerous points. Chapin, who met Tilden for the third time this year, played a vicious game, and every point in his closely fought game was taken with a stiff stroke. He let opportunities for soft shots go in order to play a hard game.

Tilden's play lured the Springfield man out of position repeatedly, and the champion proceeded to chop his shots into the wide open spaces. Tilden, leading all the way, was often caught unawares by Chapin, who tucked the ball past the player-writer as he was coming up to the net.

Flashy repartee between Tilden and Chapin, and later with Norton on the sending end, kept the crowd of 3,000 which stayed through the deluge in a constant uproar. The crowd took to the former South African and rounds of applause greeted every point he won.

The match between Norton and the coast lad was an even battle. In the first two sets the San Franciscan took an early lead. In the second set Norton battered home five games straight, after being three down, to take the lead. Kinsey had a hard time keeping a footing on the pasty clay, and the matches were transferred to the lower court, which had been shielded by a tarpaulin.

Lott and Gravem Lose.

His steady chop shots had the ruddy-cheeked, curly-haired player chasing after impossible gets, and he reached some of them, but tired toward the end, and his opponent was able to drive past him.

Lott and Gravem, Chicago's lone survivors of the week, went out of play at the hands of the Australian Davis cup doubles team. The local lads had their eyes with them in the second set, and placed the pellet too accurately for the invaders. In the other sets, however, the men from the Australian bush cannonaded the Chicagoans, and their stylish play at the net frequently bounced the ball beyond the backstop.

The Kinsey brothers showed the teamwork which made them national clay court champions a week ago. They shaved the back lines, and ran into trouble only in their second set, when Norton's chatter bothered them.

Pare Wins Junior Title.

Emmett Pare, St. Mel High school lad, by defeating Sandy Wiener, Tilden's kid flash from Philly, took home the silverware emblematic of the state junior championship. The Chicago lad, who is 16 years old, backhanded himself to victory. This afternoon they will meet again, this time for the national clay court title. The matches which were rained out at St. Louis Monday were transferred to Skokie for the finals.

Finals in the women's and junior doubles will be played at 11 o'clock today. Miss Marion Leighton and Mrs. Lillian Alter, her doubles partner, will oppose the Misses Vorsila Mican and Doris Kinsel, present champions. If time permits, the singles final, between Miss Leighton and Mrs. Alter, will conclude the program. Summaries:

YANKS ROUT BRITONS; SET RELAY RECORD

LONDON, England, July 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The stay-at-home Britishers and the Americans who were unable to go to Paris to witness the Olympic games today watched a miniature version of the games at Stamford Bridge, when the pick of the United States and British empire teams which competed in Paris, came together in a series of track and field events which resulted in American victories in eleven of the events and British conquests in three.

Yanks Set Relay Mark.

The result of the first event, the 400 yard relay, saw the Stars and Stripes hoisted when the Americans broke the world's record for the distance by 1 1-5 seconds, winning in 37 4-5.

The broken record was largely due to a sprint of Charles W. Paddock in the third 100 yards and to a tremendous burst of speed by Alfred Leconey of Philadelphia, who beat the British sprinter, Harold Abrahams, to the tape after the latter had badly fumbled in taking the baton from the previous British runner.

This gave the spectators an idea of something good to come and the Britishers roared with delight when the Union Jack was hoisted at the conclusion of the mile relay. Britain's success in this event was largely due to the efforts of the short striding Scottish flyer, Eric Liddell, who steadily overhauled the Chicagoan, H. M. Fitch, and beat him by two yards.

From then onward it was almost a continuous hoisting of the Stars and Stripes. The four mile relay was the most grueling race of the afternoon. The United States won each mile by the narrowest margin, the last mile proving the fastest, at 4:25, when Ray Buker, Illinois A. C., broke the tape three yards ahead of B. MacDonald.

Tootel Sets Hammer Mark.

The Americans looked like easy winners in the two mile relay and were ahead until a half furlong from home, when H. B. Stallard of Cambridge, who always appeared to have something in hand, overhauled S. C. Enck, Penn State, and registered Great Britain's second victory.

The mile medley relay was run in four distances. In the 440 yard section Alan B. Helffrich, Penn State, defeated Liddell; in the 220 yard section, George L. Hill, University of Pennsylvania, defeated A. E. Porritt, New Zealand. Jackson V. Scholz, New York A. C., beat G. M. Butler at 220 yards, while in the 880 yard section Charles R. Brookins, Iowa, defeated D. G. A. Lowe, Cambridge, with a tremendous burst of speed when the Englishman was leading in the last 150 yards.

In the running broad jump, Edward O. Gourdin, Dorchester club, jumped 23 feet 9½ inches and Harold Abrahams, 23 feet 2½ inches. In the hammer throw, Fred B. Tootel, Boston, broke the British record with 178 feet. Matt McGrath, New York A. C., did 168 feet and Jack Merchant, San Francisco, 156 feet 6¼ inches.

SOCCER TEAMS ADOPT DIFFERENT PLAY SCHEDULE

For a number of years Chicago soccer men have discussed the feasibility of following the plan of St. Louis, in having four teams only in a major league, and concentrating the playing strength in these four clubs. Each Sunday in St. Louis the four teams play two games on the same field, the games being curtailed to sixty minutes instead of the regulation ninety.

Yesterday it was announced that the Bricklayers, Peel cup champions, Olympias, who were runners-up, Thistles, and Sparta Unions had come to an agreement, but slightly different from the St. Louis plan.

Double Header Each Sunday.

It is planned to play a double header each Sunday, but to rotate the games on the fields of the four clubs. On each fourth Sunday a team from the St. Louis professional league will visit Chicago and play a local team, and a team from the Chicago organization will visit St. Louis.

Arrangements with the Mound City have been completed, and it said they will play on a percentage of 60 for the winners and 40 for the losers.

This new arrangement will create a lot of regulars among the fans, as they are sure of seeing high class games every Sunday.

Black May Be President.

Two prominent business men have been offered the positions as president and secretary-treasurer. Robert Black, president of the Robert Black Construction company, and former head of the Peel Cup commission, has been mentioned as president, and O. Ginsburg, a merchant from the Lawndale district, the hotbed of soccerdom, is slated to be secretary-treasurer.

Three soccer games are scheduled today in the International league, as follows:

Norwegian-Americans and Sture at 47th street and Fullerton avenue; German Club II. and Western Electric "B" at Greenview and Wrightwood avenues; Swedish-Americans III. and Norwegian-Americans II. at Winnemac and Robey.

CHANCE FOR KIDS IN A. A. F. TRACK MEET SATURDAY

When the annual Cook County A. A. F. track and field meet is held at Stagg field Saturday every contestant will have an equal chance to share the spot light, for there will be three divisions, senior, intermediate, and junior, the last so divided to give the little "shaver" every possible encouragement.

The junior division, which is for the 12, 13 and 14 year old boys, is arranged into three classes, depending upon the weight of each entrant. Senior and intermediate athletes will not be divided in such a manner, the only requisite for the entrants of the latter class is that they are 15, 16 or 17 years of age. Competitors over 18 are bunched in the senior group.

Entries close tomorrow with J. S. Andressen, chief of the meet, at Sears Roebuck Y. M. C. A., 3210 Arthington street.

Col. H. B. Hackett, well known athletic official, will referee the meet. N. Malloy will act as starter, Walter P. Sonnenleiter and Harry Berz will officiate as clerks of the course.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

ON FLAMBEAU TRAILS.

THE forest trails were drenched with dew and the early morning sun promised a hot day when J. W. Balmer, the Indian agent of the Flambeau reservation, said "Let's go," and away we went for the wilderness bass lake that we were to fish. It was a two hour trip, partly by car, partly by boat, but mostly a hike, and we swished through the wet grass in a hurry, sending up clouds of disgruntled mosquitoes that couldn't make a dent in the anti-insect dope on our faces and necks.

Through two swamps filled with deer trails and ablaze with flowers, then into a cool, dark virgin forest of giant hemlocks and big maples, and we were soon close to the lake. In this exquisite bit of virgin timber we found the remains of an Indian sugar camp. Still standing were the frameworks of the tepees, the wickiups and the fireplaces where the maple sap was boiled to make the sugar. A short walk from this camp brought us out on the shore of our wilderness lake. Although but a tiny, unnamed dot on the map, this body of water loomed large before our eyes as we hustled out the tackle, cut loose our boat, and otherwise prepared for the black bass.

There are a number of these back in the woods lakes filled with black bass on the Flambeau Indian reservation. Each has its charm and appeal for the exploring angler. The attraction of the lake we were fishing soon was evident, as just a few feet from our starting place J. W. snagged a fine big bass, remarking as he unhooked the fish and let it go that we were off in a cloud of dust. We shot a cast way in to an old log. The instant it struck the water there was a swirl, and wham! we had another bass! First into the weeds, then into the air he went, and Frank, the guide, as this one was freed, scored two for us. Is it worth while hiking way back over old logging trails, through the wet, fighting mosquitoes, to fish those wilderness lakes? Well, by 11 o'clock we had hooked and landed forty black bass, although our boat didn't show it. All but a scant half dozen had been put back into that little lake. By 5 o'clock the score showed that fifty-five bass had been hooked and practically all returned to the water. At that hour the big black fellows began to wake up and tear into our lures. Working about 150 feet of shoreline we recorded eight strikes. Five bass were brought alongside the boat to be given their freedom. They were hopping sideways and straight up for a few minutes while Balmer helped us cheer the performances.

Yes, sir, the Flambeau Indian reservation has some fish in its scores of lakes, and when they're hittin', it's fun with a capital F.

Barbara Palmer Wins Maple Heights Stake

Cleveland, O., July 19.—Leading all the way and establishing a track record for one mile and a sixteenth, Barbara Palmer, owned by Eugene Lutz, won the $5,000 Buckeye handicap at Maple Heights today. Be Good was second and Grass Maid third. The time, 1:43 1-5, clipped two-fifths of a second off the previous record.

BOYLE NEW ANSON PILOT.

Marshalltown, Ia., July 19.—Frank Boyle, manager of the defunct Sioux Falls, S. D., club of the Tri-State league, has been signed to manage the Marshalltown Mississippi valley league team, succeeding Jack Lacy of Omaha. Boyle brings with him six players from the Tri-State.

ST. LOUIS CLUB 1ST IN CENTRAL ROWING REGATTA

St. Louis, Mo., July 19.—Numerous upsets marked the opening day's races in the Central States Rowing regatta held at Creve Couer with chief honors going to crews from St. Louis, Quincy, and Peoria.

The greatest upset occurred in the Junior singles which Elmer Flood of Peoria won without being greatly extended. Flood, who had never before participated in a race won this event by several lengths from his nearest competitor, Walter Slack of the Baden Rowing club of St. Louis, in 7:04 2-5.

Lincoln Park Wins.

The outstanding incident of the day, however, was the defeat of the Century boat club's junior lightweight four when only two lengths from the finish line and after it had paced the entire distance. Near the finish, Stroke Weink collapsed into a faint with the result that the Century crew became involved in a snarl of oars. Lincoln Park crew of Chicago, meanwhile, slipped into the lead.

Another mishap cost the Century crew the junior lightweight fours, when charges were made that Lincoln Park crew crossed into the Century lane, thus forcing the St. Louisians to pull up. The judges, however, declared both crews were off their course, and awarded the victory to the Baden Rowing club.

Century Club First.

As a result of the first day's competition, Century led the field with a total of sixty-five points for first place among the juniors. Baden Boat club of St. Louis was second with forty-four points. The Illinois Valley Yacht club of Peoria and the South Side club of Quincy tied for third with twenty-seven points each, while the Lincoln Park doubles team gave Chicago its only first place and point score for the day, a total of fifteen points.

KENTUCKY NAGS BREAK 2 MARKS AT HAWTHORNE

BY FRENCH LANE.

Two more Hawthorne stake events have gone to Kentucky horses and when they were decided before another bumper half-holiday throng yesterday two track records were shattered.

The wonder sprinter, Dudley, owned by Johnson N. Camden, and the 3 year old Troutbeck filly, Starbeck, were the record breaking performers, it being the second mark that has fallen within a week to the mighty Dudley.

Starbeck's triumph and her lowering of a record that has stood at the historic west side track since Sept. 5, 1899, was the biggest upset of the afternoon. She was thrown in with a crowd of the best route goers at the track and was never seriously considered as a dangerous contender.

Favorite Gets Third.

She made every post a winning one, however, getting out in front as the barrier lifted and withstanding a last furlong challenge from the fleet Lady Astor that would have taken the heart out of many a champion. But Starbeck won by a comfortable margin with the favorite Bourbon Boy outrun throughout the journey and not able to get better than third money.

Starbeck flew around the mile and a sixteenth journey in 1:44 3-5 which was two-fifths of a second better than the mark that has been standing for nearly twenty-five years. The filly pulled up after the race as fresh as could be. The California apprentice, George Ellis, was in the saddle, but he only had to let her run as she pleased to triumph. It was the first race Starbeck had ever accounted for, although she had been close up on a number of occasions.

Dudley's Feat No Surprise.

No one was surprised when the fleet Dudley kicked over the six-furlong record in the secondary feature. He was a prohibitive favorite at less than 1 to 3 and in a race earlier in the week had made a new record for five and a half furlongs. Dudley has come to be recognized as one of America's greatest sprinters and he stepped the three-quarters yesterday in 1:11 2-5, two-fifths of a second better than the old mark made a year ago.

Dudley just had to canter home to beat his field, old John S. Reardon coming with a late rush that got him second money, while the lightweighted Snooksie Bradley was third.

The record breaking contests were staged before a crowd of more than 15,000. There was another gay gathering in the clubhouse, and an orchestra was on hand to entertain the guests between races.

Billy Watts Wins Opener.

The far western silks of E. E. Watson were carried to victory in the mile and three-sixteenths opening number by the well liked Billy Watts. He got up to win by the narrowest of nose margins from the long shot Hardman, that had set the early pace. Hardman was still running strong and was second at the finish. Jockey Weiner on the winner and Anderson tarside Hardman engaged in a little fight all of their own in the stretch riding, and at the end of the race the stewards suspended both boys five days for rough riding.

It was Polk Laffoon's George Rose, with L. McDermott up, that accounted for the Windemere hotel handicap, which was the 2 year old feature. The field got away to a ragged start, and Edmon and Moon Magic were all but left at the post. Bear Shot, after racing in closest contention, got the place, and the Chicago filly, Frances Victoria, was third.

Longshot Takes Fifth.

Another longshot accounted for the fifth in which E. W. Newman's Elusive got out in front in a desperate stretch struggle and had enough in reserve to hold the advantage. Brother John, the favorite, was second, and Doubtful third. A field of a dozen, the largest of the afternoon, started.

Jockey Mack Garner finally came into his own in the last race when he piloted Pete Coyne's Flower Shop around a mile and seventy yards journey to win off by himself. Huonec, one of the better liked in the race, was second, with Elias O. third.

NOVELTY STUNTS FEATURE SWIM PROGRAM TODAY

Novelty swimming and diving exhibitions given by champion swimmers will feature the program at Edgewater Beach this afternoon. Aquaplaning, canoe tilting, battles on the greased pole, diving and swimming contests, and a contest between an angler and a human fish are carded.

William Roe of Palmer Park Casting club, has a deep sea casting outfit which he believes will be strong enough to land Norman Ross in the allotted time. Elder Halvorsen of the C. A. A., central A. A. U. champion, will lead the men divers from the ten foot springboard, and Algina Ortlepp of the I. A. C. will lead the women. The events start at 3 p. m. and are open to the public.

Whites Beat Blues in First of Polo Series

BOBTAIL FIRST, BLACK GOLD LAST IN $5,000 RACE

Ashland, Ky., July 19.—Bobtail won the $5,000 inauguration of the Raceland Derby at the new Raceland course near here today, covering the mile and one-quarter route in the fast time of 2:04 3-5, to lead Altawood and Black Gold, the only other starters, to the wire. The classic furnished Black Gold an opportunity to make a record for derbies won in a year, as with the Louisiana, Kentucky, Ohio and C[illegible]o classics to his credit, he was tied with Claude, winner of four derbies in 1903.

Black Gold Weakens.

The winner, owned by Col. E. R. Bradley, and piloted by Jockey Lawrence Lyke, took the lead at the snap of the barrier, followed by Black Gold and Altawood. Lyke improved his lead until entering the stretch, when Black Gold and Altawood moved up close.

Mrs. R. M. Hoots' Black Toney-Useelt colt weakened in the stretch rush, and Altawood, saddled by C. Bruce Head, Louisville, pressed the Bradley colt, just failing to get up ahead before the finish.

27,000 See Race.

A crowd estimated at 27,000 witnessed the inauguration of the Raceland classic. Black Gold carried 126 pounds, the impost for the winner. Altawood carried 118 pounds.

Black Gold had been favored to win, and as a result the winner paid $15.90, $3.90 and out for a $2 mutuel ticket. Altawood's price was $3 and out, and Black Gold out.

NO. SHORE TRACK TO SEE HORSES

North side racing enthusiasts will have an opportunity to witness thoroughbreds now in action at Hawthorne during the first week in September when the North Shore Jockey club will stage a week's meeting at the North Shore Polo and Hunt club track.

This important event will be one of the predominating features of the Chicago Carnival and Industrial exposition which will be inaugurated on Aug. 30.

Chief among the big turf features, however, will be the North Shore handicap, a race over the regulation Derby distance and the Stockyards Derby. The last named event is for the animals minus the bluebloded pedigrees of their stake race brothers.

Aurora, Ill., July 19.—[Special.]—Cliff Woodbury of Chicago, midwest dirt track champion, driving a Frontenac, today defeated Fred Horey of St. Paul, former national dirt track champion, in a Miller special, in a match race at Exposition park. BY JOE DAVIS.

Who will win the western amateur golf crown at Hinsdale this week?

For seventeen years, beginning with its inception in 1899, Chicago players have dominated the field in the western amateur golf championship. For three years veteran players won and then the younger element asserted itself.

Chicago's wonderful coterie of players which included the late William Holabird Jr., Bruce D. Smith, H. C. and Walter Egan, Ned Sawyer, Warren Wood, Albert Seckel, Mason Phelps, Bob Gardner, K. P. and Donald Edwards, Paul and Robert Hunter, and others was too strong for the stars from other western cities and generally the semi-finalists were Chicago boys.

Coast Holds Tourney.

The first break came in 1916, when the tournament was held at Del Monte, Cal. The San Francisco golfers offered to furnish a special train from Chicago and pay all expenses but George Balch of Cincinnati, then president of the Western Golf association, opposed the plan as not being strictly amateur, the result being that E. Hoover Bankard Jr. and Charley Grimes were the only two Chicago players. Heine Schmidt, formerly of Worcester, Mass., won.

In 1917, at Midlothian, during the war period, several eastern players were invited and Francis Ouimet won, defeating K. P. Edwards, 1 up.

Gopher Player Wins.

In 1919 Harry Legg, for many years the premier player of Minnesota, won at St. Louis, making the third successive success for a player from outside Chicago.

Then Chick Evans, who did not play in these three tournaments, came back and for the last four years has swept the boards, but on each occasion he met an outsider in the final, defeating in these years Clarence Wolff of St. Louis, Rudy Knepper of Sioux City, George Von Elm of Salt Lake City, and W. H. Gardner of Buffalo.

Chick is out for his fifth successive win and also for a record of winning the western classic nine times. Provided he can get through to the thirty-six hole rounds, Chick undoubtedly will be the favorite, but in the two eighteen hole rounds he and other favorites may fall before some of the lesser lights.

Plan for Fans.

Chairman Norman B. Freer announces that all arrangements have been completed. Parking space has been provided close to the grounds, and will be used by members and visitors. Food facilities will be ample. The auto route by way of Ogden ave. nue has been marked by the Chicago Motor clubs. The Burlington road will run in trains to Clarendon Hills, which is a short distance from the club house. Taxis can be had at Hinsdale station.

President Charles O. Pfeil of the Western Golf association and his associates are on hand and predict a fine tournament, barring only weather possibilities.

A large crowd is expected out today, including both visiting and Chicago players. The admission fee for the tournament starting Monday will be $1, plus tax.

DECIDE TO KEEP DAVIS CUP PLAY ON TENNIS CARD

New York, July 19.—Play for the Davis cup, emblematic of the world's team tennis championship, will continue to be an annual event, according to a decision reached at a meeting of the contending nations in London early this month, it was learned today. The United States Lawn Tennis association was represented at the meeting by Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis cup committee; Watson M. Washburn, Day Kimball, and Dr. Sumner Hardy, president of the California association.

Continuity of the Davis cup contests was regarded by the meeting as the most important subject under discussion, Mr. Myrick, speaking for the donor of the trophy, Dwight F. Davis, said Mr. Davis would not care to see the annual competition for the cup changed to a biennial or triennial event, and that officials of the United States Lawn Tennis association were of the same opinion.

Among changes in regulations approved were those reinstating of Austria as a cup contesting nation, adding Ireland to the list under the title of United Ireland, and authorizing Great Britain to make formal application for the inclusion of Jamaica as a separate contestant.

Japanese Davis Cup Stars Win in Tennis Meet

New York, July 19.—Zenzo Shimizu and Seuchiro Kashio, of the Japanese Davis Cup Team were among the prominent players to win decisively in the opening round of the Metropolitan turf court championship at the Crescent A. C. in Brooklyn today. Others to advance were Carl Fischer, of Philadelphia, who played in the Wimbledon tournament, and Dr. George King, former Metropolitan clay court champion, who turned the tables on Walter Merrill Hall, former ranking star, who had beaten him unexpectedly in the clay court event.

In view of the attitude of the state athletic commission and its ultimatum to Rickard and Billy Gibson, manager of Leonard, it is said that Rickard will not attempt to stage the meeting in New Jersey, where no decision bouts are in vogue, due to the commission's decision that those connected with the match would have their licenses revoked in this state.

The state board has agreed to allow Walker and Leonard to fight anywhere in the United States to a decision, providing the winner signs to meet Dave Shade.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALF

FINESSING SIMPLE STRATEGY.

FINESSING is the simplest form of bridge strategy but one which must be used constantly.

To finesse means literally to try to win a trick in any suit without using the highest card you have in that suit. In a broader sense, it may be used as meaning the proper way to manage a suit, especially in the combined hands of the declarer and dummy.

Suppose the dummy to hold diamonds—ace-queen-jack-7-3, the declarer to hold diamonds—4-2.

First of all, the suit must be led from the declarer's own hand, as suits must always be led from the weak hand towards the strong. The declarer should then consider what card of importance is missing in the suit, which in this case, would, of course, be the king. He should then assume that card to be where he wanted it to be—at the left of the declarer. Of course, it will only be in that position 50 per cent of the time, but that assumption will cause the declarer to always play correctly, as it is impossible to catch the king when it lies at the right of the ace-queen.

The declarer should lead a little diamond from his own hand, and if the second hand plays low, put on the jack from the dummy. Should the jack hold the trick, the declarer must play some other suit until he can again secure the lead in his own hand.

Then lead another diamond and play the queen from the dummy, unless second hand should play the king.

Suppose the combination to be in the dummy—king-jack-10 and two small and two or three more cards of the same suit in the declarer's hand.

In this case, the missing cards are ace and queen, but the ace would be of no consequence to the declarer, as it must win a trick in any case. His efforts would be directed towards destroying the queen, which he would assume to be at the left of the declarer and, therefore, lead from the declarer's hand, finessing the 10 and then the jack from the dummy.

With the suit of the king, queen and two small cards in the dummy and three small cards in the declarer's hand, the ace for once becomes the card of paramount importance, this not being a true finessing suit.

With such a combination, the declarer must plan always to lead twice from the weak hand towards the strong, assuming the ace to be at the right of the king-queen.

With a suit headed by king-10-9 in one hand and small cards in the other, the declarer should plan to lead from the weak hand and finesse first the 9 and then the 10. The missing cards are ace, queen, jack; the ace, of course, being of no consequence.

Should one of the lesser honors be at the right of the king, however, it would usually be destroyed by two leads from the weak hand.

With the suit ace-jack-10 and another in one hand, and small cards in the other, it is impossible for the declarer to secure all the tricks in the suit. He should play, however, on the assumption that one of the missing honors lies at the right of the ace, in which case he would lose his first finesse and win the second.

When there are two honors of equal value in the opponent's hand, it ceases to become a fifty-fifty proposition in assuming one of them to be where you would like to have it.

In the combination named above, the chances are three to one that the player at the right of ace-jack-10 will hold one of the missing honors.

With the combination of ace-jack-9-7-6 in the dummy, the declarer holding the deuce and tray, the missing cards are king, queen, 10. In this case, the 9 must always be finessed on the first lead of the suit, as the declarer can do nothing with the suit unless the player at the left holds the 10 as well as one of the other honors.

One of the most common faults of the beginner is to lead a queen toward the ace in the dummy, or vice versa, when not holding the knave in either hand. The queen must never be led for the purpose of finessing unless the player holds the jack in one hand or the other; nor must the jack be led when the declarer does not hold the 10 in either hand, and so on ad infinitum.

Finessing when there is a trump declared depends on the number of cards which the declarer holds in the suit. It is a well recognized rule that when the declarer holds nine cards in two hands, including both the ace and king, he does not finesse at all. Even this rule is modified at times when there is some special reason for placing the queen with one of the adversaries.

Holding eight cards in two hands, including ace-king-jack-10, or with only ace-king-jack, should they all be in one hand, the dealer should lead his ace or king and then make the second lead of the suit from the weak hand. Three of the five cards held by the adversaries will have been played by the time it is necessary for him to decide whether to finesse or attempt to catch the queen by main strength.

Suppose hearts to be trumps and all the remaining cards in that suit held by the declarer, his other cards being three small clubs. In the dummy the ace-queen-10 of clubs and worthless cards in the other suits. The declarer should lead a small club and finesse the 10.

Should the jack win the trick, he should lead the suit again from his own hand, finessing the queen on the second round.

With the same cards in the two hands, except the declarer held but two clubs, the queen should be finessed on the first round.

Should the declarer hold but one of the suit, he should not finesse any at all, as he does not need risk losing any tricks in clubs.

If—You Could See Yourself As Others See You!

If the wish of the immortal Scotch poet, Robert Burns, could come true—if you could suddenly see yourself as others see you—it's probably a ten to one bet that you would want to improve your appearance in some way or another.

It's natural for us to want to appear at our best—and yet—the one big factor necessary to a good appearance is neglected by many men—we refer to that indefinable something called "perfect grooming."

It takes a real expert barber to give you that look—that smooth, suave, graduated haircut, distinctively and wholesomely mannish; that smooth, clean, well-cared for look.

Here is the only shop of its kind in Chicago, specially equipped, made absolutely sanitary at the expense of many thousands of dollars, employing 20 expert barbers, run on the same basis as any big business by men who know what real men want.

Before you go out for the evening, come down and let us make you socially presentable—we know how!

Different? YES! And Here Are a Few Reasons Why!

It is the most unique in specially constructed, electrical, SANITARY UNITS—in America. The owner invites your inspection.

A boiling geyser of water sterilizes every razor before it touches your face.

You get an individual lather brush, comb, hair brush, etc.

Individual towels—of course.

Shaving soap in tubes—no unsanitary mugs. All other soap piped from sanitary, hidden reservoirs—it can't be used twice!

No soiled towels, paper, etc., in sight—it disappears into a trapdoor after use.

These are a few reasons. The others are here for your inspection.

ALL OUR PRICES ARE THE SAME AS THOSE THAT PREVAIL IN OTHER LOOP BARBER SHOPS.

Indiana Freight Leads in Weight on County Roads

Ogden Avenue Second in Importance, Survey Shows.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CEMENT and farm products are the leading commodities brought into Chicago by motor trucks, according to the first figures gathered in the survey of Cook county highways now being conducted jointly by the Cook county highway department and the United States bureau of public roads.

The cement comes principally from northern Indiana, entering Chicago at South Chicago. The heaviest general truck business also is done into Chicago from the south and southeast, Indianapolis avenue carrying the heaviest traffic of any highway checked up to date, although the figures have not yet been tabulated. Ogden avenue has been the next heaviest.

Figures gathered on Ogden avenue just east of Riverside for three days are as follows:

Thursday, July 10—807 trucks, 3,917 passenger cars, 51 busses, and 16 horse drawn vehicles.

Friday, July 11—705 trucks, 3,809 passenger cars, 47 busses, and 29 horse drawn vehicles.

Saturday, July 12—513 trucks, 5,221 passenger cars, 52 busses, and 22 horse drawn vehicles.

The figures were gathered between 10 a. m. and 8 p. m. Freight business drops off toward the end of the week and passenger use of the highways increases.

While the motor truck business is much heavier in the south end of the county, a larger number of passenger cars use the roads north of Chicago.

Although E. E. Powell, field manager for the government, hesitates to make an analysis on one week's figures, he is inclined to believe the explanation is that the north shore suburbs are more residential suburbs, while more manufacturing plants are located to the south of Chicago.

Weighing parties in the south end of the county have been averaging 900 trucks a day, while those in the north end have averaged about 400 a day. Loads seem to be heavier, on the average, in the south section.

Better service is promised motorists during the coming week by Mr. Powell, who has increased the personnel of the working parties in two cases where the work has been heavy.

"There has been a little congestion at some stations, due to the personnel we had first thought would be sufficient to handle the flow of traffic," he said. "We have put on five men since we first worked Ogden avenue, and expect to put on a couple more. Also the men work faster as they gain experience.

"We have had excellent coöperation from motorists. A few truck drivers don't want to stop, but as they become more familiar with the purposes of the survey I think they will work with us better. The trucking public can look for a big improvement in handling their trucks at stations from now on, and the delay is negligible."

FORCING A PATH THROUGH DIXIE

Last fall a survey of the Dixie Route "A" highway through Kentucky and on to the southern resorts revealed a total of forty-three miles of bad to impassable road which formed a practically insurmountable gap for the migrating thousands who fill the great north and south trails in the winter season. The gap extended through four counties which had exhausted all of their highway financial resources. After a stirring campaign the state and one county entered a coöperative plan to construct half of the mileage, leaving the remainder to private subscription for grading, drainage, and surfacing.

Motorists of the district voluntarily voted a 1 cent tax on gasoline to aid this fund and to remain as a maintenance fund; contributions poured in from other sources, and entire communities along the route turned out to work on the road one "free day" every two weeks, while farmers donated teams and their regular services at half pay.

Pictures above show stretches of the community built road through Kentucky. At the right are forces operating against the mud enemy on one of the "free days" and the type of rock crusher furnished by business houses in Lexington and other towns along the route. Above is the road through historic Cumberland Gap, with Pinnacle mountain in the background. Highway representatives are now in Chicago attempting to raise the last $25,000 needed to complete the feature highway.

POPULAR CAR.

The motorcycle is not only more popular in England as a pleasure vehicle but many British farmers are said to carry their products to market by the use of a side car.

LIGHTS ON YOUR CAR.

Yes, one light is better than none at all on your car at night, but two is better than a wrecked automobile and a hospital bill.—Warren Sheaf.

Three A Ready to War on "Gyp" Motor Bodies

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Chief among the near future activities of the new American Automobile association will be relentless warfare against the so-called "gyp" motor organizations. It is said that there are now about twenty-five organizations suspected of being of the "gyp" variety, and that one by one they will be investigated and, if found engaged in fraudulent operations, prosecuted to the limit.

The establishment of national emergency road service under the auspices of local clubs is another A. A. A. aim. Where such service has been established, it is pointed out, the real benefits have been warmly praised by members. The operation of emergency service is now meeting with success in many large cities, it is said.

A solution to the grade crossing problem will be sought by a committee which will study the whole question thoroughly. The association, President Henry says, does not want to make any unreasonable demands of the railroads, but, he declares, something must be done by both automobilists and railways to lessen the number of grade crossing accidents and fatalities.

Formation of a motor truck owners' division of the association is another aim of Henry, who believes that the growing commercial and passenger vehicle traffic and the also growing problem of building and maintaining roads for both is a matter which should be worked out by the owners and operators of each in one organization like the new A. A. A.

TAX MAKES MONEY.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—The 3 cents a gallon gasoline tax is a money maker in Arizona, expected to turn about $750,000 into the state and county coffers this year. No especial objection appears to be made to the levy, save by tourists.

NEWS OF THE NEW

BALLOON tire snubbers are the latest equipment development to follow in the wake of the low pressure "doughnuts" which have now reached the plane of standard equipment on the majority of models turned out for the 1924-'25 market. Perfection of the new snubber was announced last week by the Gabriel Manufacturing company.

The behavior of balloon tires on the road, according to company experts, presents two difficult and opposite requirements—free play for tires and springs to meet and absorb small road bumps, and increased brake control by the snubber for large bumps and highway irregularities. The new device is similar in appearance to the standard snubbers, but its internal operation is adapted to soft tire requirements.

Accurate adjustment of headlights to any and all requirements in night driving is claimed by the latest device for the control of automobile "heads." The controller, adapted to all types of cars, and attached to the steering column just beneath the wheel, adjusts lights on a sliding scale to points as bright or as dim as the driver desires, thus eliminating the need of the "bright" and "dim" switches required by the Illinois law. Exhaustive tests have proved the device practical and legal, according to the Premier Sales corporation, 332 South Michigan avenue, Chicago distributors of the new controller.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY ERWIN GREER.

DAMNING THE STEERING GEAR.

ACCORDING to automobile accidents headlined in the country's newspapers, the steering gear of every automobile should be painted a horrible bloody black.

But does the steering gear really go wrong and cause two-thirds of the motor car accidents? If it doesn't, why should it be made the goat so generally?

Yet here we are scaring our motoring friends into the belief that they can never tell when the steering gear will go wrong, giving the manufacturers a black eye and shirking our own responsibilities. But, between you and I, the thing is getting to be a joke, because when we blame the steering gear as the cause of our accident people are likely to glance at one another sideways and give a knowing wink. And they are the fellows who watch their steering gears and inspect them carefully. Then, again, they watch their driving more and do not turn the wheel wrong when the steering gear is doing its work properly. Hence it is easily seen why some of us are willing to blame the steering gear—in other words, to pas the buck.

To keep the steering gear operating properly it is merely necessary to grease or graphite and grease mixed half and half. The housing which holds the reduction gears at the bottom of the steering column should be packed with grease at least three times a year. The ball joints at one end of the drag link must be kept greased, because the lubricant leaks away from them rapidly, no cover being provided. These require frequent attention.

The ends of the tie rods usually are fitted with bolts, and there, too, must be kept well greased. These steering knuckle pins also need regular attention. Always keep in mind that the various steering units are always in constant motion, that every vibration produces motion in the steering column. Thus the need for lubrication is very evident.

Does your car steer hard? Then here is the reason: The knuckle pins, or king pins, have become dry, resulting in a certain amount of binding. Hard steering is the result. Oil these every day, or every two weeks if graphite is used.

Walter P. Chrysler Says Maxwell Now Excels Among Fours

In the four-cylinder field, the good Maxwell is now duplicating the revolutionary results which the Chrysler Six has already registered among the sixes.

That in brief is the story of the recent developments accomplished in the Maxwell and the Chrysler engineering staff—which, in my opinion, now stamp the Maxwell a most remarkable four-cylinder car.

These new results are so vital and so valuable that they put the good Maxwell far beyond your previous conception of four-cylinder possibilities.

Have you ever driven a four-cylinder car in which the last noticeable trace of vibration is gone?

Well, that's what you'll find in the good Maxwell of today, with its floating platform spring suspension of the motor.

The first four-cylinder car, we believe, in which vibration is practically eliminated, giving greater comfort to those in the car and far longer life to the car itself.

I don't know that you can appreciate how much this means in new steering and handling and riding ease unless you experience it in the good Maxwell yourself. And if you ride in a closed Maxwell, you'll be glad to miss the annoying rumble you've always found in closed cars.

These, of course, are the differences you would notice first. But they are not all.

As you go along, you will find the Maxwell riding the way you thought only far heavier cars could ride, and displaying a nimbleness that makes you wonder why anyone wants more than Maxwell gives.

Now turn to the other side—costs and upkeep and so on, which are materially reduced by the unusually high proportion of costly alloy steels.

You may not know that Maxwell owners are now averaging 24 miles per gallon of gasoline.

There are a dozen other things I could tell about, but do you know of any four that matches up to Maxwell in these respects?

You see now why I term the Maxwell a revolutionary car among fours. You will understand completely before you've driven a Maxwell five miles.

I can say to you with all assurance that you are going to find in the good Maxwell we are building today far more than you ever hoped for from any four-cylinder car

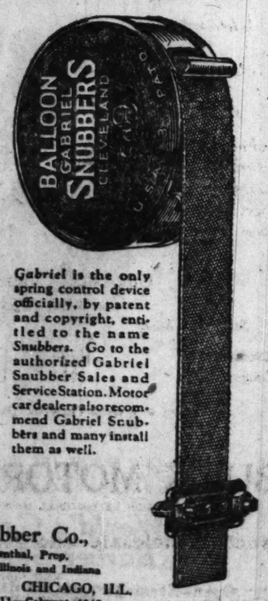
Announcing the NEW BALLOON Type SNUBBERS

The new Gabriel Balloon-Type Snubber, for use with balloon and low-pressure tires, is, we believe, the greatest advancement in 20 years toward greater motoring comfort, riding ease and safety.

The increased spring action and the greater upthrow which result when balloon or low-pressure tires encounter unusually large road bumps, are now for the first time, scientifically and thoroughly controlled.

At the same time, the new balloon-type Gabriel Snubber is so constructed that it permits absolutely free play of both spring and tire for their own absorption of small irregularities on apparently smooth roads.

In response to the demand of the public, the motor car manufacturer, and the tire manufacturer, Gabriel has produced a balloon-type snubber to meet the exacting requirements of balloon and low-pressure tires.



Gabriel is the only spring control device officially, by patent and copyright, entitled to the name Snubbers. Go to the authorized Gabriel Snubber Sales and Service Station. Motor car dealers also recommend Gabriel Snubbers and many install them as well.

Motor Plants Set Sail Again for Prosperity Point

Recall Workers, Prepare New Models and Go Ahead.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., July 19.—[Special.]—Reports from automobile manufacturers, dealers, and distributors, are that the industry is showing unmistakable signs of increased activity, and that output and sales during the past week took a decided turn for the better.

Comparing present factory conditions with those of the first two weeks of June, a marked improvement is apparent. Production of new models by a majority of plants has been increased and will continue to increase. Workmen are being recalled from their "vacations" and hundreds of men are being daily added to the payrolls.

Aug. 1 has been set for the "big day" for new models, and present indications are that five manufacturers will introduce their new lines on that date, and by the 1st of September the majority of manufacturers will have shown their 1925 goods.

One fact is certain—at least three-fourths of the new models will be equipped with balloon tires as standard equipment. Four wheel brakes are gaining in popularity, but not quite as rapidly as balloon tires. An important announcement in regard to the big tires is that their prices were reduced 15 per cent during the past week.

A comparison between Ford sales in 1923 and 1924 not only indicates a remarkable increase in the country's buying power, but also shows that this growth continues month by month. In every instance the monthly sales have shown a substantial increase over the corresponding month of 1923.

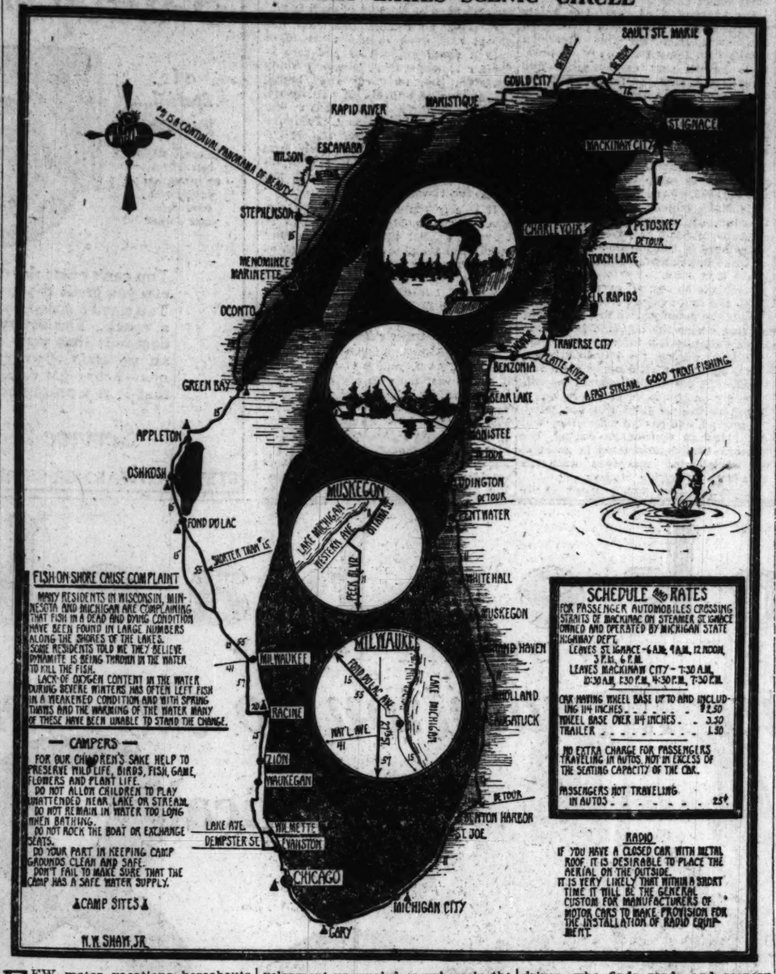
In June, sales reached 170,707, which was approximately 10,000 ahead of June sales in the preceding year

Perhaps the most encouraging signs of the times lies in the fact that these sales have been spread very evenly throughout the country and indicate a general prosperity that is not confined to any particular section.

Present indications, and general optimistic announcements by those most vitally concerned in the automotive industry is that the second half will closely approach, if not exceed sales of the first half. New models by at least a dozen manufacturers are expected to boost both output and sales. Seasonal buying is, to a great extent, being eliminated due to the ever increasing popularity of the all season closed car.

Tribune Tours

XIII.—GREAT LAKES SCENIC CIRCLE



FEW motor vacations hereabouts can compare in pure traveling delight with this year's circle tour of Lake Michigan—a two weeks' cruise that can be easily and profitably extended to a month.

The trip offers better roads than ever before and a resort and camp site development unequaled anywhere in the middle west. From Chicago north to Green Bay perfect concrete highways carry the vacationist, and improved roads take him north and east to Gould City, where the first difficult detour breaks the trip. A little hard going to the straits adds zest for the sportsman driver, who finds roads and scenery south of Mackinaw well worth the effort. The West Michigan pike with its three detours is in excellent shape for driving this season, and the completed Dunes highway from Michigan City makes the return to Chicago an easy journey.

Midland Route Is Chosen as Harding Memorial Highway

MARION, O.—[Special Correspondence.]—Official routing of the Harding highway across the central states was announced yesterday by Carl G. Gugler, president of the association fathering the project to nationalize the road in memory of the late President Harding.

Across Ohio the route will include Canton, Mansfield, Marion, the home town and burial place of Harding, to Lima and Van Wert, thence into Indiana to Decatur. Across the Hoosier state it will go over the old Huntington, Manitou and Culver trial, by way of North Manchester, Rochester, Lake Maxinkuckee, Bass Lake, North Judson, and Lowell.

The route proper is to cross the state line to Grant Park and drop down on the Dixie to Momence and thence proceed across Illinois by way of Kankakee, Dwight, Streator, Laon, Princeville, Galesburg, and Monmouth to Burlington.

Across Iowa, the route will proceed westward from Burlington to Fairfield, Ottumwa, Albia, Chariton, Osceola, Creston, Corning, Red Oak, and Nebraska City.

Across Nebraska and Colorado the highway strikes Lincoln, Hastings, Holdrege, McCook, Holyoke, and Sterling to Denver. This section is in excellent condition, being the best road across Nebraska and Colorado.

West of Denver, it is expected that the route will drop to Trinidad and thence adopt the old Santa Fé trail on into Los Angeles.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for The Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Eleanor S. Musser, 6718 Clyde avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Have you noticed any improvement in traffic conditions since Chief Collins issued his latest order on speed regulations?

Where Asked.

Ashland avenue and Diversey parkway.

The Answers.

M. J. Prohaska, 3452 Lemoyne avenue, police officer—I have noticed a marked improvement in traffic conditions. The chief's orders have cut down accidents to a marked degree and made every driver of a car in Chicago realize his responsibility. I think that people are observing most of the regulations to the letter. They find that 20 miles an hour gets them to their destinations about as quickly as the old 30.

R. M. Hicks, 4514 North Christiana avenue, engineer—I have not noticed any improvement in traffic conditions since the last campaign started. The orders, I believe, are entirely too radical. You cannot expect a man who drives an automobile to drive at a gate not faster than 20 miles an hour. Fast transportation is necessary in a big city. Safety should be built in the streets and boulevards.

Walter Haisler, 1231 Addison street, mechanic—I do not favor the orders. Most deaths from automobiles in Chicago I think are caused through jay walking and cannot be laid directly to speeding. I think the slow order causes more congestion and this is dangerous.

L. Koenig Jr., 1952 School street, artist—I favor the chief's orders to a certain extent. If they were meant for everybody and did not exclude the taxicabs, motor busses and street cars I would favor them entirely. Chicago street speed should be reduced to save lives.

William H. Felgenbutz Jr., 1521 Oakdale avenue, real estate—I have noticed no marked improvement in traffic conditions since the recent drastic orders went into effect. I believe that if they are carried out to the letter the streets of Chicago, and particularly the business streets, will be more congested than ever.

UP TO DRIVER.

We will get safe driving when we shall find safe drivers, but not before.—St. Paul Hill Herald.

TIP FROM DENTIST.

Most of us are familiar with the tiny mouth mirror used by dentists, and now car repair men have adopted a similar "instrument" for use in looking over magnetos, which in most cars is too awkwardly placed to get at readily in case of trouble.

FARM AND GARDEN

Farmer Views His Yearly Rust Bill with Worried Eye

Keeping Machinery in Repair More Important than Housing—Experts.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

MONKEY WRENCHES and oil cans have been used figuratively for generations to drive boys off the farm. Money making farmers who attempt to prevent every leak in the business of farming know what they save on their annual farm machinery bill by tightening bolts, oiling up the wearing parts, and coating their implements with a layer of paint. They may be short a boy or two, but they still have their machines; some of their plows, cultivators, mowers, planters, and disks are twenty, thirty, and even forty years old.

Eliminating that monotonous squeak, squeak of cultivator wheels, binder knotters, and gears of mowers and planters is regarded by many farmers and engineers as a greater factor in preserving farm machinery than building sheds to house equipment. Both, however, are important.

Rust Bill Cuts Profits.

Scolding the farmer for leaving his machinery exposed in the fields or in one corner of the lot has been a national pastime of city residents for years. And the farmer himself has begun to believe the rust bill he has every year because he leaves his machines where he unhitches from them is a great factor in cutting down his yearly profits.

Travelers and tourists come in from trips with convincing evidence against the farmer. They condemn him for his carelessness and bring in long lists of figures showing the number of implements they counted left standing in the field on farms along railroad tracks or highways. But, like many opinions about farming formed from information gathered through train windows and windshields of automobiles they are sometimes based on only a part of the facts. There are two sides to the question, according to farm mechanical engineers who have made impartial observations.

Repairs More Important.

"No reliable data are available, so far as I know, to show that it actually pays on the dollar and cent basis to house farm machinery," says Dr. A. E. White, director of the committee on electrical engineering and former head of the farm engineering department at University of Illinois. "I do not want to discourage the housing of farm implements, but there is great need for encouraging the farmer to give his machinery better care. The greatest deterioration of farm machinery is not due to exposure to sun and rain but to lack of grease and oil, keeping the bolts tight, painting the exposed surfaces, and protecting such parts as the canvases on grain binders and the sickles on mowers."

G. F. Warren, farm management authority with a national reputation and a practical farmer in charge of Cornell university's 500 acres of land, has drawn some interesting conclusions after having had experience for many years in caring for the implements used on this farm.

He says: "The question of housing machinery has been discussed for years and its importance sometimes overemphasized. For every machine that is ruined by exposure, two are probably spoiled by not being properly oiled, or by not having the bolts kept tight. These are less conspicuous mistakes and so attract less attention."

He advises every farmer to have an implement repair shop.

Lengthening Their Lives.

It is not the purpose of thoughtful engineers to discourage farmers in the housing of their implements, for there is evidence on farms everywhere that farmers' machines last longer if put into sheds at the end of the season. But the question is, does the housing actually lengthen the life of the machine several years, or must the farmer who thinks enough of his tools to put them in a shed be also careful enough to lubricate and keep his equipment in good repair?

Dr. White says experience with implements in the last five years shows there may be need for revision of ideas in caring for farm implements. Despite the fact that there has been a marked falling off in the production and sale of farm machines, he says, crop reports show that farmers still have enough equipment to produce more crops than they can sell to advantage under present conditions.

Many implements of antiquated type are thrown into the discard year after year by farmers who want to use modern machinery in their fields, to speed up their work and have the satisfaction of having always the most up to date tools. That is not always economy. High prices of machinery during the last few years have forced many farmers to drag an old cultivator or planter out of the junk heap, oil it up, repair the broken parts, and put it to use again. In doing this they have learned valuable lessons in the care of machinery. They have been buying fewer and fewer new machines, and the money spent in buying repairs is more and more each year.

Extravagance and Carelessness.

In this machinery age farmers are learning more and more about how to cut down the cost of production. Just what effect their economic tendencies —the outgrowth of their low prices and the necessity for lower production costs—will have on the American farmers' implement bill no one knows. It is known that extravagance and carelessness cost the farmer $280,000, which covers the annual depreciation of farm machinery, valued at three and a half million dollars, according to a survey made not long ago by the University of Minnesota.

Farmers' machinery bills in 1921 amounted to more than $300,000,000, and $536,045,000 the year before. Plows, drills, disks, wagons, manure spreaders, harrows, grain binders, mowers, and rakes usually last only from five to ten years here in the middle west. Many of these implements should last three times that long.

Machines strung all over a farmer's fields and lots means carelessness, and even if the deterioration brought about by rust where the machine is exposed is only slightly less under shelter than it is in the fields, the implements are better off in the shed away from live stock. At least they should be left standing on boards or bricks in a protected corner so they will not touch the ground, and parked where they will not stand in snowbanks during the winter. The deterioration is greatest on complicated machines such as thrashers and grain binders.

Machines rust much more easily near a lake or ocean or in sections of the country where the rainfall is heavy. Among eastern farmers where the rainfall is three or four times greater than it is in Kansas and other states west of the Missouri river housing of machinery is much more common. Many eastern farmers as well as midwesterners pull their implements under a shed at the end of each day.

It must be remembered that machines rust even in sheds. It takes only a small amount of moisture in the air to cause rust. Smooth, shiny surfaces, like moldboards of breaking plows and shovels on cultivators, rust much more readily than any other part of the implement. This may be prevented by coating the bright parts with grease and oiling such parts as the axles, bearings, and knotters on binders before the machine is put away for the winter.

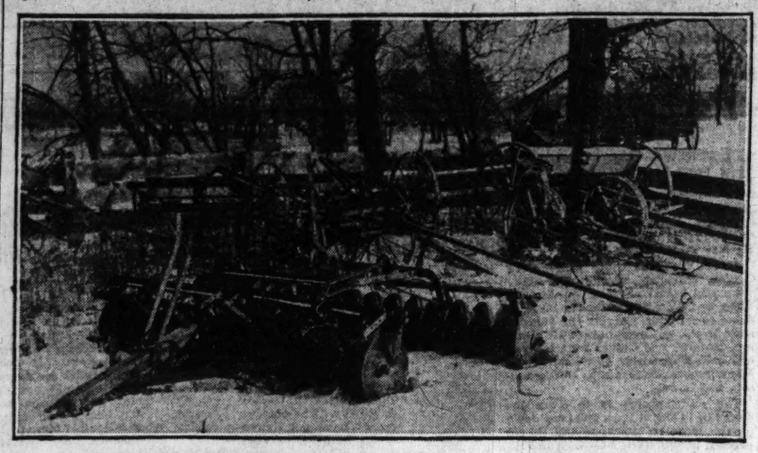
It is common to find in every section of the middle west corners of barnyards filled with machinery that costs from $1,000 to $2,000 or more, and in the majority of cases they are not oiled or greased from the time they are brought in out of the fields in the summer or fall until they are needed the next season.

The Farmer's Argument.

With buildings materials at the present high level, many farmers argue it would cost more to put up a building for their machinery than they would save in preventing depreciation. The cheapest pine lumber is selling around 5 cents a foot, and almost any kind of shed necessary to house the implements on the average grain farm would cost $200 or more, they say. The tenant farmer is in a worse fix than the landowner. Tenants seldom have enough room to house their implements, and the average landowner is not liberal enough to build a shed for the other fellow's machines, especially with building material prices as they have been in the last few years.

But every farmer can afford to buy grease, oil, and paint, the greatest enemies of rust.

NO, NOT A JUNK HEAP—



BUT A THOUSAND DOLLARS' WORTH OF FARM TOOLS EXPOSED TO RAIN AND SNOW.—Barn lot corners filled with farm machinery like this one are to be found in grain growing sections throughout the Mississippi valley. This group of implements is valued at nearly $1,000, according to conservative estimates made by an implement expert, including a double disc, $110; mowing machine, $90; grain drill, $100; two cultivators, $130; side delivery rake, $90; two manure spreaders, $280, and wagon, $100. This farm contributes its share to the loss of $280,000 each year on farm machinery. [Photo by courtesy of the International Harvester company.]

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS WANT MORE AND WIDER CONCRETE ROADS

Say Du Page Co. Needs More Trunk Lines.

BY AL CHASE.

More and wider concrete roads into the outlying sections of Cook county and across Du Page county and the widening of present county thoroughfares are urged by the big subdivision firms of Chicago. It is the special complaint of realtors in Du Page county that the state has spent much money in trunk lines north and northwest of Chicago and given ut comparatively ittle to construct utlets for Chicago

"Concrete roads have done more to develop the district surrounding Chicago than any other single factor," said William Zelosky, head of the subdivision firm of that name. "Before they were built we had practically no transportation to speak of. Now, of course, bus transportation comes in with concrete roads.

Increases Values.

"The building of good roads has, of course, increased property values along them which means the county gets increased taxation.

"It's almost a necessity that the present narrow concrete roads be widened as soon as possible; the present pavement is wearing out in a good many instances. Wider pavements mean longer life for the roads and they also mean the saving of many lives from accidents caused by narrow roadways."

Mr. Zelosky believes if building costs come down there'll be a tremendous increase in home building especially along the districts served by concrete roads.

Wider Roads, Says Zander.

Henry G. Zander of Koester & Zander, one of Chicago's largest subdivision firms and president of the Chicago real estate board, said that 50 per cent of Chicago's new subdivisions are being built adjacent to the concrete highway system.

"We should have more roads, wider pavements and the sections inside the city limits should be properly maintained," he said. "We especially need wider pavements where traffic concentrates at points formed by the union of several country roads into one thoroughfare leading into Chicago."

Du Page Wants More Roads.

"There should be at least two, possibly four more wide concrete highways running out of Chicago westwards across Du Page county," said a resident of that section. "Roosevelt road and Ogden avenue both should be widened at once. At present the state hasn't given Du Page county, which gets most of the transcontinental traffic, the attention it has given the north shore and the northwest section of Cook county."

"209 Lake Shore Drive"

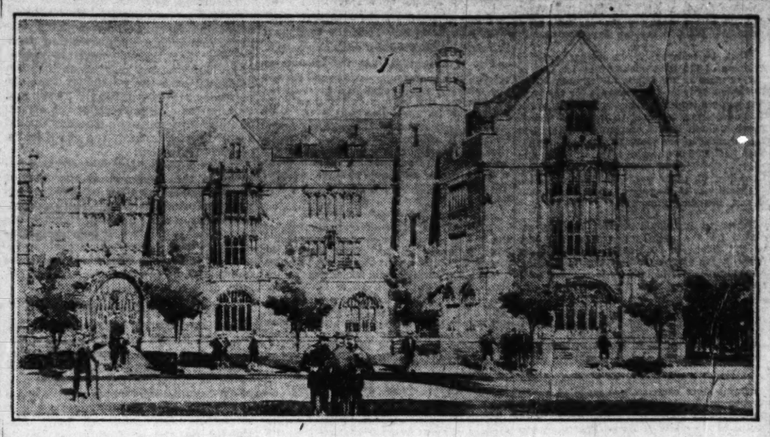
Architect Benjamin Marshall designed the above "209 Lake Shore drive" coöperative apartment building, work on which is to start at once, with completion date set for Oct. 30, 1925. You can visualize the site by knowing that the building on the right, to the west, is the eleven story Breakers; then comes the Lake Shore Drive hotel, and then the Drake. The site extends from the drive south 218 feet to Walton place. It'll be of brick, with Bedford stone trim and red tile roof. The architectural style is the Italian renaissance. You'll probably count the stories and say there are only seventeen. So did we, but the architect says there are eighteen.

Three Deck Bridge to Connect Flats

Above is one unit of a two unit apartment project now being erected at 660 Barry avenue by Edward L. Bichter from plans by Sidney Minchin, Inc. The second unit will face north on the stub end of Abbott court, and the two will be connected by a bridge or passageway sixteen feet long on the second, third, and fourth floors. There'll be a court between the two units which will be spanned by this three deck bridge.

The thirty-two apartments will have two and three rooms. The total investment, including land, is placed at $250,000 by the owner. Completion is set for next February.

New Theology Building at U. of C.



Ground will be broken shortly for the main building of the "theology group" at the University of Chicago, shown above. This will be the first major building to be erected at the Midway institution since 1915. Coolidge & Hodgdon have designed the Theology building, which is to stand just north of the Haskell museum and be connected with it. It will balance Rosenwald hall in what is called "Harper court." The Joseph Bond chapel in the "theology group" is to be built later.

On the first floor of the above building will be the administrative office of the dean of the department of theology and common room for the use of students and faculty in social gatherings; also a large lecture room and offices of the faculty. There'll be eight classrooms and a women's common room and kitchenette on the second floor. On the third will be offices, faculty rooms, etc.

Provision is made in the basement and third story for book stacks, to contain several hundred thousand volumes. The reading room on the third floor will have a timbered ceiling. The building will cost $500,000 and will be completed Aug. 1, 1925.

PLAN $406,000 CO-OP APARTMENTS FOR MADISON PARK

Architect Harold E. Gallup has drawn plans for a twenty-four apartment building to be erected by Everett Frain and John D. Hoefels at 1350 Madison park. The total cost of the project, including the land and organization of this coöperative project, is placed at $406,000. The apartments will have five and six rooms. Work will start in about six weeks, with completion date set for May 1, 1925.

The basement will have a garage entered without leaving the building. There'll also be a children's playroom and a baby carriage garage in the basement, as well as a community room for stockholders' meetings, directors' meetings, and for dancing parties of any individual tenant owner or for groups of owners.

Building Permits

There were eight building permits issued yesterday for a total of $391,000. Of the total six were in excess of $5,000. Those for $10,000 or more were:

Talman-av., N., 5729, two story brick apartment; E. H. Ladwig, owner; W. T. Charles, arch.; J. B. Cosne, mason..... $10,000

Ingleside Avenue Flat Building Sold: $120,000

The nineteen apartments at the southeast corner of Ingleside and 54th place were sold by Julius M. Kahn for a reported $120,000. The Foreman National bank took title for an undisclosed buyer. The J. C. Chutkow company was broker.

FOX FILM SEEK LOOP SITE FOR BIG FILM HOUSE

Theatrical folk like to make their deals as mysterious and theatrical as possible—and why shouldn't they, that's their business?—so all we can say about this deal is that we know the Fox Film corporation is negotiating for the so-called Ascher leasehold on the north side of Washington street, 130 feet west of State.

If the Fox interests get it they'll erect a huge movie. It can't be the biggest in the world [sorry to spoil this angle for the press agent, though probably he'll call it the largest anyway] for the site isn't big enough. It fronts 110 feet on Washington and is about 183 feet deep.

Gordon Cowie of the Washington Amusement company, which owns the leasehold, admits negotiations are on but says they're not closed. The local Fox Film manager says he never heard of the deal. We understand it's being handled at the main offices in New York.

$2,500,000 Loan Assures New Union League Bldg.

Work is to start soon on the new $3,000,000 club house of the Union League club as a result of a $2,500,000 twenty year 5½% loan being made by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company of Milwaukee, through William Scott Bond, its loan agent. The club will use the old Hotel De Jonghe property during the erection of its new home.

Bids are now being taken on the proposed new Standard club to be erected a block east of the Union League, on South Dearborn. If satisfactory work will start in the fall.

INDIANA AVENUE CORNER SOLD.

Harry Morris has sold the apartment building at the southwest corner of Indiana and 50th, lot 90x137, to Lillie E. E. Carlile for an indicated $110,050, subject to $62,050. Decker & Golden were attorneys.

LESTER B. M'ALLISTER WINS CUP IN OAK PARK REALTY GOLF CONTEST

Lester B. McAllister of David McAllister & Sons won the first prize, a silver water pitcher, in the annual handicap golf tournament of the Oak Park real estate board, held on Tuesday at the Galewood Golf club. The prize was presented by Warren T. Baster, president of the Oak Park real estate board. Mr. McAllister's gross score was 178 for the thirty-six holes; his handicap was twenty-one and his net score was 136.

Brokers' Notes

Daniel Lassen, formerly with Greenlee & Co., at 3906 Sheridan road, is now with Caristrom & Auer, at their new office at 4534 Sheridan road, and will specialize in the sale of large apartment buildings.

The Peoples Realty company has moved from 3457 South State to 12 East 43d street.

Mattress Manufacturer Buys Four Story Factory

The Burton-Dixie corporation, makers of mattresses, has bought the four story factory building on the west side of Allport street, 281 feet north of 22d, lot 275x125, from Anna Kowalski and others, for an indicated $46,000, subject to $17,000.

FORMER CHICAGOANS FEATURED IN GOTHAM MAGAZINE ARTICLE

Two former Chicagoans, both now residents of New York, are featured in the lead article in the Straus Investors' magazine for July, "The Building of a Great Business," written by S. W. Straus. They are Harry R. Daniel, assistant to the president and director of the educational department of S. W. Straus & Co., and Horace B. Matthews, vice president and director of advertising of the same concern.

HARRY R. DANIEL.

HORACE B. MATTHEWS.

Mr. Straus pays them this compliment: "Both Mr. Matthews and Mr. Daniel have accomplished much more for S. W. Straus & Co. than simply giving of themselves to the organization. Each, taking unto himself what we have been able to give him of our knowledge and experience, and himself developing with the years, has built up a department organization functioning under that same knowledge and experience. In New York, in Chicago and in San Francisco, men trained by Mr. Matthews and Mr. Daniel are carrying on according to the precepts they have laid down."

At the Realty Board

News that the permanent home committee, of which Charles M. Nichols is chairman, has asked the valuation committee of the board to make a valuation of two loop buildings, indicate that the Chicago Real Estate board is getting closer to the consummation of its plan for a home of its own.

The Chicago Real Estate board has sent a contribution of $100 to the realty board at Lorain, O., to be used for relief purposes.

BUYS SOUTH SIDE FLATS.

Peter Mortensen has bought the fourteen flats at the southeast corner of 60th and St. Lawrence, lot 135x80, from George H. Marshall for an indicated $100,000, subject to $17,000.

PLAN 18 STORY 'CO-OP' ON LAKE SHORE DRIVE

Will Have "Game Room" for Tenant Hunters.

What will be to date the tallest coöperative apartment building on Lake Shore drive is announced for the 133 feet of frontage at No. 209. It'll be eighteen stories high and will involve an investment of approximately $2,300,000. Of this amount the land is figured at $400,000.

Benjamin Marshall, a pioneer in de luxe "co-op" apartment building in Chicago, has designed a structure which, of course, has several novelties owners of the former "newest" of the tenant owned projects forgot to put in.

No Games in "Game Room."

For instance, "209" will have a "game room" where no games will ever be played, for it'll be kept at a temperature too low for even the most hardened bridge or mah jongg player. It'll be used to store any birds that a tenant-hunter may succeed in bagging.

A coöperative kitchen on the first floor is planned so if any tenant-owner wants a change in cuisine a call can be made on the community chef. This kitchen will be operated in connection with a small cafe and ballroom for tenants only. There'll also be a reception room on the first floor.

Roof Garden on Garage.

A garage is planned for the rear of the building, fronting on Walton place, with a capacity of two cars for each tenant and chauffeurs' living quarters above. The roof of the garage will have a garden similar to the one on Mr. Marshall's pink studio in Wilmette.

Plans call for thirty apartments of approximately fifteen rooms each. Fifteen will be sold and the balance rented.

PELHAM MANOR APARTMENTS TO BE MADE "CO-OP"

Pelham Manor, a four story fireproof apartment building recently completed at the northwest corner of Pine Grove and Addison by Joseph Buttas of the B-W Construction company, is to be put on the market as a coöp.

Eleven of the forty-eight apartments will be sold and the balance will be rented by the eleven tenant-owners. There are two, three, four, and five room flats.

The building is about two-thirds rented, according to Randolph G. Owsley of the Upper Michigan avenue office of H. O. Stone & Co., who will have charge of the property in its change to a coöperative basis. Capital stock amounting to $160,000 will be sold and a $425,000 first mortgage bond issue will be assumed by the tenants.

Hammond Expects 600 at Hoosier Realty Sessions

Hammond, Ind., July 19.—Elaborate arrangements are being made here to entertain the Indiana Real Estate association at its annual convention in Hammond for three days during the last week in August. It is expected 600 realtors will attend. Many from Illinois are looked for.

W. J. Hastings, president of the local board, is in charge of the convention. A "moonlight trip" on Lake Michigan (quick Watson, hand me an aspirin!) is scheduled to start from South Chicago on the last day of the convention.

The Union Woolen Mills company, which operates a chain of men's tailoring stores throughout the country, has leased for ten years at a term rental of $52,500 the store at 11215 South Michigan, from J. and E. Smith. Cerf & Ehrenhalt represented the parties.

SAUSAGE COMPANY BUYS.

EVANSTON CHURCH BUYS CORNER.

The Evanston Assembly of God, a religious organization, has bought the southwest corner of Elmwood and Greenleaf, Evanston, 50 feet, from Mrs. Mathilde Hawkinson, for an indicated $16,000.

RENTS FLATS FOR HOTEL.

Albert Bloomfield has leased the six apartment building at 4610-16 Ellis, from Sam Ross from July 1, 1924, to Sept. 30, 1935, for a term rental of $81,000, for hotel purposes.

STORES AND FLATS FOR GROVE.

Messrs. L. Dan and Joseph D. Warsaw have bought twenty-five feet frontage at 1151 Cottage Grove and intend building a store and flat building. Leon Kirk & Son were brokers.

SELLING HOME SITES BY PHOTOS NEWEST METHOD

Showing photographs to sell homesites is to be the novel method used by H. W. Elmore & Co. in disposing of his eighty acre "Wildwood" subdivision. The property is between Devon and Kenilworth, the forest preserve, Caldwell road and the St. Paul tracks.

Eighty snap shots are being taken and from these Mr. Elmore will print 500 copies of each after enlarging, or a total of 40,000 pictures.

Books of the eighty enlarged photographs will be given to each salesman. The price and future street number and the lots will be noted on the back of each picture.

"Standard" PLUMBING FIXTURES

The development of the RE-NU interchangeable valve seat is an illustration of success in giving "Standard" users full service value in all "Standard" plumbing equipment.

In faucets, the valve seat and threads get all the wear. RE-NU is a removable one-piece barrel containing valve seat and threads. Anyone can quickly remove and replace it with a new one when worn. This construction permits making the RE-NU barrel of bronze metal—almost imperious to wear. A further assurance of almost perpetual faucet life and service.

The RE-NU unit is regular equipment on all "Standard" Double Faucets and Fittings for Sinks, Lavatories and Tubs. This includes the Swinging Spout Faucet for kitchen sinks, and Combination Bath Fixtures.

You are invited to examine the RE-NU at the Chicago "Standard" Showroom. There you will find the entire line of "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures together with their proper "Standard" Nickeled Brass Fixtures.

For complete satisfaction in plumbing equipment, architects, contractors, plumbers and owners should always specify complete "Standard" installation. Look for the name "Standard" cast or stamped on Nickeled Brass Fixtures—It is your protection.

ROAD-BUILDING PULLS KENTUCKY OUT OF THE MUD

BY SCRUTATOR.

To date the Ohio river remains in a general way the boundary between paved roads and trails, that become wallows after a shower, or ancient turnpikes ruined by the new traffic put upon them.

But the contrast is passing rapidly. Highway construction is going forward very fast below the river, and many counties are out of the mud. The wealth and taxable values of western Kentucky are evidently growing, and this increase is of especial interest to Illinois, because some of it is being achieved at the expense of this state.

With important exceptions, of course, the small mining centers of Illinois leave an impression on the passerby of deteriorating tipples, rusty spur tracks, and the lush growth of grass and weeds. Some of the shrieking caution signs at these railroad crossings are almost superfluous enough to be humorous.

There are plenty of loafers in the mining towns on both sides of the river, but somehow the Illinois store fronts give an impression of more compulsory idleness. The boys do not look exactly pleasant either. You get the idea that it is just as well to extend every courtesy to the local pigs and chickens. No use in making peevish folks madder.

Over in Kentucky the mines are busier, there is more smoke about, more switching, more men passing with lamps on their caps, and sweat on their shirts.

By giving some of these boys a lift here and there you soon learn that most of the mines are working about five days a week, and while the rates of pay are far less than the union scale in force across the river, the actual earnings compare pretty favorably with the average pay of factory workers in this state, when the differences in rent and other items are considered.

Company houses are painted and look rather neat. It is evident that these people are not peons and serfs, and they certainly do not feel that way. In fact, the people look as good on one side of the river as on the other. The physique of the majority of the settlers of the Kentucky "purchase" region was good to start with and they have kept it. The colored miners are also a well fed, upstanding lot.

You hear on the Illinois side that many mines are working only two days a week; in fact, if the utility and industrial mines be excepted, the average of the merchant mines would not run over that.

It is plain without any statistics that Kentucky coal is taking markets away from Illinois towns. The labor cost of a ton of Illinois coal is figured by some operators at a minimum of 50 cents above the Kentucky cost.

Evidently Illinois mines are up against it in competitive markets for the present, while the Lewis policy of deflating the industry by weeding out the high cost mines is being carried out. How much business will be left eventually remains to be seen, but reports of mine and railroad extension in Kentucky are persistent. The writer saw very little evidence of new work now going on, however.

For Illinois outside the mining regions the decline of a basic industry in any part of the state means a loss of markets for the state's industries and a decrease in taxable values.

The latter prospect is all the more serious when considered in connection with the state's new roads and those on the program. It is already plain that many of these roads will soon have to be widened and the cost of their maintenance is certain to mount. In becoming a wheeled people Americans have rushed ahead with hardly an estimate of the cost of the changes that such a transformation involves.

But even a casual glance at the situation leads one to wonder where those folks who talk so glibly of expending American capital abroad "without limit" get their stuff. The American people are going back outdoors. They have had a taste of it and it awakens a response from their pioneer nerve cells. They are swarming over the countrysides today.

Statesmen who think they will consent to be cramped or financiers who think of normalcy are trifling with explosive popular desires.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A comparison of the freight and passenger review for the first five months of 1924 indicates a large decline in the moneys received from the freight business, but a passenger traffic that is almost equal with that of a year ago. The figures of 178 railroads show that the total passenger revenue for the first five months of the year was $433,040,580, compared with $438,340,512 in the corresponding period of last year, while the freight revenue on the same railroads declined more than $145,000,000 for the five months.

What is believed to be rather striking evidence of the tremendous expansion that is taking place in the public utility industry as the result of increasing demands for the various services rendered, was disclosed last week when reference was had to the total investment in public utility companies for the first four months of the year. In this period more than $400,000,000 was so invested, the public utilities leading all other industries in new financing. In other words, this enormous investment was at the rate of about $3,400,000 a day, including Sundays.

Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending July 16, 1924, by 271 banks in 36 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,182,235,000, an increase of 24.9 per cent compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 265 banks in 35 clearing houses in the district for the week ending July 16, 1924, amounted to $1,179,934,000, an increase of 1.5 per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year.

A sale of 5,500 shares of Kaufmanns Department store common was made at public auction in Pittsburgh at $150 a share, the highest price on record. The shares were owned by the estate of Morris Kaufmann and bought by Edgar and Oliver Kaufmann, active interests in the management of the business. The money involved was $825,000. The open market price of the common has been around $125. Originally the common was offered to officials and employees at $52.50 a share. The inheritance tax on the sale will be very high. This transaction, it is said, gives control to Edgar Kaufmann.

Loans and discounts of the New York clearing house banks this week increased $45,764,000, according to the weekly statement issued today. Demand deposits gained $33,364,000 and time deposits were up $23,064,000. Surplus reserve showed a gain of $10,029,030.

There has been heavy buying of scrap by the Youngstown, Canton, and Massillon mills at advanced prices. A general improvement in scrap is a trustworthy indication of heavier mill operations to come shortly.

The Ford Motor company has announced an increase amounting approximately to $200 a car on the prices of the Lincoln models, according to a Detroit dispatch, which is confirmed by the Chicago office of the company. The new prices are effective July 21. There is no change in the price of Ford cars. An increase of $75 in the price of the Fordson tractor has also been announced, effective Monday.

Directors of the Bethlehem Steel corporation meet Thursday for dividend action. Bethlehem, still on $1.25 quarterly basis, is selling almost three points below Republic, which is paying nothing, indicating doubt as to maintenance of the Bethlehem dividend.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has reduced gasoline 1c to ¼c a gallon, according to a New York dispatch. The Texas company and the Gulf Refining company have met the reduction.

The United States Glass company has declared a quarterly dividend of 25c a share on its common stock. The last previous dividend was 50c a share quarterly, paid April 24.

NEW YORK BANK CLEARINGS.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows an excess in reserve of $38,672,240. This is an increase of $10,029,030.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1924; Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—A survey of the men's clothing industry by the department of commerce with a view of reducing production and merchandising costs and introducing more economical and efficient methods of distribution, is being discussed by government officials and leaders of the industry. Following a request from three of the largest manufacturers in New York, the department addressed inquiries to other producing centers, and it is understood that the industry is practically unanimous in desiring the survey. The replies from manufacturers are still being received, and it is probable that a decision will be announced within the next ten days or two weeks. If the survey is undertaken it will occupy at least a year's time, and besides distribution and costs will probably cover competition of retailers, location of stores, exclusive agencies, branded and unbranded goods, and other related matters.

FALL RIVER, Mass.—Tentative plans for the "Fall River Cotton Carnival week" were approved by the cotton cloth week committee today, and it was decide1 to hold a combined carnival and exposition at the state armory from Sept. 15 to 20. All of the textile mills will have displays and there will also be booths of historical interest. The carnival will be in cooperation with New England week, which is to be observed throughout all the New England states.

THAT TRACTION JINX STILL IN SOLUTION'S WAY

Pessimism over the outcome of final negotiations with surface lines officials scheduled for tomorrow morning was apparent among administration leaders and their traction advisers yesterday. Nor was any marked enthusiasm displayed over the possibility that the promised meeting of Mayor Dever and Samuel Insull, chairman of the elevated lines' directorate on Tuesday, would result in a solution of the city's transportation problem.

If Monday's conference fails to compromise the demands of the surface lines' officials and their banker-backers with the price offers of the city's representatives, a statement shouldering the blame for collapse of the negotiations upon the owners and operators and revealing the terms of the city's various offers, will be made public, Mayor Dever indicated yesterday.

Make Price Known Tuesday.

And on Tuesday it is expected that Mr. Insull will announce the price which will be demanded by his interests if the elevated properties are to be acquired by the city as a unit of a municipally operated system of surface, elevated and sugway transportation. An alternate plan considered by the administration would link the elevated lines with a loop subway and a fleet of motor busses, the latter to be employed as "feeders" to the elevated lines.

Because of recently announced plans for $23,000,000 worth of extensions to the lines, it is expected that the price to be asked by the elevated lines' owners will not be less than $100,000,000. For rate-making purposes, the state commerce commission several years ago, appraised the value of the properties at $87,000,000.

The mayor's limit offer for the surface lines is many millions of dollars short of the figure—$162,500,000 or the capital account value, demanded by the lines' owners, he admitted yesterday although declining to reveal the amount.

Present Status of Parleys.

Problems of control of the lines and the acceptability of the proposed Schwartz utility certificates in lieu of cash if a price agreement is reached, had been tentatively agreed upon after months of parley when the conferences were adjourned shortly before the Democratic national convention with the companies adamant in their demand for recognition of the purchase of the 1907 traction ordinance by the city.

The ordinance provides that the city, if it elects to purchase the surface lines must pay the capital account value which has grown from $55,000,000 when the ordinance was passed to its present total of $162,000,00.

Air Mail Planes Delayed by Bad Weather in Iowa

Des Moines, Ia., July 19.—Two aerial mail planes were delayed at the Carlisle landing field near here today by unfavorable weather. Pilot Garrison and Pilot Wagner, both flying from Chicago to Omaha, remained here until shortly before noon, when they resumed their flights.

COUNCIL GROUP TO SEEK PROBE OF GAS CO. BOOKS

Attorney Richberg Suggests Inquiry.

Examination of the books of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company and those affiliated or subsidiary companies will be attempted by the aldermanic gas, oil and electric light committee. It will be attempted in accord with the recent council order directing an investigation into alleged excessive gas rates.

The first meeting of the committee will be held within a week, declared its chairman, Ald. John Clark [30th]. He hinted that while the gas company will readily consent to an audit of its own books by the city's experts, a controversy may develop when a demand for inspection of the books of a subsidiary company, the Chicago By-Products Coke company, is made.

The subsidiary company's bonds, aggregating $13,000,000 are guaranteed by the gas company and stockholders of the latter company have been assured, it is said, that the subsidiary company's plants and property are "in time to become the property of the gas company without any direct cash expenditure."

The investigation into the reasonableness of gas rates, the service rendered by the gas company and the operations of the gas companies and subsidiaries was suggested in a report furnished the gas, oil, and electric light committee by its special attorney Donald R. Richberg.

A Frank Talk on Real Estate Bonds

Future Rents and Present Bonds

Realizing rents are high, and that a reduction is both desirable and probable, our loans are made only with such readjustment provided for. Safety to both principal and interest is thus assured.

From the very beginning, 20 years ago, we have made a thorough study of every angle of the building and renting situation. Then, as now, we rigidly analyzed every building project submitted to us.

We are influenced to pass on an issue only on its merits of absolute security.

In making loans on our most recent issues, even more rigid requirements have had to be met. So, today, bonds offered by us are fully protected to meet present conditions and future possibilities.

Let us show you, with proofs, why now is the time to invest in Real Estate Bonds. We have a well-diversified list of desirable issues that yield 7%.

TREND OF GRAIN UPWARD DESPITE BETTER WEATHER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

World's conditions came to the fore as the dominating influence in shaping the course of the wheat market. Lowest prices of the day were made early on selling induced by more optomistic crop reports from the Canadian northwest with soaking rains over parts of the three provinces. Offerings on the decline were absorbed by commission houses, and later cables telling of dry weather in Australia and that Indian shippers had bought back 2 cargoes, caused a resumption of general buying with an advance of 2¾@3¾ from the early low with net gains of 1⅝@2c.

Corn was unsettled, ¼c lower to 2c higher, with the new crop deliveries leading. Oats were 1c lower on July and ½c higher to ½c lower on the deferred futures, while rye gained ⅛@⅜c for the day.

Grains Higher for the Week.

While there were numerous sharp setbacks in the grain markets the last week the trend was distinctly upward and active deliveries were not far from the best figures on the crop at the close. As compared with a week ago wheat was up 7⅛@9¾c, corn 1½@1½c, the former on July. Oats gained 1⅝@2⅛c on the deferred futures, and was ⅜c lower on July while rye was 4¼@5½c higher.

Winnipeg Leads Rally.

Winnipeg wheat showed more strength than Chicago and closed 2½@2½c higher and up about 4c from the low point of the day. It was claimed that part of the strength there came from buying orders from Chicago. Houses with northwestern and eastern connections were on the buying side here, and the pressure was decidedly limited on the way up in view of the news and the immense profit taking the last few days.

There was a limited export business under way at the seaboard. Late messages from Minneapolis estimated the crop of the three Canadian provinces at a maximum of 275,000,000 bu, or 175,000,000 bu. less than harvested last year. July closed at $1.28⅝, September at $1.26⅝@1.26¾, December at $1.29⅝@1.29½, and May at $1.34¼@1.34⅜.

Corn Needs Hot Weather.

Rain and unseasonably low temperatures for this time of the year were regarded by the trade as decidedly bullish on the deferred deliveries of corn. At no time were they more than a fraction under the finish of Friday and at the top December equaled the best figure on the crop. Commission houses and local traders were good buyers. Trade in July was limited and it closed at $1.09¾ after a range of ⅝c for the day. September was $1.05@1.04⅞ at the last with December at $2@91⅝c, and May at 95⅝@95½c.

Cash corn declined 1@2c with receipts of 181 cars. Country offerings were smaller due to reduced bids from terminals. Weekly forecast suggested showers with temperatures about normal over the entire corn belt.

July Oats Weaken.

July oats are apparently going through the period of readjustment from an old to a new crop basis, and with a relatively slow eastern demand and further easiness in the spot market it closed 1c lower at 53¾c. Strength in corn helped the deferred deliveries. Receipts, 65 cars.

Rye was easier early, but quickly reversed its action later in sympathy with wheat and with Winnipeg and closed at the top. There was 300,000 bu. reported sold for export at the seaboard.

Provisions Close Higher.

Commission house demand for lard was strongly in evidence and with hogs and corn tending higher it was easy to bring about an advance with net gains of 10@20c at the last. Bellies were 5@12½c higher and ribs unchanged to 7½c lower. Deliveries on July contracts were 100,000 lbs. lard, 100,000 lbs. ribs and 50,000 lbs. bellies. As compared with the previous week lard gained 57½@65c, ribs 17½@25c and bellies 72½@80c. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 200,000 bu wheat and 300,000 bu rye were estimated in late messages from the seaboard. Business in wheat is still restricted by the erratic trend of the futures market. Charters were reported made at Baltimore for 160,000 to 200,000 bu new crop garlicky red winter wheat for late July-August shipment.

Chicago cash handlers sold 20,000 bu wheat, 65,000 bu corn, and 80,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 40,000 bu corn and 40,000 bu oats to go to store. Deliveries on July contracts were 26,000 bu wheat and 5,000 bu rye.

Cash wheat continues in good demand, with prices at St. Louis 1@3c higher at about the best figures on the crop, while Kansas City and Omaha were unchanged to 1c higher. No. 2 hard here sold at 1@3c and No. 2 red at 1@1½c over the July. Receipts, 57 cars. Milwaukee, 2c lower.

While offerings of cash corn were somewhat larger, the demand was good and prices 1@2c lower, with the basis firm at 2½@3c over July for No. 2 yellow. Mixed sold at 2¼@2¾c, and white, 2¾@3c over the future. Receipts, 181 cars. St. Louis was unchanged to 1½c lower; Kansas City, 3¾c lower; Omaha, unchanged to ½c lower, and Milwaukee, 2c lower.

Cash oats are going through the period of readjustment from an old to a new crop basis. No. 2 white sold at 2c over and No. 3 white at ½c under to 1c over July. Receipts, 65 cars.

COTTON PRICES LOWER

NEW YORK, July 19.—COTTON—Liquidation of good volume based on favorable private reports from the southwest and expectations of a bearish report on Monday carried prices down with the close at around the bottom, at losses of 10@53 points. Some of the recent heavy buyers of late were sellers on the decline. The trade regarded the break as a natural reaction after an advance of nearly 3c a pound of late, which has weakened the technical position of the market. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The revival of the grain markets after being lower and the strong close convinced a majority of the traders that they are not ready for a permanent break. They absorbed an immense amount of wheat and corn by realizers, and to have corn sold at practically the highest of the season for December and wheat well up toward the top is encouraging to holders who believe in higher prices.

Rains in Missouri and west of the Missouri river are delaying the threshing of wheat, while in the northwest they are beneficial, coming at the filling time. The damage that has resulted from recent drought and heat cannot be fully recovered by any amount of rain from now on.

One of the largest cash corn handlers says that he looks for bull markets for a year to come. He believes that there will be continued speculative buying, and that prices are to move up irregularly, although he does not look for rapid advances like those of late.

A St. Louis cash grain man who is here talked bullish on all grains and says there has been too much rain in the winter wheat country, which has necessitated buying old red wheat owing to difficulty of securing new crop. The shortage in the soft winter wheat crops this year he believes will cause it to sell at a big premium.

"Our Canadian crop advices continue of a decidedly bullish character," says James E. Cairns of Jackson Bros. & Co. "The Winnipeg market reflects the character of the condition in the sharp advance, any day attempt to purchase wheat there puts prices up here. We look to see the market work irregularly higher. Corn is not making the progress it should, the cool unfavorable weather retarding the growth, and our Northwestern advices that corn is tasseling out only three to four feet high."

Thomson & McKinnon believe the wheat market a two-sided affair because of the slow export trade, as opposed to the expected shortage in Canada.

The strength in the Winnipeg wheat market, with its advance of 4c from the early low point, was said to be on restatement of speculative holdings due to bullish news from London.

A. O. Mason, who joined the Chicago Board of Trade in 1880, posted his membership for transfer yesterday. He is head of the Washburn-Crosby wheat department and is going to Europe.

It is expected that the new ruling in regard to sulphured oats by the department of agriculture will be taken up by the Board of Trade directors at their next meeting. A gathering of the trade here yesterday considered the proposition, but took no decided action.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

There is a shortage of 288,000,000 bu wheat in eleven leading producing countries of the northern hemisphere as reported to the United States bureau of agriculture. Their crop this year is estimated at 1,919,000,000 bu, against 2,199,000,000 bu last year. The reduction in estimates are due to losses in Canada.

Argentina's corn crop this year is the largest since 1914-'15, as reported by the department of agriculture. The aggregate is 276,756,000 bu, against 176,102,730 bu last year. Exportable surplus is 190,000,000 bu of which a considerable part has already been exported.

The Red Book statistical annex for the first half of the year giving the latest grain figures has been issued by Howard, Bartels & Co. of the Daily Trade Bulletin.

There Were Four Stocks; Now, There Are Three

Some months ago we advertised this Bureau in the Chicago Tribune under the heading, "THERE ARE FOUR STOCKS."

We stated that two of these stocks were paying dividends, that two of the companies concerned owed nothing and another was practically debt free; that the one that owed nothing had in its treasury the equivalent of one-half its then market price.

We stated that our subscribers were accumulating these stocks and had every reason to believe that they would double in value probably this year.

One of these stocks has doubled in value since that time, and the others are still under accumulation, and we think there are remarkably bullish possibilities in the purchase of these stocks.

Among the important stocks that we have urged our subscribers over and over to buy, during the last few months, have been American Water Works under 50, the Participating Preferred under 70, West Penn under 60, General Electric under 200, to mention only a few of the remarkable profit making opportunities that have been pointed out in our Daily Analytical and Advisory Service.

So far as we can learn the general public is not in the market on any great scale as yet, and even a tyro in Wall Street appreciates the fact that it is when the general public is widely extended in the market that the market is especially unsafe.

Consequently, it appears to us that it will be wise for any who are contemplating an investment in the market to do so before general public interest has been aroused, either by continued advancing tendencies in prices or by the resumption of favorable trade activities.

There are many railroad stocks that we think should appreciate twenty-five to fifty per cent of their present values within a reasonable time, and we would like to have readers of this advertisement take advantage of some of these opportunities and become associated with this Bureau.

Chicago subscribers receive service by the Twentieth Century fast mail each morning.

The regular subscription rates are $20 for one month, $50 for three months, or $150 for one year, but those who respond to this advertisement, during the month of July, will be given the advantage of a special rate, for initial subscription, namely, $30 for three months.

Sheridan-Estes Apartments

THESE bonds will appeal to those who have not yet placed their funds for July investment. To those who are not already Cochran & McCluer investors this issue offers a splendid introduction to its service.

The Sheridan-Estes Apartments are located in a residential section recognized as having no superior in the city. Just off of Sheridan Road, the map emphasizes the proximity of this building to Lake Michigan. In spite of its many advantages, however, this building is being constructed by its owners with the idea of offering its apartments at moderate rentals—it is only on buildings of this type that Cochran & McCluer Company have loaned. It has avoided as security apartments of the expensive type and other highly specialized properties where incomes are unreliable. The success of this policy is best evidenced by a record of 43 Years 100% Safe—never a foreclosure on a bond issue.

Interest from July 2d Free

Cut out this advertisement and keep it when you call or write for the attractive circular which describes this loan. If during the month of July you purchase one or more of these Sheridan-Estes bonds which are dated July 2d, they will be sold to you at par without accrued interest. This is a splendid opportunity while these bonds last. Act now. Denominations $500 and $1,000 on cash or payment plan.

No Salesman Will Call

Our investment business has always been direct. We have no salesmen, therefore none will call.

The circular describing the Sheridan-Estes Apartments is the handsomest of its kind. You should have a copy whether you are in the market at the present time or not. Write or phone for your copy or call for a friendly discussion.

One year ago	13.00@13.50

Tendency in hogs continued higher, advancing values largely 5@10c on the week-end session, with the day's top and average prices up 5c at $8.20 and $7.80, respectively. Better grades, due to urgent eastern orders reflected most advance, narrowing the "spread" between light and heavy butchers to 10c best 210 lb., averages selling on a level with prime heavy butchers at $8.20, while top 190 pounders reached $8.10, highest of the year for that weight. Active buying on local account left only 3,500 in the pens at the close.

After a break of 15@25c the opening day of last week, the hog market quickly recovered the loss and additional gains after mid-week brought values 40@50c above the previous week's close and 80@ 85c higher than the low point the previous week. Closing prices were fully $1.00 above two weeks ago. Practically 45 per cent of the week's hog receipts arrived Monday, establishing a new record for July at 91,965, which stands within 4,999 of the record for any season.

Barring the previous week, last week's hog receipts at 202,100 stand the largest since last March, being 18,100 below arrivals a week ago, and 15,100 smaller than the unusual large supply a year ago. Last week's offerings were larger than any corresponding week in over ten years, with the exception of a year ago, being 71,800 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 238 pounds, equaled the previous week, being two pounds lighter than a year ago, lighter than any corresponding period since 1917 and four pounds under the ten year average. General average cost of hogs at Chicago last week at $7.50 equaled the highest since last October, being 40c above the previous week, 50c higher than a year ago, and $4.85 below the ten year average.

The second largest cattle receipts of the year broke prices unevenly 25c to $1.00 during last week, with butcher stock off the sharpest. Receipts totaled 71,500, against 59,650 the previous week. Although offerings decreased some after mid-week, the market closed in a top-heavy condition. General average price of good beef steers for the week dropped to $9.00, within 25c of the lowest weekly average since March, 1923, being 15c under the previous week, 50c lower than a year ago, and $2.45 below the ten year average. Barring 1921 last week's cattle prices averaged lower than any corresponding period since 1914.

Sharp advances earlier in the week offset declines after mid-week and prevailing lamb prices are still 50@75c above a week ago, with instances of $1.00 gain. Daily top prices jumped from $14.15 the initial day of last week to $15.00 Wednesday, the week's top. Aged sheep, due to scarcity and moderate demand, gradually worked up 50@75c during the week, lifting the week's average to $8.65, against $8.25 the previous week. Lambs averaged $14.15, against $13.65 the previous week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 74,000 hogs, and 22,000 sheep, against 26,135 cattle, 91,965 hogs, and 12,536 sheep, a year ago, and 17,134 cattle, 50,921 hogs, and 7,751 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 67,000 cattle, 198,000 hogs, and 78,000 sheep, against 65,526 cattle, 209,314 hogs, and 65,779 sheep the corresponding period a year ago.

Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.

The federal intermediate credit banks were authorized by the United States government to provide credit facilities for the agricultural and live stock interests of the country. The federal and joint stock land banks, in conjunction with the older established agencies, provide ample facilities for long time farm credits, secured by land mortgages. Commercial banks provide sufficient short time credits, ranging usually up to six months. The fundamental need of the farmer, however, is for credits running from nine months to three years—credits intermediate in maturity between the long time land mortgage and the six months' maximum of the commercial banks. It was to fill this need that the federal intermediate credit banks were formed.

While these banks are distinct corporations, they are closely allied to the federal land banks. The agricultural credits act of 1923, under which they were authorized, provided that each federal farm bank should organize a federal intermediate credit bank. The land bank and the intermediate credit bank of a district have the same directors and officers. They both are under the general supervision of the federal farm loan board and are served by appraisers and examiners appointed by the board. Each federal intermediate credit bank must make at least three reports a year, as requested, to the federal farm loan board, and shall be examined and audited at least once a year by the board. Each bank has an authorized capital of $5,000,000, and the entire capital of the twelve banks, $60,000,000, is owned by the United States government. The earnings of the banks go one-half to the government and one-half to the bank's surplus until such surplus equals 100 per cent of the capital, after which only 10 per cent is to go to surplus and the rest to the government.

The business of the banks is to discount notes and make loans through commercial banks and trust companies, or duly capitalized agricultural and live stock loaning corporations and make advances to cooperative marketing concerns upon properly warehoused staple agricultural products, or on live stock secured by chattel mortgages. Such advances may not exceed 75 per cent of the market value of the products so pledged. Federal land bank appraisers are provided to investigate and report on products covered by warehouse receipts or live stock covered by chattel mortgages against which the manks make loans and land bank examiners are available to examine and report on the condition of organizations applying for loans.

To raise funds for its loaning operations the federal intermediate credit banks are authorized to issue debentures from time to time, subject to the approval of the federal farm loan board. The issuance of debentures is limited to ten times the paid in capital and surplus of the banks. These debentures, the act provides, "must be secured by at least a like face amount of cash, or notes or other obligations discounted or purchased or representing loans made," and the federal farm loan board prescribes the "rules and regulations governing the receipt, custody, substitution and release of collateral instruments securing such debentures."

Just as the federal land bank bonds are the joint and several obligations of all the federal land banks, the federal intermediate credit bank debentures are the joint and several obligations of all the federal intermediate credit banks. The capital and entire resources of all twelve banks are behind each debenture outstanding.

These debentures have been held to be instrumentalities of the government, and as such they, and the income derived from them, are exempt from federal, state, municipal and local taxation. We regard these debentures as a conservative investment.

With all the safeguards which have made first mortgage bonds a preferred investment for generations, these bonds have the added advantage of the United States Government as tenant, paying the rent which provides the money for the purposes of the bond issue. The Post Office Department operating revenue for 1924 is estimated at $700,000,000.

The New York Times.

New York, July 19.—Under ordinary and normal circumstances the markets are dull places on a Saturday morning of mid-July. However, present conditions are neither ordinary nor normal and there is no evidence of a case of the doldrums even on a day in which holiday influences usually would have large effects.

Today's markets were brisk and active on the stock exchange, in the grain markets, and in the foreign exchange markets. Prices were held down, of course, by an extraordinary amount of profit taking, such as is to be anticipated at the week end. But so strong was the underlying tone in these markets, that even the moderately heavy selling occasioned by the profit taking did not have the effect of holding prices down.

Rails and Oils Advance.

On the stock exchange the railroad shares continued their advance with a new group—that of the oil shares—forging its way to prominence in trading activity. The opinion prevails, in our financial districts at least, that the readjustments which have taken place during the week in the oil industry are the final ones which will be necessary this year. It is one of the Wall street characteristics in this respect, that it is apt to take a cheerful attitude on any group of securities when "the bad news is out" about that group.

Of the leaders, Steel common closed the day unchanged, but American Can and Baldwin gained a point or more. Low priced shares were again prominent both in the industrial and railroad list, and active demand was experienced for New Haven, Kansas City Southern, International Nickel, and also in the medium priced issues, including Republic Steel, Anaconda, Pan-American, American Smelters, and Congoleum. General Electric jumped 3⅞ to a new high record of 247⅞. Short covering was evidenced in some issues, accounting for the sharp gains, especially in some of the oil shares, which moved higher as a group.

Bank Clearings Higher.

If the weekly figures on bank clearings may still be accepted as an index of business conditions for the country as a whole, the volume transacted at the present time is greater than it was a year ago, despite the much talked of depression in business circles. There are a few sections of the country, dependent upon certain industries for their prosperity, however, which show declines in clearings compared with last year, but the aggregate records a sharp gain compared with 1923.

The gain for the country the last week compared with 1923 was 14.9 per cent, while the increase for New York City alone was 26.3 per cent. Much of the total gain was due to the larger clearings reported in this city. Barring New York City, where clearings have gained, probably due primarily to increased activity in the securities market, some interesting changes are reported.

Chicago, the grain and live stock center of the middle west, reports a gain of 6.8 per cent in clearings, while Philadelphia, Boston, Kansas City, San Francisco, Baltimore, and New Orleans all show gains, but Pittsburgh, which reflects conditions in the steel industry, and Cleveland, a manufacturing town, show decreases, and Detroit, an automobile center, reports a gain of 16 per cent.

Foreign Exchange Is Strong.

The foreign exchanges rose vigorously in the brief trading today, sterling getting through $4.38, within approximately 1 cent of the year's best price. The other exchanges were strong, too, the guilder being one of the outstanding features. Just at the moment, the chief factor in the strength of the exchanges is doubtless the London conference, and such an upturn as occurred today must be put down to banking optimism over the progress thus far of the inter-allied conference on reparations.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

While trading in the local unlisted securities market continued fairly heavy, there were few important price changes.

Buyers common advanced sharply from 66 to high sales at 75, closing 73½ bid, 75½ asked—a net gain of 7 points for the week. The preferred was unchanged at 97 bid, 99 asked. Burroughs Adding Machine new no par value common, improved 4 points to a close of 49 bid, 49½ asked. The preferred ranged between 98 and 100. By-Products Coke was 1 point better at 34 bid, 36 asked. Northwestern Yeast was quoted throughout 146 bid, 153 asked, with little stock changing hands. A break of 2 points of 82 bid, 84 asked, featured a light trade in Wahl preferred. National Tea preferred was traded in at 100. Allied Pick preferred closed fractionally lower at 89½ bid, 90¼ asked. Butler Brothers moved within a narrow range, all sales being made between 33¾ and 33¾. Beatrice Creamery was without material change at 59½ bid, 61½ asked. Great Lakes Transit common was offered for sale at 35, with little interest on the buying side. Offerings of the preferred at 85 also failed to bring out definite bids.

Trading in the motor and accessory shares was on a limited scale with practically no changes in quoted values. Ford of Canada sold at 448 and 451. Paige-Detroit ranged between 13⅜ and 14. Timken Axle was ⅛ point higher at 5⅞ bid, 5⅞ asked. Motor Wheel was up ⅛ at 9¼ bid, 9½ asked, while Motor Products again sold at 54. Stewart showed little change at 13¾ bid, 13⅞ asked. Commonwealth-Jones was 1 point higher at 31½ bid, 32½ asked.

The sugar stocks continued dull. Public utilities, while somewhat less active, ruled firm throughout. American Light and Traction advanced from 132 to top sales at 140, but this gain was practically all relinquished in the late trading in closing at 134½ bid, 135½ asked. Tennessee Electric common was 2 points higher at 39½ bid, 40¼ asked, while the second preferred was fractionally improved at 65¼ bid, 65¾ asked. American Power and Light was without material change at 287 bid, 290 asked. Northern Ontario Light and Power common was off 3 points at 49 bid, 51 asked. Commonwealth Power Corporation was equally lower at 93¼ bid, 94½ asked. The preferred issue rose a point, however, to 78 bid, 80 asked. Sales of Lehigh Power securities ranged between 80 and 81. Appalachian Power and Light recoded 1 point at 18¾ bid, 19½ asked. On the trades Electric Railway securities broke a point to 15 bid, 16 asked. National Power and Light was in demand, being up 4 points at 134 bid, 136 asked.

The Inside Story of the Great JORDAN Line Eight

[Trade Mark]

THIS is the inside story of The Great Jordan Line Eight.

We might as well tell it.

Every manufacturer—every dealer knows it's true.

Every Jordan owner has realized it for years so here it is frankly—in short paragraphs—simple words—easy to understand.

There are many thousands of Jordan owners throughout the world. Ninety-nine per cent of them buy Jordan after Jordan, some of them buying year after year—others retain their original cars, some of them for six and eight years.

The first Jordan ever built has gone 300,000 miles and is still in the hands of the original owner.

Think of it—ninety-nine per cent of all the people to whom you have rendered satisfactory service remaining loyal to their favored car.

Jordan is the greatest repeat order car in the industry.

This is the great fundamental of Jordan success.

It imposes an obligation.

It means that as the industry progresses Jordan must anticipate the future.

Jordan must constantly build a better car.

Jordan must lead.

Frankly, The Great Line Eight has been produced to give to Jordan owners a better automobile than they ever had before—better looking—more comfortable—better performing—longer lasting—the best job that Jordan engineers or any other engineers in this country ever produced.

Think again what this means.

The success of the great merchants of the country is not based merely upon the acquisition of new buyers each year.

Success is based upon the service rendered to old customers who in turn automatically create new customers.

Jordan cars are built for Jordan owners—successful, sincere people of character, good taste and judgment.

Speed is attractive to them only because it means reserve power.

Economy is attractive only because it means common sense.

Fine mechanical workmanship is attractive because it means long life.

We want every Jordan owner to feel that The Great Line Eight was built for him.

It's the next step in his progress toward ultimate satisfaction in a motor car.

Thousands of these cars will go into the hands of Jordan owners before the end of the year.

Our belief is that these new owners will find in this car an automobile which they can drive year after year with satisfaction, with economy and with perfect confidence that it will command the highest resale value of any car in its class.

This, in short, is the inside story of The Great Line Eight.

Call up the Jordan dealer.

Get your name on the list of those who will be invited to see The Great Jordan Line Eight when it arrives.

Then buy one.

Keep it for one year or ten years.

Then you will realize the meaning of Jordan success.

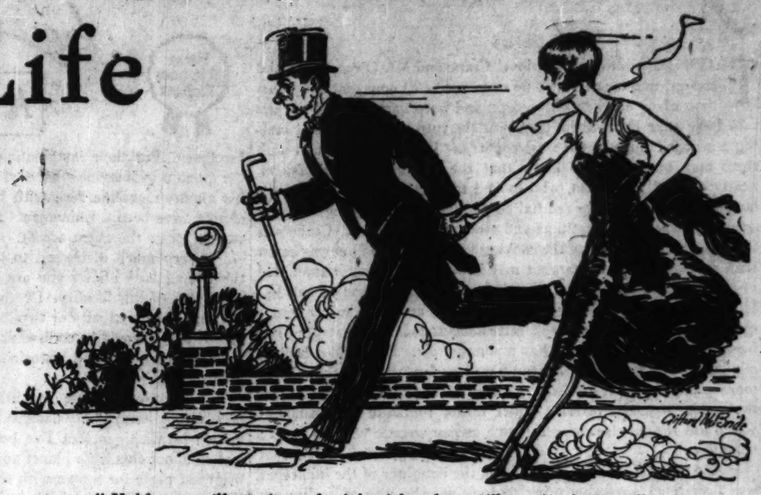
Mr. Dooley on City Life

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE



"He'd see millyonaires elopin' with other millyonaires' wives."

"SO ye didn't go to New York afther all," said Mr. Hennessy.

"No," said Mr. Dooley. "Th' older I get th' surer I am that a man's happyer not doin' what he intinded to do. Make up ye're mind to do something, set ye're heart on it, let no wan persuade ye not to do it, an' thin don't do it. In that way ye'll niver be disappinted.

"So I didn't go. But me cousin Tim wint. Our leader has a grreat opinyion iv Tim as a statesman. He can holler louder thin Sinitor Robinson an' longer thin Sinitor Carraway. Our leader says to Tim, 'Tim,' he says, 'ye ought to make a gr-reat impressyon on th' con-vintion,' he says. 'Whin will I be expicted to make me addhress?' says Tim. 'I have a good speech I delivered at th' Iron Wurruker's Foorth iv July cilybration in nineteen twinty. There was a sthrong wind, a brass band an' a cannon again me but Harrigan tells me he heard ivry wurrud fr'm th' back row iv th' aujeence.' 'Ye won't be called on to speak,' says George. 'But ivry time th' name iv Smith is mintioned ye just holler,' he says.

"But whin Tim got down there he found that there wure thousans iv Tammany men that cud holler as loud as he cud or nearly so; besides they had klaxons, whistles, bass dhrums, cornets, an' fire sirens to help thim. An' whin he heerd that their leader started in life sellin' fish, he give up in despair. He's a soloist annyhow. It's a shame to shove a gr-reat artist like that back in th' chorus.

"HE had a fine sind-off fr'm th' fam'ly. He hasn't been further east thin Benton Harbor f'r thirty years, an' ye'd think this time he was goin' to thry to climb Mount Everest. 'Ar-re ye sure ye have ivrything ye want?' says his wife. 'Ye mustn't buy annything here.' 'I'm all fixed,' says Tim. 'I've got a safety razor, fifty dollars, an' nine collars,' he says. 'Have ye got ye're autymatick?' says his son. 'It's in th' valise,' says Tim. 'Betther put it in ye're pocket,' says young Tim. 'Ye may need it at anny minyit,' he says. 'Th' place is full iv bandits.' 'I think I'm all right,' says Tim. 'Well,' says his wife, 'as a last wurrud to ye I want ye to promise me that whin ye get to that wicked city ye'll not enther anny cabaret, dance hall, resthrant, theayter or other place iv amusemint. I s'pose fr'm what I've heerd there are no churches there, so ye'll have to make ye're devotions in ye'er room. But be sure to lock ye're dure, an' above all things don't ye go near Wall sthreet,' says she. 'An' pap,' says young Tim, 'don't buy anny cocaine fr'm sthrangers. Ye know it don't agree with ye annyhow,' he says.

"So th' simple villager started off on his purlous advinture an' his wife ast Father Kelly to offer up th' pray'rs iv th' congregation f'r him. He was back again last week lookin' as well as iver. There wasn't a bullet hole in his clothes. He hadn't acquired anny habit formin' vices excipt comin' home. He looked about th' same as anny wan wud look who'd come a thousan' miles in an upper berth.

"'WELL,' says I, 'welcome home! I'm glad to see ye safe back. I s'pose ye had an uproarious time,' says I. 'It was pretty gay,' says he. 'What did ye do?' says I. 'Well,' says he, 'iv coorse I wint to th' convintion an' hollered f'r Smith. But nobody seemed to notice me. I don't think I was at me best annyhow. There was a fellow on wan side iv me with a thrombone an' a fellow on th' other side with a pair iv cymbals an they kind iv threw me off me key. So afther awhile I see it was no use thryin' to keep th' attintion iv th' diligates an' I wint back to me room. There were two diligates fr'm Missoury in me bed with their boots on an' I didn't want to disturb thim because Brennan needed their votes, so I took a sthreet car an' wint over to see me cousin Felix Madden in Flatbush. He's got a good job in th' departmint iv public wurruks an' is a close friend iv Red Mike's, mind ye. He lives in a fine two story an' basement house with gerranyum beds an' a crokay ground. He's well fixed. I stayed there th' rest iv th' week.

"'An' what did ye do in this haunt of gayety?' says I. 'Well,' says he, 'Felix had a week off to go to th' con-vintion so he stayed with me. We had a good time. He's a gr-reat host. What did we do? Well, we played checkers. An' we played sivin up. An' we pitched horseshoes. I bate him at horseshoes but he thrimmed me at sivin up. But it was all right. They were his cards. O, yes, an' wan night we wint to th' movies an' see a fine play. Ye must go to see it whin they bring it out here nex' year. It's called, "Way Down East." It's a farm play with chickens in it,' says he.

"'AN' didn't ye see annything iv th' gay, th' wicked, th' volupchoos city? Didn't ye see New York at all?' says I. 'Iv coorse, I see it,' says he. 'How cud I miss seein' it?' says he. 'But what was it like?' says I. 'In manny respicts,' says Tim, 'it's like a large city, an' in other ways diff'rent. Part iv it looks like Chicago, part like Cedar Rapids, an' part like th' bohunk settlement back iv th' dumps. Th' people ye see wure much th' same as ye see in Chicago with a considerable sprinklin' iv Christyans. They didn't seem to pay no more attintion to th' con-vintion thin if 'twas held in Greenland. Like most people, they looked as though they were goin' about their business or lookin' into th' windows iv dhry goods stores. I see a big crowd standin' in th' sthreet wan day an' says I to mesilf: "This must be excitin.' Maybe it's Billy McAdoo himsilf deliverin' an oration." I had a lot iv throuble breakin' through, an' whin I got to th' front row it was two fellows mendin' a gas pipe,' he says.

"So th' simple villager started on his purlous advinture."

"'But didn't ye see annything iv th' wild an' dissipated life iv New York, ye bould explorer?' says I in despair. 'Didn't ye have no advintures, globe trotter? What about Broadway? What about th' Gr-reat White Way?' 'Well,' says Tim, 'it's a good long sthreet, but not as long as Halsted sthreet be a darn sight. Some iv th' buildings in it ar-re six hundhred feet high an' some six. They ar-re made iv marble, concrete, wood, or tarpaper. At night it is lighted up pretty with electhric signs to advertise chewin' gum, pop, corsets, et cethry an' so forth. Most iv th' stores are chop-sooey jints, pawn shops, or second hand clothin' stores,' he says.

"'But didn't nawthin' excitin' happen to ye? Didn't ye see annywan shot? Did ye run into anny chorus girls in the maddenin' parade iv wickedness?' 'Divvle th' wan,' says Tim. 'Th' on'y shot I heard was th' backfire iv th' autymobiles. I see a lot iv girls but I don't know whether they were chorus girls or not. I didn't stop to ask thim an' none iv thim spoke to me. 'O,' says he, 'there was wan thing that give me th' start iv me life. I wint into a store to buy some fine cut, an' who d'ye think I see there? None other, be Hivens, thin me wife's cousin, Joe Flaherty. Think iv that! He took me to a shootin' gall'ry an' we had a gran' time,' says Tim. 'Didn't ye go to Wall sthreet?" says I. 'I did not,' says he. 'D'ye think I was going to take anny chances with all that roll on me? I raymimber an ol' sayin' iv me father's about a fool an' his money an' I steered clear iv th' stock exchange,' he says.

"SO there, again, Hinnissy blew up another iv me dhreams. I expected to see Tim come bask haggard, with a wild light in his eyes an' a hypodermil syringe in his pocket. I thought he'd be discontinted with th' home life iv Chicago with nowthin' to break th' stillness iv th' night but th' cry iv th' throlley car, th' hum iv th' ilivated, an' th' dool between th' constable an' th' fleein' bootlegger. But nawthin' more happened to him thin if he'd spint a Sundah at Waukegan. It's a gr-reat disappintmint to me. I expicted th' moment Tim landed he'd be mobbed be a reciption comity iv green goods men, confidence op'rators, and shell wurrukers. He'd be whirled up town through sthreets crowded with dillygations marchin' behind brass bands, th' candydates f'r prisidint makin' orations at sthreet corners an' th' whole popylation iv this dissolute city lavin' their dancin' to cheer th' gr-reat men.

"I expicted to see Tim come back with a wild light in his eyes an' a hypodermic syringe in his pocket."

"Now an' thin a bandit wud shoot his way through th' throng or a gayly decorated bootlegger's van wud dash down Broadway pursooed be rivnoo officers with rapid fire guns. He'd see millyonaires elopin' with other millyonaires' wives, yachts bumpin' each other in th' river, small boys skippin' out iv Wall sthreet with a millyon dollars' worth of Liberty bonds. At night th' whole city is turned over to gayety. Th' popylace reels through Broadway singin' Bacchynalyan songs, if ye know what I mean. Th' sthreets ar-re awash with champayne. Stage celebrities mingle in th' carnival, kickin' th' stove pipe hats off leaders iv fi-nance. Nobody gets up in th' mornin' ontil they're waked up with a headache. An' thin on with th' mad dance, again. An' money ivrywhere!

"BUT me cousin Tim see none iv these things. He says if it wasn't f'r some gin his rilitive in Flatbush made, be ramovin' th' shellac fr'm varnish, he wudden't have had a dhrink all th' time he was there; th' only boats he see in th' river were scows an' tugs; an' th' only money he see was what he carried with him. His idee is that th' people there, as elsewhere, are all broke excipt on pay-day.

"It looks to me that New York as a centher iv life an' crime is a good dale iv a fraud. But it's been well advertised. Th' New York Boosters' club has been at wurruk an' th' counthry has been flooded with lithrachoor to prove that a man who is lookin' f'r throuble has missed th' chanst iv his life if he don't spind what he can embezzle in this dazzlin' home if all that is lowly an' wicked in our civylization. Don't bring ye'er wife or let her come be hersilf. I hope our own merchants an' business men will not miss th' hint. They ar-re losing a gr-reat opporchunity.

"But, maybe, New York is ra-aly just as purple as it's painted, only me Cousin Tim is color blind. It takes an eye f'r wickedness to see wickedness. Now, me frind Willum McAdoo sees things as they are. Ye can't fool him. He spint some time in this here Babylon wanst whin he was but a poor, sthrugglin' promoter, an' he knows how false ar-re th' wurruds an' how cunnin' an' cold th' heart iv this here lair iv wealth is. He knows its hospitality is painted like its faces an' its kindness empty an' bobbed like its heads. He warned th' boys an' girls that come fr'm th' great open spaces iv Atlanta to vote f'r him that they must beware iv th' insijous welcome iv th' Home iv Greed. 'Don't take anny chances,' says th' gr-reat leader. 'Don't lave th' convintion hall alone. Raymimber ye ar-re in a corrupt community. New York is not Hollywood! Why, only today I had har'ly put me fut out iv th' hotel whin I was bombarded be th' Citadels iv Cupidity. I vintured into th' lobby an' th' rayciption comity, headed be J. P. Morgan, handed me a chocolate eclair. Without thinkin' I swallered it an' I've felt quare in me stummick iver since. So I say, let this motto be emblazoned on our banners: "We don't want ye'er chocolate eclairs." 'Or their olives. They're pizened, too,' says a lady dillygate. 'I accept th' amindmint iv th' fair lady fr'm th' southland,' says Willum. 'Let our watchwurrud be, "We don't want ye'er olives or ye'er chocolate eclairs, New York."

"So th' rayciption comity has been left with a couple iv millyon dollars' worth iv chocolate eclairs an' olives on its hands, an' I presoom, Hinnissy, a carload iv proosic acid an' arsenic intinded as loadin' charges f'r McAdoo dillygates. I don't know what th' followers iv th' peerless leader lived on while they wure in th' crool city, because that's all that was offered to thim. I don't blame thim, though. I cudden't live on chocolate eclairs an' olives mesilf, an' I know if they were not pizened ye cudden't ate enough iv thim to sustain life.

"I've a frind fr'm out west who looks on New York th' right way. He's an iditor iv a paper, an' he used to come in here to see me. Arly in life he begun denouncin' our gr-reat cities. He begun with Kansas City. Thin as he done well at that—because Kansas City liked it—he moved again Saint Looey. Afther he was comfortably fixed he attacked Chicago, an' whin he became rich he on'y stopped here to change cars on his way to expose th' corrupt methrolapus iv th' east. He's sure it's goin' to be desthroyed some day. 'I expict to see th' fire fr'm Hiven comin', an' I intind to get out iv th' hotel in a hurry an' not look back till I get to Newark,' says he. 'What is wrong with New York?' says I. 'It's corruptin' th' morality iv our fair land,' says he. 'It's mad, it's wicked, it's vicious, vain an' crool. It has no home life. Whin I'm there I have to live at a hotel surrounded be depravity an' sordid wealth,' he says. 'Why don't ye get some friend iv ye'er's to ask ye home to supper some night?' says I. 'What d'ye take me f'r?' says he. 'I don't go to New York f'r that purpose. I can get plenty iv home life at home," he says.

"D'ye think New York is wickeder thin Chicago?" Mr. Hennessy asked.

"I won't admit it," said Mr. Dooley. "I'm loyal to th' home town. But, as I told ye, it's a gr-reat dale betther advertised. Our fellows ought to be up an doin' to athract custom. That was th' idee iv th' ol' boys that started us goin,' away back. If ye look at th' writin paper iv th' nex' letther th' aldherman sinds ye, ye'll seen on it th' city's coat-iv-arms with th' wurruds: 'Urbs in horto' under it. That's Latin. Hogan says it manes 'Farmers, Welcome'."

A Story About Pigs—and a Miracle

THOSE acquainted with Colonel Crane and Mr. Owen Hood, the lawyer, may or may not be concerned to know that they partook of an early lunch of eggs and bacon and beer at the inn called the Blue Boar which stands at the turn of a steep road scaling a wooded ridge in the west country. Those unacquainted with them may be content to know that the colonel was a sunburnt, neatly dressed gentleman, who looked taciturn and was; while the lawyer was a more rusty red haired gentleman with a long, Napoleonic face, who looked taciturn and was rather talkative. Crane was fond of good cooking, and the cooking in that secluded inn was better than that of a Soho restaurant and immeasurably better than that of a fashionable restaurant. Hood was fond of the legends and less known aspects of the English countryside, and that valley had a quality of repose, with a stir of refreshment, as if the west wind had been snared in it and tamed into a summer air. Both had a healthy admiration for beauty, in ladies as well as landscapes, athough (or more probably because) both were quite romantically attached to the wives they had married under rather romantic circumstances, which are related elsewhere for such as can wrestle with so steep a narrative.

And the girl who waited on them, the daughter of the innkeeper, was herself an agreeable thing to look at; she was of a slim and quiet sort with a head that moved like a brown bird, brightly and, as it were, unexpectedly. Her manners were full of unconscious dignity, for her father, old John Hardy, was the type of old innkeeper who had the status, if not of a gentleman, at least of a yeoman, and he was not without education and ability; a grizzled man with a keen, stubborn face that might have belonged to Cobbett, whose Register he still read on winters' nights. Hardy was well known to Hood, who had the same sort of antiquarian taste in revolutions.

There was little sound in the valley or the brilliant void of sky; the notes of birds fell only intermittently; a faint sound of tapping came from the hills opposite where the wooded slope was broken here and there by the bare face of a quarry, and a distant airplane passed and repassed, leaving a trail of faint thunder. The two men at lunch took no more notice of it than if it had been a buzzing fly, but an attentive study of the girl might have suggested that she was at least conscious of the fly. Occasionally she looked at it, when no one was looking at her; for the rest she had rather a marked appearance of not looking at it.

"Good bacon you get here," remarked Colonel Crane.

"The best in England, and in the matter of breakfast England is the earthly paradise," replied Hood readily. I can't think why we should descend to boast of the British empire when we have bacon and eggs to boast of. They ought to be quartered on the Royal Arms; three pigs passant and three poached eggs on a chevron. It was bacon and eggs that gave all that morning glory to the great English poets; it must have been a man who had a breakfast like this who could rise with that giant gesture: "Night candles are burned out; and jocund day"——

"Bacon did write Shakespeare, in fact," said the Colonel.

"This sort of bacon did," answered the other laughing; then, noticing the girl within earshot, he added, "We were saying how good your bacon is, Miss Hardy."

"It is supposed to be very good," she said with legitimate pride, but I am afraid you won't get much more of it. People aren't going to be allowed to keep pigs much longer."

"Not allowed to keep pigs?" ejaculated the colonel in astonishment.

"By the old regulations they had to be away from the house, and we've got ground enough for that, though most of the cottagers hadn't. But now they say the law is evaded and the county council are going to stop pig keeping altogether.

"Silly swine," snorted Colonel Crane.

"The epithet is ill chosen," replied Hood. "Men are lower than swine when they do not appreciate swine. But really I don't know what the world's coming to. What will the next generation be like without proper pork? And, talking about the next generation, what has become of your young friend Pierce? He said he was coming down, but he can't have come by that train."

"I think Mr. Pierce is up there, sir," said Joan Hardy in a correct voice as she unobtrusively withdrew.

HER tone might have indicated that the gentleman was upstairs, but her momentary glance had been towards the blue emptyness of the sky. Long after she was gone Owen Hood remained staring up into it, until he saw the airplane darting and wheeling like a swallow.

"Is that Hilary Pierce up there?" he inquired, "looping the loop and playing the lunatic generally. What the devil is he doing?"

"Showing off," said the colonel shortly, and drained his pewter mug.

"But why should he show off to us?" asked Hood.

"He jolly well wouldn't," replied the colonel, "showing off to the girl, of course." Then after a pause he added, "A very nice girl."

"A very good girl," said Owen Hood gravely. "If there's anything going on you may be sure it's all straight and serious."

The colonel blinked a little. "Well, times change," he said. "I suppose I'm old fashioned myself, but, speaking as an old Tory, I must confess he might do worse."

"Yes," replied Hood, "and, speaking as an old radical, I should say he could hardly do better."

While they were speaking the erratic aviator had eventually swept earthwards towards a flat field at the foot of the slope and was now coming towards them. Hilary Pierce had rather the look of a poet than a professional aviator; and, though he had distinguished himself in the war, he was probably one of those whose natural dream was rather of conquering the air than conquering the enemy. His yellow hair was longer and more untidy than when he was in the army, and there was a touch of something irresponsible in his roving blue eye. He had a vein of pugnacity in him, however, as was soon apparent. He had paused to speak to Joan Hardy by the rather tumbled down pig stye in the corner, and when he came towards the breakfast table he seemed transfigured as with flame.

"What's all this infernal insane foolery?" he demanded. "Who has the impudence to tell the Hardys they mustn't keep pigs? Look here, the time is come when we must burst up all this sort of thing. I'm going to do something desperate."

"You've been doing desperate things enough for this morning," said Hood. "I advise you to take a little desperate luncheon. Do sit down, there's a good fellow, and don't stamp about like that."

"No, but look here——"

Pierce was interrupted by Joan Hardy, who appeared quietly at his elbow and said demurely to the company, "There's a gentleman here who asks if he may be pardoned for speaking to you."

The gentleman in question stood some little way behind in a posture that was polite but so stiff and motionless as almost to affect the nerves. He was clad in so complete and correct a version of English light holiday attire that they felt quite certain he was a foreigner. But their imaginations ranged the continent in vain in the attempt to imagine what sort of foreigner. By the immobility of his almost moonlike face with its faintly billious tinge, he might almost have been a Chinaman. But when he spoke, they could instantly locate the alient accent.

"Very much distressed to butt in, gentlemen," he said, "but this young lady allows you are first class academic authorities on the sights of this locality. I've been mouching around trying to hit the trail of an antiquity or two, but I don't seem to know the way to pick it up. If you'd be so kind as to put me wise about the principal architectural styles and historic items of this section I'd be under a great obligation."

As they were a little slow in recovering from their first surprise, he added patiently, "My name is Enoch E. Oates and I'm pretty well known in Michigan, but I've bought a little place near here; I've looked about this little planet and I've come to think the safest and brightest place for a man with a few dollars is the place of a squire in your fine old feudal landscape. So the sooner I'm introduced to the more mellow medieval buildings the better."

IN Hilary Pierce the astonishment had given place to an ardor bordering on ecstasy.

"Medieval buildings! Architectural styles!" he cried enthusiastically. "You've come to the right shop, Mr. Oates. I'll show you an ancient building, a sacred building, in an architectural style of such sublime antiquity that you'll want to cart it all away to Michigan as they tried to do with Glastonbury Abbey. You shall be privileged to see one historic institution before you die or before all history is forgotten."

He was walkng towards the corner of the little kitchen garden attached to the inn, waving his arms with wild gestures of encouragement, and the American was following him with the same stiff politeness, looking weirdly like an automaton.

"Look at our architectural style before it perishes," cried Pierce dramatically, pointing to the pig stye, which looked a rather ramshackle affair of leaning and broken boards hung loosely together, though in practice it was practical enough. This, the most unmistakably mellow of all medieval buildings, may soon be only a memory. But when this edifice falls England will fall, and the world will shake with the shock of doom."

The American had what he himsef might have described as a poker face; it was impossible to discover whether his utterances indicated the extreme of innocence or of irony.

"And would you say," he asked, "that this monument exemplifies the medieval or Gothic architectural school?"

"I should hardly call it strictly Perpendicular," answered Pierce, "but there is no doubt it is Early English."

"A very good girl. If there's anything going on you may be sure it's all straight and serious."

"You would say it is antique, anyhow," observed Mr. Oates.

"I have every reason to believe," affirmed Pierce solemnly, "that Gurth the Swineherd made use of this identical building. I have no doubt it is in fact far older. The best authorities believe that the Prodigal Son stayed here for some time, and the pigs, those noble and much maligned animals, gave him such excellent advice that he returned to his family. And now, Mr. Oates, they say that all that magnificent heritage is to be swept away, but it shall not be. We shall not so easily submit to all the vandals and vulgar tyrants who would thus tear down our temples and our holy places. The pig stye shall rise again in a magnificent resurrection; larger pig styes, loftier pig styes, shall yet cover the land; the towers and domes and spires of statelier and more ideal pig styes in the most striking architectural styles, shall again declare the victory of the holy hog over his unholy oppressors."

"And meanwhile," said Colonel Crane dryly, "I think Mr. Oates had much better begin with the church down by the river—very fine Norman foundations and traces of the Roman brick. The Vicar understands his church, too, and would give Mr. Oates rather more reliable information than you do."

A little while later, when Mr. Oates had passed on his way with the same Red Indian stoicism of civility, the colonel curtly reproved his young friend.

"Bad form," he said, "making fun of a foreigner asking for information."

But Pierce turned on him with the same heat on his face.

"But I wasn't making fun. I was quite serious.

They stared at him steadily and he laughed slightly but went on with undiminished fire.

"Symbolical perhaps but serious," he said. "I may seem to have been talking a bit wildly; but let me tell you the time has come to be wild. We've all been a lot too tame. I do mean, as much as I ever meant anything, to fight for the resurrection and the return of the pig; and he shall yet return as a wild boar that will rend the hunters."

He looked up and his eye caught the blue heraldic shape on the signboard of the inn.

"And there is our wooden ensign," he cried, pointing in the same dramatic fashion. "We will go into battle under the banner of the Blue Boar."

THE first incident of the war did not seem superficially encouraging, though the hero of it seemed by no means discouraged by it. As reported in the police news of various papers, Hilary Patrick Pierce, formerly of the Flying Corps, was arrested for driving pigs into the county of Bluntshire, in contravention of the regulations made for the public health. He seemed to have had almost as much trouble with the pigs as with the police; but he made a witty and eloquent speech on being arrested, to which the police and the pigs appeared to be equally unresponsive. The incident was considered trivial and his punishment was trifling; but the occasion was valued by some of the authorities as giving an opportunity for the final elucidation and establishment of the new rule.

For this purpose it was fortunate that the principal magistrate of the bench was no less a person than the celebrated hygienist, Sir Horace Hunter, O.B.E., M.D., who had begun life, as some may remember, as a successful suburban doctor and had afterwards distinguished himself as an officer of health in the Thames valley. To him, indeed, had been largely due the logical extension of the existing precautions against infection from the pig; though he was fully supported by his fellow magistrates, one being Mr. Rosenbaum Low, millionaire and formerly manager of Bliss & Co., and the other the young Socialist, Mr. Amyas Minns, famous for his exposition of Shaw on the Simple Life, who sat on the bench as a Labor alderman. All concurred in the argument of Sir Horace, that just as all the difficulties and doubtful cases raised by the practice of moderate drinking had been simplified by the solution of prohibition, so the various quarrels and evasions about swine fever were best met by a straightforward and simple regulation against swine. In the improper remarks which he offered after the trial, the prisoner appears to have said that as his three judges were a Jew, a vegetarian, and a quack doctor on the make, he was not surprised that they did not appreciate pork.

THE next luncheon at which the three friends met was in a sufficiently different setting; for the colonel had invited the other two to his club in London. It would have been almost impossible to have been that sort of colonel without having that sort of club; but, as a matter of fact, he seldom went there. On this occasion it was Owen Hood who arrived first and was by instructions escorted by a waiter to a table in a bow window overlooking the Green Park. Knowing Crane's military punctuality, Hood fancied he might have mistaken the time; and while looking for the note of invitation in his pocketbook he paused for a moment upon a newspaper cutting that he had put aside as a curiosity some days before. It was a paragraph headed Old Ladies as Mad Motorists; and ran as follows:

"An unprecedented number of cases of motorists exceeding the speed limit have lately occurred on the Bath road and other western highways. The extraordinary feature of the case is that in so large a number of cases the offenders appeared to be old ladies of great wealth and respectability who professed to be merely taking their pugs and pet animals for an airing. They professed that the health of the animal required much more rapid transit through the air than is the case with human beings."

He was gazing at this extract with as much perplexity as on his first perusal, when the colonel entered with a newspaper flapping in his hand and with something more than usually bristling about the look of his short moustache.

"I say," he said, "I think it is getting rather ridiculous." I'm not a revolutionist like you; quite the reverse. But all these rules and regulations are getting beyond all rational discipline. A little while ago they started forbidding all traveling menageries; not, mind you, stipulating for proper conditions for the animals, but forbidding them altogether for some nonsense about the safety of the public. There was a traveling circus stopped near Acton and another on the road to Reading. Crowds of village boys must never see a lion in their lives because once in fifty years a lion has escaped and been caught again. But that's nothing to what has happened since. Now, if you please, there is such mortal fear of infection that we are to leave the sick to suffer, just as if we were savages. You know those new hospital trains that were started to take patients from the hospitals down to the health resort. Well, they're not to run after all, it seems, lest by merely taking an invalid of any sort through the open country we should poison the four winds of heaven. If this nonsense goes on, I shall go as mad as Hilary himself."

Hilary Pierce had arrived during this conversation and sat listening to it with a rather curious smile. Somehow the more Hood looked at that smile the more it puzzled him; it puzzled him as much as the newspaper cutting in his hand. He caught himself looking from one to the other; and Pierce smiled in a still more irritating manner.

"You don't look so fierce and fanatical as when we last met, my young friend," observed Owen Hood. "Have you got tired of pigs and police courts. These coercion acts the colonel's talking about would have roused you to lift the roof off once."

"O, I'm all against the new rules," answered the young man coolly. "I've been much against them; what you might call up against them. In fact, I've already broken all those new laws and a few more. Could you let me look at that cutting for a moment?"

Hood handed it to him; and he nodded, saying:

"Yes; I was arrested for that, too."

"Arrested for what?" demanded the other.

"Arrested for being a rich and respectable old lady," answered Hilary Pierce, "but I managed to escape that time. It was a fine sight to see the old lady clear a hedge and skidaddle across a meadow. Some of my jolly partners got pinched, though."

Hood looked at him under bended brows, and his mouth began to work. Then he said, "But what's all this about the old lady having a pug or a pet or something?"

"Well, it was nearly a pug," said Pierce in a dispassionate manner. "I pointed out to everybody that it was, as it were, an approximate pug. I asked if it was just to punish me for a small mistake in spelling."

"I begin to understand," said Hood. "You were again smuggling swine down to your precious Blue Boar and thought you could rush the frontier in rapid cars."

"Yes," replied the smuggler placidly. "I thought at first of dressing the pigs up as millionaires and members of Parliament; but when you come to look close, there's more difference than you would imagine to be possible. It was great fun when they forced me to take my pet out of the wrapping of shawls; and they found what a large pet it was.

"And do I understand," cut in the colonel, "that it was something like that—with the other laws?"

"The other laws," said Pierce, "are certainly arbitrary, but perhaps you do not altogether do them justice. You do not quite appreciate their motive. You do not fully allow for their origin. I may say, I trust with all modesty, that I was their origin. I not only had the pleasure of breaking those laws but the pleasure of making them."

"More of your tricks, you mean," said the colonel, "but why don't the papers say so?"

"The authorities don't want 'em to," answered Pierce. "The authorities won't advertise me, you bet. I've got far too much popular backing for that. When the real revolution happens it won't be mentioned in the newspapers."

HE paused a moment in meditation and then went on.

"When the police searched for my pug and found it was a pig I started wondering how they could best be stopped from doing it again. It occurred to me they might be shy of a wild pig or a pug that bit them. So, of course, I traveled the next time with dreadfully dangerous animals in cages, warning everybody of the fiercest tigers and panthers that ever were known. When they found it out and didn't want to let it out they could only fall back on their own tomfoolery of a prohibition wholesale. Of course, it was the same with my other stunt about the sick people going to health resorts to be cured of various fashionable and refined maladies. The pigs had a dignified, possibly a rather dull, time in elaborately curtained railway carriages with hospital nurses to wait on them, while I stood outside and assured the railway officials that the cure was a rest cure and the invalids must on no account be disturbed."

"What a liar you are!" exclaimed Hood in simple admiration.

"Not at all," said Pierce with dignity. "It was quite true that they were going to be cured."

Crane, who had been gazing rather abstractedly out of the window, slowly turned his head and said abruptly, "And how's it going to end? Do you propose to go on doing all these impossible things?"

Pierce sprang to his feet with a resurrection of all the romantic abandon of his vow over the pig sty.

"Impossible!" he cried. "You don't know what you're saying or how true it is. All I've done so far was possible and prosaic. But I will do an impossible thing. I will do something that is written in all books and rhymes as impossible; something that has passed into a proverb of the impossible. The war is not ended yet; and if you two fellows will post yourselves in the quarry opposite the Blue Boar on Thursday week at sunset you will see something so impossible and so self-evident that even the organs of public information will find it hard to hide it."

THE UNOBTRUSIVE TRAFFIC OF CAPTAIN PIERCE . . . By G. K. Chesterton

"I think Mr. Oates had better begin with the church down by the river."

It was in that part of the steep fall of pine wood, where the quarry made a sort of lodge under a roof of pine, that two gentlemen of something more than middle age who had not altogether lost the appetite of adventure posted themselves with all the preparations due to a picnic or a practical joke. It was from that place, as from a window looking across the valley, that they saw what seemed more like a vision; what seemed indeed rather like the parody of an apocalypse. The large clearance of the western sky was of a luminous lemon tint, as of pale yellow fading to pale green, while one or two loose clouds on the horizon were of a rose red and yet richer colors. But the setting sun itself was a cloudless fire, so that a tawny light lay over the whole landscape, and the inn of the Blue Boar standing opposite looked almost like a house of gold.

Owen Hood was gazing in his dreamy fashion and said at last: "There's an apocalyptic sign in heaven for you, to start with. It's a queer thing, but that cloud coming up the valley is uncommonly like the shape of a pig."

"Very like a whale," said Colonel Crane, yawning slightly, but when he turned his eyes in that direction the eyes were keener. Artists have remarked that a cloud coming up the valley was curiously solid.

"THAT'S not a cloud," he said sharply, "it's a Zeppelin or something."

The solid shape grew larger and larger; and as it grew more obvious it grew more incredible.

"Saints and angels!" cried Hood suddenly, "why it is a pig."

"It's shaped like a pig, all right," said the colonel, curtly; and indeed, as the great balloonlike form bulked bigger and bigger above its own reflection in the winding river, they could see that the long sausage shaped Zeppelin body of it had been fantastically decorated with hanging ears and legs to complete that pantomimic resemblance.

"I suppose it's some more of Hilary's skylarking," observed Hood, "but what is he up to now?"

He broke off in his speech, for even as he spoke events began rapidly to answer him.

As the great aerial monster moved up the valley it paused over the inn of the Blue Boar, and something fell fluttering from it like a brightly colored feather.

"People are coming down in parachutes," said the colonel, shortly.

"They're queer looking people," remarked his companion, peering under frowning brows, for the level light was dazzling to the eyes. By George, they're not people at all. They're pigs."

From that distance the objects in question had something of the appearance of cherubs in some gayly colored Gothic picture, with the yellow sky for their gold leaf background. The parachute apparatus from which they hung and hovered was designed and colored with the appearance of a great wheel of gorgeously painted plumage looking more gaudy than ever in the strong evening light that lay over all. The more the two men in the quarry stared at these strange objects, the more certain it seemed that they were indeed pigs, though, whether the pigs were dead or alive, it was impossible at that distance to say. They looked down into the garden of the inn into which the feathered things were dropping, and they could see the figure of Joan Hardy standing in front of the old pig sty, with her birdlike head lifted, looking up into the sky.

"SINGULAR present for a young lady," remarked Crane, "but I suppose when our mad young friend does start love making he would be likely to give impossible presents."

The eyes of the more poetical Hood were full of larger visions and he hardly seemed to be listening. But as the sentence ended he seemed to start from a trance, and struck his hands together.

"Yes," he cried in a new voice, "we always come back to that word."

"Come back to what word?" asked his friend.

"Impossible," answered Owen Hood, "it's the word that runs through his whole life, and ours, too, for that matter. Don't you see what he has done?"

"I see what he has done, all right," answered the colonel, "but I'm not sure I see what you are driving at."

"What we have seen is another impossible thing," said Owen Hood, "a thing that common speech has set up as a challenge, a thing that a thousand rhymes and jokes and phrases have called impossible. We have seen pigs fly."

"It's pretty extraordinary," admitted Crane, "but it's not so extraordinary as their not being allowed to walk."

And they gathered their traveling tackle together and began to descend the steep hill.

When they met Hilray Pierce and Joan Hardy walking together a little time afterwards in the valley the former made light of the incident, declaring it to be not only a trifle, but something of an anti-climax.

"The truth is," he said, laughing, "that was only a final firework display to celebrate victory or failure, whichever you choose to call it. There isn't any need to do any more, because the veto is removed."

"Removed?" exclaimed Hood. "Why on earth is that? It's rather unnerving when lunatics suddenly go sane like that."

"It wasn't anything to do with the lunatics," answered Pierce, quietly. "The real change was much higher up, or rather lower down. Anyhow, it was much further at the back of things, where the Big Businesses are settled by the big people."

"What was the change?" asked the colonel.

"Old Oates has gone into another business," answered Pierce quietly.

"What on earth has old Oates to do with it?" asked Hood, staring. "Do you mean that Yankee mooning about over medieval ruins?"

"O, I know," said Pierce wearily. "I thought he had nothing to do with it; I thought it was the Jews and vegetarians and the rest; but they're innocent instruments. The truth is that Enoch Oates is the biggest pork packer and importer in the world, and he didn't want any competition from our cottagers. And what he says goes, as he would express it. Now, thank God, he's taken up another line."

But if any indomitable reader wishes to know what was the new line Mr. Oates pursued and why, it is to be feared that his only course is to await and read patiently the story of The Exclusive Luxury of Enoch Oates; and even before reaching that supreme test, he will have to support the recital of The Elusive Companion of Parson White; for these, as has been said, are the tales of topsy turveydom, and they often work backwards.

Domestic Relations

A Story Book Heroine Who Was Sentenced to Wash Dishes, and a Knight Who Sold Vacuum Cleaners

By NED MILLER

JANE PATTERSON, at the age when her stockings bagged at the knees and her dresses were short enough to show it, made up her mind to live like a story book heroine.

Fifteen year later she withdrew her hands from the lukewarm dish water, rubbed her eyes, and woke the baby. The soap was not a soothing eyewash, and she hadn't intended to say "O-o-o-h! Ouch!"

Jane at twenty-two was still a great deal like a little girl—except that some of the romance had gone from things. In the first place she had never grown up physically; second, she had never felt grown up; and, third, she had never acted it.

As she looked over the tiny garden in her small back yard, she smiled. Jane knew she had just rubbed her nose against the mesh of the dirty screen door, and the resultant smudge amused her. Things invariably happened when she got black on the end of her nose—playthings that Jane liked. So she closed her eyes and leaned her shoulder against the door jamb.

Exactly three years ago Jane had acquired the first important smudge, when she rested her nose against the screen in her window on the Pullman that brought her to the town where Walter Patterson lived, and exactly two years later she had annexed another, on coming unexpectedly in contact with the screen on the country club porch watching the same train return home without her. On the former occasion she was riding straight into the lair of an unknown lover—on the latter his stronghold surrounded her. She expected to be married.

"Good morning," a voice came to Jane from the other side of the threshold, "are you looking for somebody?"

"With my eyes closed?" she asked, smiling at the intruder.

"Yes," and the voice seemed closer as though the owner were at the foot of the stairs. "My impression is that the position of your lids has little to do with what you see."

"You're clever," she replied, "and right. Stay where you are, and let me tell you: You're tall and handsome, with a suit of armor and a jet black horse. Your lance is poised and you're wearing a lady's favor. You are quite my story book hero. I'm going to open my eyes and look at you."

"No," said the voice, "please don't. I'm less than ordinarily tall and much less than necessarily handsome. I came in a coupe, and I'm wearing an army raincoat. The favor might be my fraternity pin, but the lance"—and here he laughed aloud—"I'm selling vacuum cleaners."

"I think," Jane mused, "that you'd better go." Her eyes were still closed.

"Yes," replied the voice, "so do I. Good day."

When Jane opened her eyes her knight was gone, but not her dishes, so she finished washing them, and further applied the art to Junior, now jovial and wiggly.

After his bath, and his exercise, and his dressing, and his prune juice, Jane took time to look at him, all fresh and happy on the bed before her.

"Thank goodness you weren't twins," she told him so seriously that she smiled. "The other one of you might decide to cry," whereupon she kissed him twice to atone for her horrible sacrilege.

Every night at six o'clock Walter Patterson came home. Every night at 6:30, having romped with Junior and put him to bed, he and Jane sat down at the little gate-leg table that doubled for sewing and reading between meals, and every night at seven Jane started the dishes—except when she was too tired—while Walter sat with his paper and his pipe, and usually fell asleep.

But tonight he didn't fall asleep—he didn't even read. He just sat and watched Jane smiling over her work.

"Your face is dirty," he said, when she glanced his way.

"Yes," she replied, "I know it."

"Then," he asked, "why don't you wash it?"

"Because it's fun sometimes to have a dirty face."

"I don't see why," and he shook his head. Walter had never learned to play. "I bought you a present today."

"A fun present?" she asked, rather hoping it might be the stuffed pink pig she had seen in the toy department at Christmas time.

"I don't know," he replied a bit pettishly. "It's a vacuum cleaner."

"O!" and she made what Jane might commonly call a snoot, "for my nose?"

"O!" he snapped, "for the love of Mike!"

"I'm sorry," she soothed, putting her arm around his neck. "I played too much. I'll love the cleaner, and I'll powder my nose as a compromise instead of washing it," with which she kissed him on the forehead and galloped off to the nearest mirror.

Promptly at two o'clock on the following afternoon, George Sorrenson presented himself at the Patterson doorstep. In his right hand he carried an Excelsior cleaner, the lightest weight, simplest, least expensive, and most efficient vacuum outfit ever offered to lighten the burden and rest the backs of downtrodden housewives.

Jane met him at the threshold with a smile.

"Yesterday I played that you were coming back," she told him.

"You did more than that," he replied, "you made me sell a cleaner," at which point in the demonstration he entered the living room, and plugged an extension into the nearest lamp socket, for George was a fast worker and there was still much to be done.

"And thank you," he concluded his demonstration on the easy removal of devastating dirt, "for being."

"Indeed, you're welcome. Good afternoon," she hesitated, "good knight. I shall hope to see you again."

"Only in case of a service call and, Mrs. Patterson, it's just my luck to have sold you a perfect one."

"I think I can put it out of commission," she replied, "and I'd rather you wouldn't call me 'Mrs. Patterson.'"

"No?" he questioned, for she was away ahead of him.

"No," and her eyes laughed at him. "You see, I have never been married."

"But your husband and the baby?"

"My brother and young nephew," she explained. "My only domestic relations. Won't you call again?"

"I will," he replied, for George was a fast worker and there was much to be done. "And I think I'll make a cleaning."

"I think," she replied, "in a manner of speaking, that you may."

Elaine at the Gates by W. B. Maxwell

ELAINE FLETCHER, left an orphan by the death of her father, grows to lovely young womanhood at the home of an aunt,

MRS. CASTLETON, in the beautiful Nun's House at Tudor Green. Her guardian is infatuated with

THE REV. MARK AWDREY, rector of a fashionable church, for whom Elaine feels a personal aversion. Mrs. Castleton, despite her remonstrances, accompanies the rector to the boat on which he sails for a South American tour, returns ill to Tudor Green, and dies with a portrait of Adwray clasped to her breast. Elaine learns from her aunt's solicitor,

MR. EVANS, that her aunt had married the rector in London on the day of his departure. Though Mrs. Castleton had intended to bequeath the bulk of her estate to her niece, Elaine is left virtually penniless by a flaw in the will. Grieving over the death of her aunt, and the conviction that her reproaches were responsible for the tragic marriage, she goes to live with her uncle and aunt,

MR. AND MRS. MARSH. Ever since she can remember, Elaine has been in love with

ARNOLD THORNE, last of an old and important family. Young Thorne, returning from the war in the grip of an inappeasable restlessness, neglects her and plunges into a violent flirtation with PEARL ESDAILE, a frank coquette. After some months he breaks off the affair and wins Elaine's forgiveness and promise to be his wife. Fate intervenes, however, by imposing upon Pearl a tragic penalty for her dalliance which compels Arnold to extend the protection of marriage. He breaks off the betrothal with Elaine in a letter that leaves her stunned and bewildered. Intuition at length supplies her with the key to Arnold's action, however. Swept by a horror of agony, she plunges blindly through darkness and rain to a meadow beside the river. There, where she and Arnold exchanged vows of love, she flings herself to the sodden ground and abandons herself to grief.

INSTALLMENT IX.
Darkened Windows

BY about eleven o'clock that night the rain had ceased and the wind was dropping. The front door in St. Luke's road stood wide open, with Mr. and Mrs. Marsh on the threshold and the gas lit hall behind them, as Elaine dragged herself up the steps. She came in, sank on the chair beside the umbrella stand, shivered; and when the gas light disclosed her condition Mrs. Marsh gave a scream. Her garments seemed to be in tatters, mere rags plastered round her chest and loins; she looked as if she had been pulled out of the river and then trailed along its muddy banks; there was black slime on her forehead; one side of her face had mud all over it, and the other cheek, washed clean by the last of the rain, showed a streak of bright red blood where the brambles on the Common had torn it many hours ago. She was dreadful to see, as she sat there shivering, and her aunt continued to emit little screams.

"I have only been for a walk." She repeated this several times, staring at them out of that terrifying mask with feverishly bright eyes.

"O, you must have a bath," said Mrs. Marsh, after her final scream. "And it is Elizabeth's evening out. O, dear! Elizabeth is not back. She has gone to the police concert—she asked permission to be late. It is always so. There is no fire. The water in the pipes will be stone cold. William, help me."

"Yes, I will light the fire."

"No, don't trouble," said Elaine, and her teeth began to chatter.

"Yes, yes. Go and change your wet things, dear Elaine. Get her to bed, Gertrude."

"Yes, I should like to go to bed," said Elaine, staring at them now as if she did not quite remember who they were. "I am tired. I have been for a long walk."

Dr. McGrigor was there about an hour later, and he came to the house again early next morning.

"Is she seriously ill?" asked Mr. Marsh.

"O, yes, very seriously, indeed."

"What do you apprehend? Rheumatic fever?"

"No, it is brain fever," said Dr. McGrigor; and he told them he would send in two nurses, one for the day and one for the night. They need not sleep in the house, since obviously that would be inconvenient. He said also that Elaine's hair must be cut off at once, close to the scalp, because he wanted to use an ice pack.

But at this Mrs. Marsh gave another of her little screams, saying after it, "O, no. That we cannot allow."

And, strangely, Mr. Marsh supported his wife's protests and objections, pleading to save the hair. "All that beautiful hair! A woman's glory, Dr. McGrigor. You know the quotation. Really we have always felt that it is our niece's principal adornment."

The doctor, however, was obdurate. He said she would lose it anyhow. It would all fall off.

"Then it must be as you wish," said Mr. Marsh. "Yes, excuse us, please. We have been foolish. But Elaine is dear to us."

The illness went on. Those two nurses were in charge and the house was kept as quiet as possible. Mrs. Marsh, who was in the sick room more than the nurses relished, always said, "Hush, please," as she came out of it, although nobody was making the slightest sound. She acted as housemaid up there, and would not allow Elizabeth to enter the room at all.

"Do you think she's better, ma'am?" the faithful old servant used to ask her.

"I cannot say, Elizabeth. I dare not say. We are in God's hands."

"She goes on talking, just the same today, ma'am."

"Yes, Elizabeth."

It was frightful to Elizabeth, silently doing her work; it made her tremble, the sound of that voice upstairs coming to her through the closed door.

ONE evening Dr. McGrigor told them he thought a crisis was approaching. He had gone away, but he would look in again soon.

They were in the dining room after their supper, and Mr. Marsh said all at once, "Gertrude, let us pray. No, don't go, Elizabeth." The servant was at the sideboard, putting the remains of the pathetically small meal on her big tray. "Stay with us, Elizabeth. When two or three are gathered together—two or three," and he sank upon his knees.

The others knelt also, Mrs. Marsh bending over the seat of a chair at the table, Elizabeth rigid by the sideboard.

And the old man uttered his prayer. It was Calvinistic in its severely simple form, Unitarian in its straightforward method of address; of course, with no intercession to such kindly lesser powers as saints, totally ignoring any such emotional influences as that of the Virgin Mary, not even complicating the petition by any reference to the divine sacrifice and redemption. In a fervent but humble voice he appealed directly to the sole creator of the universe.

"O Lord God, have mercy upon us. If it be compatible with thine omnipotent wisdom and eternal purposes to grant the life of this dear child, we humbly beg——" and so on. He pleaded, but did not pester, and he wound up with the orthodox words of submission. "Thy will be done."

The other two said it after him.

"Thy will be done"; and then the three of them rose from their knees.

"That is all we can do," said Uncle William presently, when the servant had gone away with her tray. "We are in God's hands . . . . Are you thinking of sitting up tonight?"

"Yes."

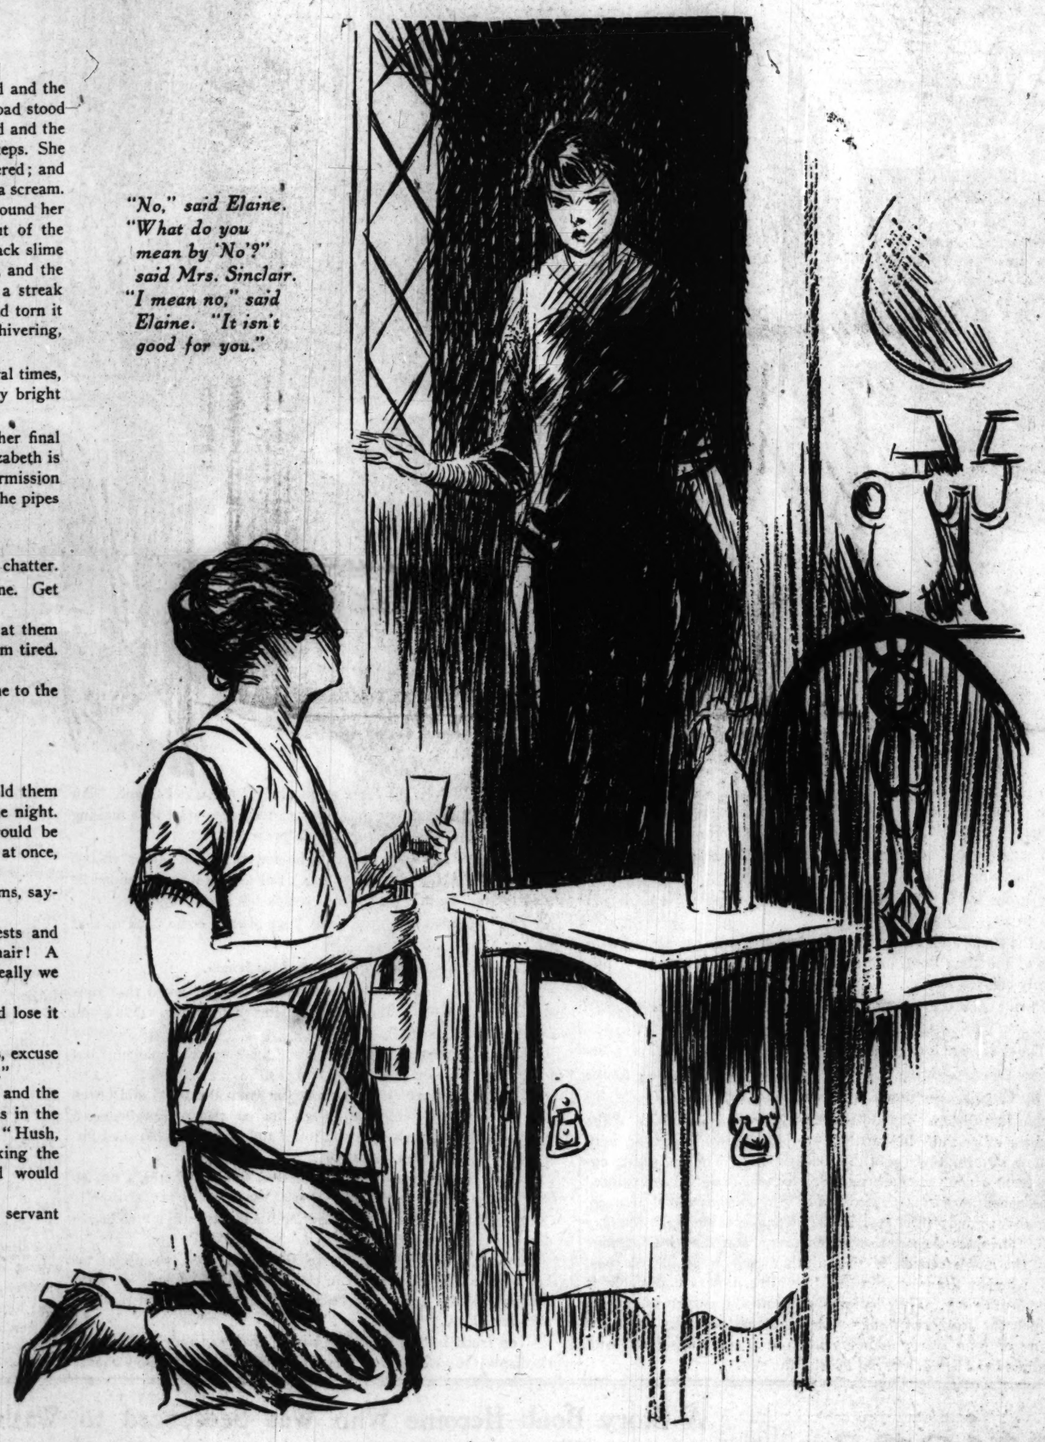
"Then I will watch with you"; and he took out his spectacles and adjusted a reading shade round the globe of the nearest gas bracket.

DURING these days that other house at the top of St. Luke's road, the house with the number Ninety-one, was full of agreeable excitement.

Arnold Thorne was seen there but rarely, and each time he visited it he found that another of his wishes had been ignored, a few more of his strongly expressed opinions flouted.

He had said they ought to get married at once and quietly; but Miss Pearl overruled him on this as on every other point. She would have none of his timid procedure.

"My dear lad," she said lightly and resolutely, "we are out to throw dust in people's eyes, aren't we? Well, doing it in a half and half style would be asking for trouble. It would just give the show away." Then she pouted and smiled. "And don't forget poor little me. Baby doesn't want a hole and corner affair; she wants to wear a pretty frock and show her big gorgeous Arnoldo to as many people as she can crowd into St. Barnabas's. It'll be the day of my life, Arny. Remember that."



"No," said Elaine. "What do you mean by 'No'?" said Mrs. Sinclair. "I mean no," said Elaine. "It isn't good for you."

Except for this one allusion to the prime cause of the marriage, she seemed to have shaken off all care.

The joyous eventful day arrived, with a pallid wintry sunshine to bring luck to the bride, and a gentle breeze to spread the music of the church bells. From two o'clock in the afternoon cabs and carriages were going up St. Luke's road. High up, there was a crowd of foot people.

The sunlight soon faded. Soon it grew dark. The pavement lamps were lit and the houses displayed lighted windows, when the first of the hired cars came racing down the road. It contained the happy pair; it was carrying them to the railway station, with confetti on their garments and rice on the lady's hat. It swept past her dear old home, past the house of the Miss Berwicks, past the house of Mr. Marsh.

At Mr. Marsh's there were darkened windows, and behind one of them Elaine lay raving in her persistent delirium.

SHE recovered—perhaps because of her youth and naturally good constitution, perhaps only because she wanted to die.

It was a slow convalescence; but at last Dr. McGrigor said she was well—at any rate he could do no more for her.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsh felt that the Creator of the universe had given Elaine back to them—only they did not get back the same Elaine who was so dear to them before the danger from which she had been thus mercifully delivered. She was different, changed temporarily or for ever. And the change was not merely physical. Her ravaged looks, her ruined charms, grieved them and saddened them; indeed, remembering what her outward aspect had been, of course, one could not without pain see that ugly cropped hair that seemed so black and coarse against the whiteness of her skin, or the great dark circles round her lusterless eyes, or the sunken cheeks and hollowed neck, or the loose shapeless hanging of the garments about her once splendid body. But as to all this, time would certainly help. "Time, Gertrude, dear—time, the healer." It was the internal, the deeper alteration that distressed them so much. Even if she had filled her clothes and flashed her eyes, even if her voice had sounded satisfactorily, there would still have been something wrong with her.

When she murmured her words of gratitude—just such words as she might have employed in the past—they hurt one instead of warming one's heart. They were toneless, they seemed to have no real meaning in them. She was far too humble and meek in regard to her uncle and aunt, and far too defiant in regard to others. She had wounded both Miss Berwicks, her oldest and best friends, and they paid no more visits to the house. Although her manner was so subdued, so unnaturally quiet, she met people's solicitous glances or kind inquiries with a disconcerting stare. She stared at people—"As if we might all go to the devil," said almost irrepressible Mrs. Wilson, who had paused for a little talk. Mr. Marsh himself noticed that stare at Mrs. Wilson and the effect it produced upon her.

Moreover, in St. Luke's church, he could not but observe that Elaine did not make any pretense of taking part in the devotional exercises. Being very weak still, she properly sat while the rest knelt. But sitting she stared; despite of her weakness she sat too erect; she sat as one sits in ordinary houses, not in God's house. He struggled against the feeling that he ought to say something to her about it, but the sense of duty prevailed, and he spoke.

"You don't mind, dear Elaine, do you?" he said in conclusion of his tenderly affectionate little reproof.

"No. Thank you very much," said Elaine, in her meek, low voice. "Thank you, Uncle William. You are so good to me—so very, very good." It was exactly what she used to say before her illness, making him wrinkle his eyebrows then and rub his hands in pleasure; but now it was without tone, sounding empty, meaningless.

"It is the old story," he said to his wife. "Apathy. When she throws off her apathy all will be well with her—because hers is a very noble nature. Gertrude, she has great courage. I have had opportunities of seeing it—opportunities of which you were deprived."

"That girl has got on my nerves," said Mrs. Wilson, chatting with a friend one afternoon in February. "I begin to hate the sight of her. Why doesn't she go away and leave the place for good?"

In fact, Elaine was going away, leaving the place—for good or ill. Mr. Marsh, laboring at her own request, had at last obtained for her a suitable employment. He had found that ideal situation of which he had spoken hopefully at the beginning. She was to go to a Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair who lived at Bexhill and take charge of their backward boy of seven—backward only in the least unpleasant manner, backward not from want of intelligence but because delicacy and a lame leg had precluded him from regular study.

TWO days before her departure she went with her uncle to see Mr. Evans at his offices in Lincoln's inn. The fight about Aunt Edith's estate was over, or, rather, there had been no fight. But all that often explained law business had ended with what Mr. Evans considered to be a great success, in view of the now admitted fact that his side had never had a leg to stand on. In a letter to Mr. Marsh making the appointment he said that he had good news to convey.

He gave a little start as Elaine came into his comfortable room and showed quite plainly the distressing impression that her deteriorated appearance had made upon his kindly feelings.

"Come and sit by the fire," he said, with a momentary and quite unusual nervousness; and he established her in an armchair near the cheerful blaze of the broad, old fashioned grate. "You have had a cold journey—and, of course, after your illness we must continue to treat you for a little while as an interesting invalid;" and, recovering his self possession, he gave a friendly or paternal laugh as if to prove that he had not really noticed anything amiss.

Then Uncle William was made to start, for Elaine had laughed, too.

"O, I'm quite well again," said Elaine, sounding that short, mirthless laugh. "You know, I have always been as strong as several horses."

After that she neither smiled nor spoke for some time, while Mr. Evans and Mr. Marsh did the talking. She sat with her hands folded on her lap, looking white and humble, a person utterly crushed by sickness and misfortune.

Mr. Evans, as he told them both, had finished the business with a compromise. The other side was going to give Miss Fletcher three pounds a week for the rest of her life, and she was to accept this bounty and signify her renunciation of any further claim. A letter of acceptance had been prepared by the other side and Mr. Evans had approved of the draft. Now, here, in a few minutes, a representative of the other side would see Miss Fletcher sign the letter. And then—then nothing would remain to be done, except for everybody concerned to congratulate everybody else.

Mr. Marsh at once agreed that this solution of the problem was most satisfactory. Seated by the table behind which Mr. Evans was sitting, he beamed across the dividing space of turkey carpet at Elaine by the fire; and he and Mr. Evans continued talking about it. Three pounds a week was not a large income; on the other hand, it meant freedom, security; it provided at any rate for the necessities of life. Miss Fletcher was now safe! And Mr. Evans confessed, with a genuine kindliness, with really affectionate sympathy, that he passed through more than one sleepless night, harassed by the thought that Miss Fletcher was not safe, and he felt sure that Mr. Marsh had suffered much the same nocturnal discomfort.

But to this Mr. Marsh did not agree. He said that for two reasons he had not been kept awake by it—and he indicated that his first reason had been his knowledge that there was a poor little house at Tudor Green where Elaine could always find at least shelter and food, and that his second reason—which he felt he ought to have put in the prior place—was his confidence in the power that prevented the fall of sparrows, or, letting them fall, permitted the crash only because it was mysteriously but certainly for their own good.

"Ah, yes," said Mr. Evans, assuming the serious expression that he took to church with Mrs. Evans on Sundays. "Still," and he grew gay again, "it is a good thing, well, to be secure. And I am sure, Miss Fletcher, that on reflection, you yourself——"

Mr. Marsh answered for her. It was undoubtedly a grand and good thing.

BUT still Elaine said nothing at all, and, her silence becoming irksome, Mr. Marsh was presently obliged to make a direct appeal for its conclusion.

"You are pleased, Elaine, aren't you, dear?"

"I am grateful," said Elaine, humbly. "That is, I am grateful to Mr. Evans for all the trouble he has taken."

"O, as to that—please don't mention it," said Mr. Evans, visibly affected by the meekness, the pathetic humility of her tone and manner.

He and Mr. Marsh talked then of the weather, until the representative of the other side arrived and introductions were made.

"Mr. Atkinson—Miss Fletcher. . . . Mr. Atkinson—Mr. Marsh. . . . Mr. Marsh, you know, is Miss Fletcher's uncle."

"Capital," said Mr. Atkinson, cheerful and smiling; and he sat down and brought some papers out of his coat pocket. Never having seen her before, he felt no surprise as to the aspect of Miss Fletcher. She appeared to him altogether normal, if not symbolical; the poor relation with pallid cheeks and a rusty black dress, who assumes an air of submissive martyrdom, but who means to get all she can out of you or your clients, and who will play them nasty tricks if you aren't careful.

"Perhaps Miss Fletcher will allow me to run through this with her—I mean, just to read it to her—and explain that any phrases that sound perhaps a little harsh are merely our dull legal jargon—quite formal."

"O, quite formal," said Mr. Evans.

"Quite," and Mr. Atkinson began to read aloud. He was a young middle aged man, with the good manners that are worse than bad manners, because, although highly polished, there is no solid material of instinct or tradition beneath them. He had self-assurance, yet knew that it came from success and prosperity, not from personal merit.

The letter was, in fact, the usual sort of thing; in effect thanking the benefactors for their generosity; acknowledging that their bounteous conduct was altogether voluntary, a charitable act, and what not else humiliating to the person benefited, who hereby and herewith abandoned any ridiculous pretensions of the past and any greedy hopes of further munificence in the future.

"There you are, Mr. Evans. Now if the young lady will sign it, either you or I can attest her signature."

As Mr. Atkinson said this, handing the document to Mr. Evans, his manner became less like a solicitor's than that of a doctor—say a big physician who has prescribed a potent dose of medicine and tells the family attendant to administer it. Mr. Evans made all ready and invited Elaine to come and gulp it down.

But Elaine was slow. She picked up the letter from its place on the table in front of the chair that had been pushed forward for her convenience and stood there looking at it, not studying its phrases, not really seeing it.

Instead, she saw at that moment the Nuns' House as it used to be before it fell into the merciless hands of strangers—not all empty, forlorn, and deserted, but full of warmth, comfort, gracious beauty; with firelight flickering on paneled walls, curtains at its windows, peace in its heart. Suppose she had it now to go to, to rest in, to grow old in—hiding herself in it at first, then doing a little good to others—doing as much good as possible, later on, when her strength came back to her and she began to forget what had taken it away. And Aunt Edith had wished her to have it all.

"No," she said quietly, "I won't sign this. I won't accept their offer"; and she went back to the hearth and threw the letter into the fire.

There was surprise, consternation, indignant protest; each of them remonstrated with her in his own way. But she merely said no, again and again; and they could not shake her resolution. She stood there, as pale as marble and as firm. Not the slightest flush had come upon her white face, but her dark eyes looked very large, and Mr. Marsh saw in them, when the indignant Atkinson asked to know exactly what he should tell his clients—Mr. Marsh seemed to see then not as much as he habitually called a flash, but a return of force, a faint yet a fierce light.

"I ask, what shall I tell them?"

"Tell them," said Elaine, "that I hate them and despise them. Tell them I think they have stolen the money from a dead hand"—and her eyes really blazed—"but it is theirs by law. Is that enough to tell them? If not, tell them I hope the money may poison them—and I'd rather starve to death or go on the streets than take a favor or a kindness from any one of them."

Outside, in that dull street behind the law courts, Mr. Marsh still looked flustered and old. All the way from the bottom of the stone staircase at the solicitor's office he had been reproaching Elaine, and he was still doing it. But, as he kept saying, the mischief was not perhaps irreparable. They had left Mr. Evans making endeavors to soothe Mr. Atkinson, begging that Miss Fletcher might have another chance and be allowed to change her mind.

"Never," said Elaine, with force.

And gradually the kind old man recovered his serenity. His rebukes grew more and more gentle.

"Under no circumstances, however, could it have been necessary, dear, to be so—well, so—believe me, I understand your feelings. I admire your spirit; but—such bitter words, Elaine! And, in your heat, I must say you used an indelicate expression."

"Sitting, she stared; she sat as one sits in ordinary houses, not in God's house."

"SHE is the hardest girl I ever met," said Mrs. Sinclair. "The very hardest."

Mr. Sinclair said he did not a bit mind the young woman's hardness; it was her lack of ordinary charm, her scarecrow appearance that bothered him.

"But I don't want to part with her," said Mrs. Sinclair firmly. "Basil is fond of her; and we'd never get any one else for the same money."

And they stood looking at each other, both concealing secret thoughts. The husband was of middle age, say a badly preserved forty-five, and stout, red, bald; the wife, no older, tall and rather elegant, had faded rapidly.

They ought to have been such a contented couple. They were not poor; they lived at the pleasantest seaside place in England; their house—in that clean, gay, prettily gardened road that has a church at one end of it and the golf course at the other—was quite charming. Their front garden was "a picture." Basil, their beloved only child, was growing out of his lameness. Mrs. Flint, their cook, although considerably redder and fatter than her master, was energetic, economical, skilled in her art; Mary, the house parlor maid, if not a beauty, was a paragon of virtue and industriousness; and now, as though to crown their felicity, fortune had given them a young lady who took sole charge of the little boy, dressed him neatly, taught him, walked him, guarded him by day and night—and all this at about half the wage of an ordinary nursery governess. Yet, in spite of so many factors in their lives seeming to make for happiness, they were not happy. They had a trouble—a great and increasing trouble. Mr. Sinclair was too fond of girls and Mrs. Sinclair was too fond of alcohol, and each knew of the other's failing.

Months ago, on the evening of her arrival, Elaine had received a hint from Mrs. Sinclair about her husband's weakness.

"He pays compliments, you know; but with no ulterior meaning—really no meaning at all. I just thought I'd mention it, so that you'd understand and not misinterpret."

"O, I'm not afraid of compliments," said Miss Fletcher; and Mrs. Sinclair had her first sensation of the hardness that she was to feel more strongly later on.

Mr. Sinclair had hoped against hope that the newcomer would be pretty—perhaps even more than pretty, indulgent, to a tormented, middle aged gentleman. But at the first sight of her, as she entered the dining room and sat down at the dinner table, his heart fell. That short, black hair and the dull complexion knocked him out of dreamland, so far as she was concerned.

He took no more notice of her, did not listen for her monosyllabic answers to polite questions, and, when compelled to look at her, looked exactly as he did at the gray faded lady on the other side of the table—with introspective eyes, not mentally seeing her. As usual, his mind became a vast hall of memories, through which girls moved distractingly in all directions. Size, color, shape did not matter—girls, girls, girls! But this one—this Fletcher—wasn't a girl at all. You couldn't weave dreams about her.

It is probable that Mrs. Sinclair's bad habit had been induced by the bad habit of her husband. His too obvious admiration of young people of the other sex was more than she could bear, unsupported. She knew he was unfaithful in thought. She could pardon his physical deterioration and everything else, except this. She loved him and wanted him as much now as when he was comely and pleasant to the sight—she craved for the glance of love, the touch of kindness, that was real and not merely hypocritical pretense to keep her in good humor. As she thought of it all, invincible sadness sank into her poor, faithful, wounded heart, and she herself seemed to be sinking, sinking, down to black, despairing darkness.

But when she reached this stage of her unhappy meditations she took stimulant, either getting something from the grocer in Devonshire road or surreptitiously going into her own dining room and helping herself there.

THUS, on a wet day not long after Elaine's arrival, she had struggled against temptation ever since luncheon, but between teatime and dinner it became too strong for her. Mr. Sinclair had gone to the club to play bridge, and the new governess was upstairs with Basil, reading to him while he soaked his lame leg in hot water as the doctor had ordered. As was her wont, she listened at the top of the kitchen stairs. From down below came the sound of industrious Mary's sewing machine, rhythmic, unceasing, and the cook made cooklike sounds moving about the kitchen, rattled a metal pot, clanged against the oven. Everybody was accounted for; all clear! She went into the dining room and closed the door. There was another door leading into the drawing room. It stood open, showing emptiness and darkness, and she did not trouble to shut it. Even now she continued to struggle, knowing what the end would be, yet struggling; and thus she was unusually slow about it. At last, however, she went on her knees by the cellaret, put down her glass, and fished out the freshly opened bottle of whisky that her husband had only trifled with at lunch.

Still on her knees, she was in the act of raising the glass to her lips when a dreadful stony voice stopped her, and she looked round in fear. It was Miss Fletcher, standing on the threshold of the other room—Miss Fletcher, not indeed spying, but there by accident, having been sent downstairs to fetch something for the little boy.

"No," said Elaine.

"No?" said Mrs. Sinclair, scrambling to her feet and spilling some of the whisky. "What do you mean by 'No'?"

"I mean no," said Elaine. "It isn't good for you. It does you harm."

Then Mrs. Sinclair blustered and presently whimpered. She said with indignation that this was the biggest piece of impertinence she had ever met and she would tell her husband about it the moment he returned from the club. Whimpering, she looked exactly like her young son; as Elaine noticed, she puckered her forehead in the same way and made just the same noise that he did in his grief. She told Elaine of that awful sensation of sinking.

"You won't sink," said Elaine coldly.

"I don't know. When I go over like that I seem absolutely to need it."

Elaine shrugged her shoulders.

"Take it, then," she said, and went away.

Mrs. Sinclair did not take it then. She waited till Elaine was really safe upstairs and gave herself a double dose. But at the moment she ran out into the hall after Elaine, and told her that on consideration she had decided not to tell Mr. Sinclair; that she felt sure no rudeness had been intended—kindness rather, friendliness and good feeling.

Later she tried to speak of the matter again. Although she had been upset, she bore no malice. She made overtures of friendship, even spoke frankly of her weakness, thinking that if she could make of this girl a real friend she might be able to cure herself. But the girl did not respond—the girl was too hard.

Hard—and obstinate—and occasionally disobedient. But cheap. In this world you can't have everything.

She would not teach the boy his catechism, and she gave trouble about his walks. Mr. Tatham, the clever surgeon at Hastings, insisted that the boy should be made to walk for considerable distances in the surgical contrivance that he had designed for his use. So Miss Fletcher was given a goal that must be reached every morning. Her orders were that they should go at least as far as the bungalow on the hill beyond the golf course, but sometimes she calmly announced that Basil had been too tired to go so far.

Then soon she was seen by somebody carrying the legginged boy—carrying him, if you please, pick-a-back, all along the sands and across the pebbles to the appointed limit of their journey.

There was a real row about this, and Miss Fletcher was nearer dismissal than at any time. But she promised not to do it again; and now in this month of June Mrs. Sinclair, as she told her husband, was determined not to part with her. If for no other reason the safety would have decided her. Transient moments of doubt came, flickers of suspicion, since with a case like Mrs. Sinclair's one must always be suspicious; but she had no true fear that his distaste for Miss Fletcher might be genuine.

She was wrong. For throughout this time Mr. Sinclair had been dropping more and more deeply into the huge pitfall of Miss Fletcher's fascination. He had struggled, just as his wife struggled with the whisky spell, and as vainly. To a person of his idiosyncrasy the thing was inevitable—having her there in the house, under his eyes at every meal, seeing her out of doors, too, half a dozen times a day. Of course, he of all people was quickest to observe any improvement in her aspect. The fine sea air had invigorated her; there was more flesh on her shoulders; and to finish him, to sap all resistance, her hair grew fast, inches, inches, until from cropped hair it changed into bobbed hair. How could he avoid feeling anguish at the thought of her being sent away, torn from him? When he abused her he was only taking the most probable means of averting so horrible a disaster.

Her reticence, her defiant air, her more than discouraging stare if she caught him studying her, all increased his thralldom to the now fixed idea. He observed that she herself totally disregarded her personal appearance. She lounged in ugly attitudes, she swung herself about, she had an almost barbaric freedom with her limbs. In her rough and ready black frock and woolen stockings she looked almost like a boy dressed as a girl. But she was a girl, all right—so much so that there had ceased to be any other girls in Bexhill, or on this planet. The sullen challenge of her girlishness stirred one through one's whole envelope of flesh to the marrow of one's bones.

LONDON, July 9.

IN London we have been diligently attempting to learn which American writers—if any—get over with the English public. This has long been a subject of controversy, many American scriveners claiming that the stolid Britons would have nothing in the way of books bearing a U. S. A. label. Indeed, it was not so long ago that Sinclair Lewis hurled bucketsful of wrath at England because of its chill reception of American novels. And now that gentleman is one of the most eager anglophiles that ever leaped aboard a British boat. Not only that, but he is the most popular American novelist in England: his books, we are informed, have a large sale, and he, himself, is hailed with high glee whenever his carrot colored head appears in Chelsea. The most amusing part of it is that his novels, "Main Street" and "Babbitt," were published in England with voluminous glossaries appended, explaining the quaint American slang expressions. But it is quite true that Mr. Lewis heads the list of American fiction in England.

Sinclair Lewis

Cabell, we discovered, has never caught on over here to any great extent, nor Hergesheimer, though each has a select and appreciative public. Sherwood Anderson, so far as we could ascertain, follows Lewis in popularity, his earlier books having been accorded a most enthusiastic reception. They consider some of the stories in "The Triumph of the Egg" rather high art—for an American. Which is jolly decent of them, after all, I mean to say.

"The American Mercury" has found favor here, and, while the general reading public in England has not waved its hat in any mad ecstasy over Messrs. Mencken and Nathan, both gents are popular, and held in increasing esteem. Herr Mencken is regarded as being as typically American as the Chamber of Commerce—and twice as funny.

The other evening we were dining with some Russian refugees (all Russians are either refugees or theatrical managers) and the talk turned to books on the revolution, and they spoke of a novel by a young American, Leigh Rogers, pronouncing it to be a remarkable piece of work. So recalling that we had it in a bag of books brought from America, we got it out that night and settled down to read. And dawn showed wanly behind the chimney pots of London before we finished it.

Leigh Rogers

"Wine of Fury" (Knopf) is a splendid novel—for a first novel, or a second or a third. It is the story of an American financier, sent to Russia in 1916 to establish a branch of a great New York bank, and of his struggles in the country, seething with revolution, where everybody spies on everybody else. There is a tremendous plot of intrigue into which David Rand tumbles, and through which a convincing array of characters make their ways. The background of Russia in the throes of revolution is amazingly well done. The girl with whom young Rand is in love, Natalie Mikhailovna, daughter of old Prince Dukharin, one of the great generals of the Russian war ministry, is a real person; and the author has an excellent character in the Countess Borovskaya, an American woman, formerly a high diver in a circus, married to an elderly Russian nobleman. Then there is Naritza, the dancer, queen of all the intrigue in Russia, who sets a trap for David Rand. "Wine of Fury" is a corking tale, and written by a man who understands Russia and her people. It does not represent the work of a skilled novelist, but is very well done, indeed.

Ludwig Lewisohn

We have just enjoyed reading Ludwig Lewisohn's "The Creative Life" (Boni & Liveright), which we preferred to his "Upstream." It is a more finished piece of writing, and the varied themes of the essays, ranging the gamut of esthetic and neo-esthetic life in America, should find a wide public. Herr Lewisohn's point of view is rather more normal than one would expect from the fine etching herewith displayed.

THE VALOR OF LOVE

An African Animal Tale

By GUY H. B. DENT

THE sun smote with a fierceness that was like the anger of evil gods. The scant shadows were as blue flames in the quivering air. The year saw the roving herds of buffalo dwindle from hundreds to scores and from scores to infrequent individuals. The sickness (named "maradhi") was upon them so that they died as they grazed. The country was accursed.

To the sickness which decimated the buffalo was added an infliction which pressed heavily on all creatures of the world.

Since the month of Ramazan, now five moons passed, there had not fallen any rain. The land cried out for water; it was parched and terribly athirst. Now the sound of that thirsting ceased not from dawn till night. Beast cried to beast by the dead rivers. The dried mud rose in clouds from the accustomed water pools where foe strove with foe and friend with friend for the nourishment which was not there. Even the darkness was clamant with a great sorrowing: for the dew which might have saved the lives of many was at once absorbed by the well nigh red hot earth.

Among the lesser beasts who lived with death for shadow were to be numbered the tree dwellers, apes, baboons, and their smaller brethren, and among the smaller of these was one Tumbiri, a tiny green monkey, who carried always upon her back Chura (the frog faced), who to his mother was more precious than the succulent acacia pods which were now so hard to find. Nay! who was more to her than the whole acacia tree itself—than a forest of such trees. Chura was in evil plight.

Hardly could his enfeebled hands cling about his mother's neck. Hardly dared Tumbiri risk a leap from bough to bough of more than three feet lest the jar and swing should snap her infant's failing grip, and hurl him lifeless to the angry earth. Like some piteous ghost which, ever weeping, haunts the unquiet shade, Tumbiri ranged far and wide in those distressful days. Her thin wailing was carried remote from her usual haunts, but wherever she went the great thirst had gone before her.

Many a time was she minded to give up the struggle. More than once, dizzy with fatigue and blinded by her torment, Tumbiri climbed wearily into the branches of some forest monarch, resolved to lie there in the baking gloom until death should have its way. But always the tiny voice at her ear roused her sooner or later to a further effort.

Came a time when Chura was too weak to retain his hold; then cradled in one thin arm, hugged to her shrunken breast, Tumbiri carried him along the middle way. Now was her labor more than doubled; even her once marvelous agility was not equal to the double handicap. There were those who ran hotly upon her trail, seeing in her meager body a chance of further life. Little short of a miracle saved her that time when Chui, scaling her fortress at the awful pace with which a hunting leopard climbs, leered abruptly at her from an overhanging fork. Again when the jackal came upon her on the levels whither she had descended in hopeless search of young grass tips, which, partially chewed beforehand, might have staved off Chura's worst pangs, it was only the sudden wrath of a female roan antelope fearful for her own young which gave Tumbiri the instant's respite which spelt life.

IT was the same day on which Tumbiri had failed to climb more than half a score feet from the ground; in fact, you may say that it was on the day that seemed destined to see her death from exhaustion or her natural foes, that Tembo, lord of all the elephants, opened a possible way to life for those who cared or had the strength to follow.

Tembo was old. He was the most elderly of all his kind—and that is a long living. He had solved many of the mysteries of the wild, such as the reason why the Impala when disturbed soar skyward in mighty bounds instead of behaving like normal buck, and to the vexed question as to the ability of the porcupine to grow another supply of tail quills, when once he has left the originals embedded in the face of a too inquisitive investigator.

More, the secret of death was no secret to him: or rather, he well knew the fabled spot where his relatives for ages past had secretly retired to meet their end.

Twice had he been to this mecca of all ivory hunters, this mecca which is impossible of human attainment. Once he stumbled upon it by accident in his early youth. And again he made a pilgrimage thither when he came into his lordship. That time he went to see that all was as it should be; that the piled skeletons of a myriad, myriad elephants were undisturbed, and that the ivory, both age bleached, fungus covered by the middle years, and newly deposited, yet lay unspoiled by puny man.

Many a year had passed since Tembo last trod the dim death trail, but in his marvellous memory every tree and rocky crag of the way was clearly familiar. Therefore Tembo, rocking to and fro one night in the uneasy darkness, remembered all things about that secret place. Remembered the towering cliff which cut off one end of the buried valley: the piled slide of great bowlders which, like some giant's ladder, tried in vain to scale the frowning heights. He remembered the lush grass of the valley which the hottest summer must surely fail to wither. Casting his memory back for reasons for his confidence, Tembo pictured again the crystal bright stream which, issuing from the sheer face of the cliff, splashed merrily upon the huge bowlder, crown of that titanic ladder, and tinkling musically from ledge to ledge wound sinuous way to undiscovered exit.

It was undoubted by Tembo that this subterranean spring which there made picturesque appearance was removed from all influence of sun or drought. Some instinct beyond all hazard of dubious reasoning told him that there, if anywhere in this dying land, water would be found.

So, moved perchance by pity for his own people, or minded, it may be, that now was come the time of universal destruction, Tembo gave orders to his followers. And at earliest dawn the mighty, gray bodies swung out into the trail, bound for the ultimate destination of all their kind.

Popo, the long eared bat, who is news carrier at night, as is the vulture by day, first perceived the significance of the unusual directions taken by the gray ones. Screaming, he carried the word by thicket and spur to deepest forest dweller. Piping in shrill accents, he weaved looped circles about Tembo's head to have assurance doubly confirmed. Then certain of his guess when dread Gundile loomed up ahead, Gundile which rears its bulk toward the uttermost stars, and represents to the wild folk the frontiers of inhabitable Boran, Popo wheeled about again and announced the breaking of the tabu to all alive.

NEVER had such a thing been known before. By dusty water course and hard paved gameways, by aerial roads and sterile mountain pass, such of the wild folk as could still drag their weary bodies flocked to the banner of superior intelligence.

Popo flung ahead of the column, intoxicated with his successful tale bearing, spied Tumbiri crouched against a tree trunk.

Hardly, thought he contemptuously, was the glorious, unprecedented news for such small fry as this. But he was a terrible babbler. So he called out as he swept by, and at his voice Tumbiri shifted her burden to the other arm and essayed to work a little higher among the branches, for fear lest those mighty ones whose footsteps she could already hear should trample her underfoot.

Then Tumbiri came out into sight, and to Tumbiri, peering from her resting place, came a thought, the daring of which drove her thin blood beating through her veins. Not for herself would she have taken the chance she contemplated—only for that little one lax in her arm could she nerve herself to the feat.

As the giant head of the elephant passed close beneath her, Tumbiri breathed a prayer for indulgence to all her gods, and leaped.

It was no great distance. Fair and square between the great ears she landed, and there trembling like a leaf at the thought of Tembo's vengeance, she huddled herself aghast. With some futile idea of protection, she placed Chura between her feet, arching her slender back above him, as if to defy the strength which could uproot full grown trees as a child plucks grass stems from a lawn.

Now Tembo had seen all, and even as he felt the thistle down impact of the monkey's body, he halted in his tracks.

Once he reached round and up with his trunk, as if to satisfy himself that this was no noxious beast which so brazenly sought refuge, but as he had thought a wee monkey distraught by cares maternal. A second time his living hand curled up and back, and this time it was undoubted that Tembo pulled the shrinking figure to a safer resting place.

Who shall say what thoughts passed through his brain at that moment? Only it is certain that Tembo resumed his interrupted progress and with him, perched far above the jostling bodies, rode Tumbiri, a crown for her irresistible host.

THE trail wound round Gundile's arid foothills, directing through a district bare of all vegetation, unknown by any save the leader.

After a trek of some hours, Tembo swerved abruptly as if to charge the face of a towering rocky mass and, swinging round down a narrow path, passed under a natural archway through the guarding granite.

On the farther side of the path the road sloped steeply into a deep bowllike excavation about a mile in circumference.

Here was situated the burial ground of unnumbered generations of mighty pachyderms. Now for the first time was the secret fully exposed. From the top of the hill the valley gave the appearance of being literally carpeted with bones and ivory.

They lay here and there in great hillocks, and here and there in solitary dignity, as if some amongst those that had passed this way on their last journey were too feeble or felt themselves too dignified to lay their bones with those thousands of earlier voyagers where white remains were piled in the center of the cavity to a depth of many feet.

But it was the grass and the trees which held Tembo's attention. For where he had expected a rank greenness and a rich upspringing was naught but sere decay.

For the space of an instant the thought of what he had done nigh drove him to mad activity.

The realization that he had betrayed the secret of his tribe for no good result stung him so that he was on the point of running amok, a mountain of destruction. But he mastered himself and plunged at the head of his motley following down and across the incumbered valley floor.

It was noticeable that Tembo avoided to tread on the packed skeletons, making many detours rather than disturb his ancestors in their long sleep. But certain among the others, notably the hyenas, made an obscene haste toward the opposite cliff whence came a vagrant breeze which held in its coolness a hint of that which all desired.

At the foot of a great deposit of huge rocks, which spread out fanwise against the overhanging wall behind, they came to a halt.

There they ranged themselves peering up to where, some eighty feet above their heads and about the same distance below the rim, the debris was crowned by a balanced rock of vast proportions.

In the sudden hushing of their footsteps all heard the splashing of a running stream far up above their heads.

Peering this way and that from the dried water bed to the rocks, and inspecting the latter from all angles, Tembo perceived that the stream did, indeed, as of old, issue undiminished from its hidden source. But now some obstruction had altered the direction of its flow, it spilled over the topmost boulder on the opposite side to that on which it was wont and, running down some cavity in the underlying mass, was utterly absorbed.

This was a matter beyond even his superabundant strength. On that abrupt hillside he could by no possibility make any headway. Perchance some of the more agile of the company might win to the summit and live. But for those of his bulk and for the numerous antelope there gathered together, the path was too steep and the distances between the ledges too great.

TEMBO swung his ponderous head from side to side, and even at the moment of his bitterness the wonder came to him that none had as yet rushed to the attempt.

It was a few moments before he sensed the atmosphere of danger which held his companions in thrall.

True the water gurgled pleasantly on high. True, by one iron muscled by the chase or trained to the forest tree tops, the path could be climbed. Yet the brooding valley held a secret in its bosom which, though none could decipher, yet, by that hidden sense which all the wild folk hold in common, all could divine.

Far above all the gathering the water maddened by its gentle lisping, but that the source of that promise held potential death, none knew better than the mangy ones who cried aloud to their masters to lead the way, themselves discreetly remaining on the fringe of the assembly.

Abruptly Madoadoa (the spotted lightning), tormented by thirst, sprang from his place. He took the climb as if it were a level road. To him the six feet ledges presented no difficulty. The loose fragments rustled under his flying feet. Just below the topmost obstacle he gathered himself while all watched for what should now occur. It was an unhandy leap to essay.

Full twelve feet from roof steep slope to summit and overhung at that. But Madoadoa took it. Followed the rasping of his foreclaws on the smooth surface and he was arrived. A moment he poised magnificent under the burning sun, then as the watchers saw his muscles tense for a lightning blow, he was hurled backwards like a feather, and only his astounding agility saved him from a broken back.

Amazed at this uncanny happening, that one of the hyenas which had been loudest in his desire for action broke back and shambled at top speed for the exit. He died horribly three days later far out on the desert.

Tembo resumed his progress and with him rode Tumbiri, a crown for her irresistible host.

But Madoadoa, snarling viciously, bent himself like a bow, and once again launched himself up in a furious assault. And again, ere he could snatch a foothold, some frightful assailant swept him, strawlike, to the void.

And then! And then upreared from its hiding place coil upon sliding coil of brown and purple annihilation. A great wedge shaped head, as large as that of a wolf, peeped horribly over the edge, and in the lidless stare of those russet eyes Madoadoa read defeat.

For this was Satu, the python. Twenty feet nine and a half inches from tail to tip of nose, he was a royal antagonist on his chosen ground. The impact of two tons was in the drive of his head and a crackling death in his cold embrace.

Terribly he hung there, menacing those below. And none that saw him was more abjectly afraid that Tumbiri. For Tumbiri and such as she were Satu's natural prey, and the gap of his jaw would engulf a fullgrown gazelle. Already she felt the fascination of his compelling gaze, and she beat small hands upon her breast, wailing aloud for strength to resist the compulsion.

Tembo, however, noted that in proportion as Satu raised himself so much the less did the water pour out of the timeworn basin on the other side, and she watched a trickle which grew and grew in the accustomed channel.

But the rocks themselves were athirst and lapped it up before it reached the foot of the declivity.

So the leopard failed and came slowly back, blood dripping from his nose and mouth, for indeed the shock of Satu's driven body had crushed in the greater number of his ribs.

THEN Tembo shouted aloud his rage, and the rocks gave back his anger till the valley rang with the noise of his trumpeting. Then did Jiliwa (the living vice), one of the last to arrive, ponderously set himself to the ascent. No room was there for fear in his mentality. He was a fighting machine pure and simple, and few could be found to withstand his iron strength. So the great ape worked steadily upward and always Satu watched him, carefully measuring the distance to the barest fraction of an inch. Now where the leopard had bounded from level to level, Jiliwa swung himself and his great weight as easily by the sheer strength of his corded arms. A hush fell upon the onlookers as the ape steadied himself in his turn where the Madoadoa had paused before his final leap.

But this one was not minded to present so fair a target to his antagonist. Shrewdly he looked here and there for a foothold, then, raising himself, extended one arm above the edge of the basin.

Satu rose to the bait, literally he took the wrist in his mouth, and like a flash that hand closed about his nose and eyes.

By the mere impetus of his sharply withdrawn head the python jerked his enemy up to his side and there they wallowed in furious dispute. Now Jiliwa was taller than the tallest man and his weight was all of twenty stone. Moreover, he had never before found occasion to exert his fullest strength.

From below nothing could for a while be seen. Only the noise of that titanic struggle gave warning of a merciless destroying.

Sharply was flung up Jiliwa, up, till his scrabbling hind feet scraped naught but air, for fold on fold around his body Satu had flung the half of his length, and the ape's weight was supported in midair as easily as a man lifts a kitten to his knee.

But Jiliwa had not been idle. Satu's neck was between his palms, and he so squeezed that the snake's eyes bulged far beyond their sockets.

At the pain of the ape's pressure his antagonist exerted the whole of his immense power, and down below was clearly heard a noise like the snapping of dry fagots.

On the instant Jiliwa bent his head, and his canines met at the base of the skull, though the spinal column remained as yet unhurt. For a brief second the coils around him were slightly loosened, and by a terrible effort the ape pulled himself free.

Up the bulging face of the cliff went Jiliwa, climbing heavily where a fly could hardly find a foothold, and at the top he loosed great bowlders which leaped like things alive and bounded down. Like bearers of evil tidings, they whined far into the valley, for the cliff hung over too much, and the place where Satu lay was shielded from their wrath.

Once more the python curled himself grimly around in his cool retreat, and once more the stream which had increased greatly in volume was deflected from its channel.

Looking over the cliff edge to see what result had attended his maneuver, Jiliwa saw he had failed. And he beat clenched hands on his mighty chest and roared aloud. Then in a spasm of suicidal rage leaped clear into space, whirling to his death.

FOR a while at this latest development there was no movement from those below. Almost Satu was persuaded that he had the victory. Deceptively he lowered his torn head to the rock's rim, and appeared to sleep.

Next Tumbiri stirred and sighed once as from dire fatigue. With Chura in her arm she scrambled from Tembo's head while all looked on amazed.

That such a frail creature should think to triumph where two such mighty warriors had already failed seemed madness past all belief. Yet she went forward and laid her child in the shelter of a rock, then in her turn began to climb.

Seeing the unprotected morsel which whimpered feebly at its sudden loneliness, one of the mangy ones ran in, murder in his bestial gaze and in the working of his slobbering jaws. But Tembo took one step and wrapped his trunk about the vile body and dashed him against a stone so that he died. Thereafter were none found to interfere. Tumbiri went forward, climbing with blistered feet upon the ensanguined rocks.

She knew all about snakes. Had they not chivvied her from bough to bough on countless nights? Had they not sworn eternal enmity to all monkeys? And had not the study of their habits comprised her earliest lesson?

Well she knew that, horrible as was the eternal strife, among the four legged inhabitants of the woods and plains, it was as naught compared with the merciless warfare ever waged between snake and snake. Therefore, Tumbiri went up though her whole body revolted at the thought of what was above her—though the blood was as ice in her veins in spite of the tropic heat, and though she shook as one struck with a palsy.

Great was her need, and it urged her—urged her to action far beyond limits of instinctive terror. To Tumbiri the climb itself was a muscle tiring travail. Each ledge presented a problem, for she was small. She had snatched up a stick at the commencement of her task, and this pathetic weapon served greatly to impede her progress.

At first Tumbiri searched here and there as if she had mislaid some precious object. Diligently she peered in every crevice, turning over all loose stones with greatest precaution. And ever Satu, now thoroughly awakened, kept his unmoving eyes on her. Never did Tumbiri dare to meet that look, though the appalling desire to do so was a physical pull.

At last at the point whence both Madoadoa and Jiliwa had climbed to their undoing, but on the other side of the rock Tumbiri saw what she desired. A precious object, indeed.

Swift she stooped and struck down with her stick, then straightened herself again, and to all it seemed as if her new weapon was itself a stick. But the thin muscles of her right hand stood out with the pressure of her grasp, and the stick, if stick it was, appeared strangely contorted.

The last obstacle was more easy to Tumbiri than it had been to her predecessors; the crevices which had offered them no foothold were more than sufficient for her.

She did not dare for many reasons to try to climb above her adversary, though this would have been more suited to her form of attack. But she halted a foot below the rim where the water she craved ran down close beside her to the depths.

For this adversary Satur saw no slightest need to exert her strength. Not for such a one was the piledriving blow, or the iron pressure of his body. Satu relied on the compulsion of his gaze. This was the normal method for such as Tumbiri, and never yet had it failed.

But Tumbiri thought of her beloved Chura and forbore to look up, though she was racked to a sobbing distraction of what was now so close. Cautiously, very cautiously, she wriggled a few inches higher with face close to the burning rock, then drew back her two hands and launched her attack.

THE strange missile cleared the edge, though for an instant it seemed to be held to Tumbiri's wrist as by a string. It fell with a gentle flop into the water basin round which the python was coiled in a three foot heap of sinuous strength. Followed a moment's silence during which Tumbiri, sick and faint, slipped down toward her offspring.

She was not halfway down when Satu went suddenly and terribly mad. He looped his great body about himself and writhed in agony. He wriggled from the basin and beat himself amazingly upon the rocks. In a silence shattered by Tembo's ear splitting outcry as the clear water rushed once again down the unblocked passage, Satu coiled himself like a giant spring, and so coiling, stiffened abruptly in the immobility of death.

The released waters flung up a cloud of spray as they leaped from rock to rock in shining lacelike patterns.

They threw out also the squat body of a venomous puff adder whose bite is the passport to all eternity.

With abhorrence Tumbiri looked upon its loathly form which so recently she had hailed as sole means of deliverance from her woes.

The adder was swiftly trampled underfoot in the rush for the refilled water pools. But Tumbiri was the first to lave her baby's head with the life giving stream. She was the first in spite of her fragile weakness to drink her fill, for Tembo clove a passage for her through hurrying bodies, and stood above her till she had made an end.

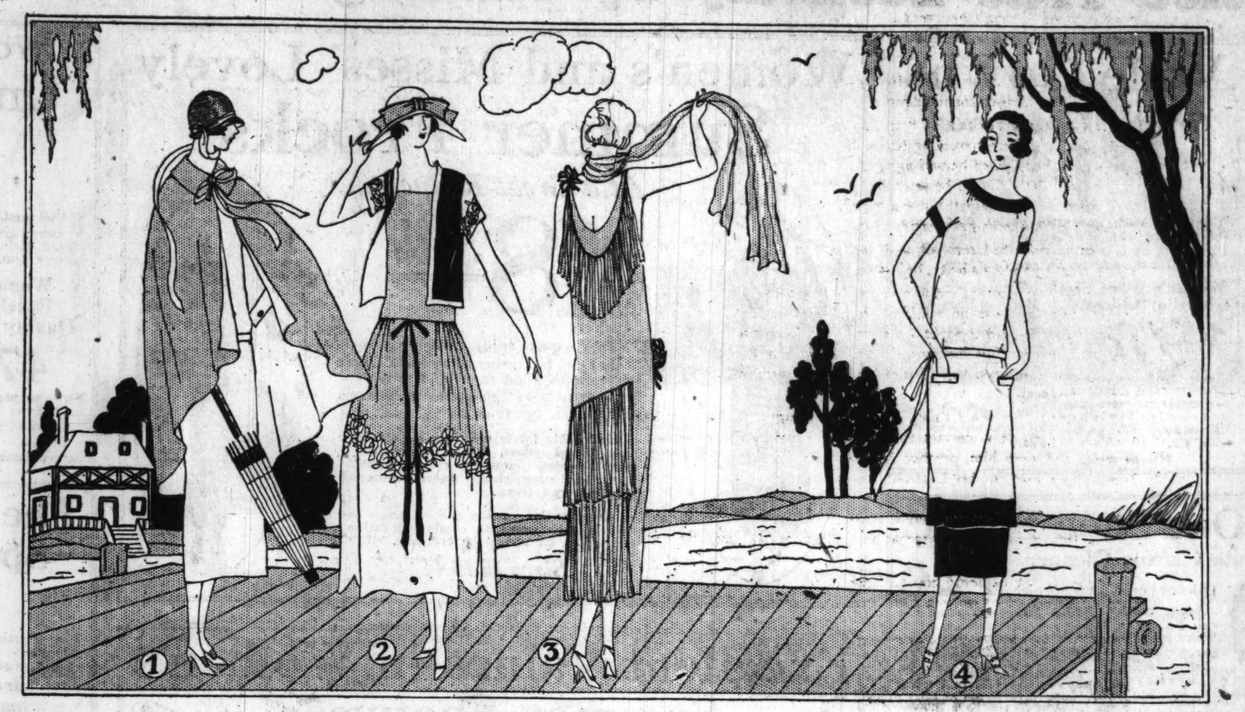
Taking the Clothes Line to Mountain or Sea

by Corinne Lowe



NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Each summer reminds us of a certain widely known lady in "David Copperfield." Like Mrs. Micawber, the warm weather months murmur their assurances of fidelity to one object. This object is the flowered or figured fabric. The summer, so it seems, "will never desert" it.

Evidence of this fact was supplied by the recent wedding of Miss Barbara Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, which occurred last month. Interesting to learn how many women appeared at this event in the flowered chiffon! Made with full skirt and fitted bodice, gowns of this material were decidedly in the foreground.

For the wedding, for church, for the afternoon formality of summer—the flowered chiffon is a choice even more authoritative than it was last year. If one must limit one's expenditure on hot weather clothes, if one must prepare for the ceremonious affairs of the daytime with but a single gown, one should never dismiss lightly the claims of such a costume.

Among the gowns to be chosen for a summer vacation the afternoon creation of flowered chiffon ranks second in importance to the sports outfit and the evening gown. The only reason I have not included an illustration of this type is because I showed last week one of the most charming of such models—the one created by Louise Boulanger.

The hat usually selected to accompany the patterned chiffon has no severe obligations laid upon it. It must be pretty—that's all. Reverting to this millinery motivation of "the age of innocence," it is usually wide brimmed. Leghorns seem to be enjoying a vogue undemonstrated for some seasons, and numbers of these big, floppy brimmed affairs are trimmed artlessly with field flowers and wheat. Others profit by the equally guileless services of a band of velvet about the crown, against which are set one or two big roses.

Truly unblighted by any chic are these wide brimmed hats for wear with both the afternoon chiffon or the afternoon lingerie creation. Typical of their freedom from such influence is the leghorn hat worn by the second figure from the left. Here natural colored leghorn is trimmed only with a big bow of black velvet ribbon.

Yet, simple as it is, the hat performs meritorious service in reinforcing the message of the gown. For its buff matches the tint of organdy selected for the lower section and sleeves of an organdy model which employs a deeper tone of yellow for corsage and top section. Furthermore, its bow takes up the refrain of a black velvet bolero and the narrow streamers of the same fabric depending from the waistline.

Altogether in line with this season's organdy theories is this model. For, as I have remarked before, many of the loveliest editions of this sheer, summery material employ two tones of a single color. Then, too, it has an even more bracing spirit of novelty in the bolero, which, by the way, is lined and edged with organdy of the paler tint. The bolero touch is found on quite a few of our summer clothes, and in this case its introduction is signally fortunate. The last touch of this frock consists of the embroidery in buff thread which encircles skirts and sleeves. This model is an adaptation of one of Lucien Lelong's lingerie ideas.

To go back to hats, there is another midsummer mode for afternoons which is now being much exploited. Take a wide brimmed black velvet hat, face it with white organdy, and deck it with perhaps a huge bow of the same snowy texture. If you reconcile thus those two uncongenial temperaments—velvet and organdy—you evoke something which is decidedly smart and new. Certainly a hat of this type would bear out the organdy and velvet partnership of the lingerie gown just described.

In the millinery sense of the word, we are still hairbrained. Summers may come and summers may go, but the wide brimmed hat of the lovely, ethereal hair goes on forever. Still, perhaps it is the first choice for afternoon wear, and when a bonnet is worn in the evening hair is sure always of its meed of consideration. Just at present, there are many models in this straw occurring in orchid. These are often trimmed in self-color, although occasionally violence is done to an old prejudice by placing a cluster of American Beauty roses on the side of the brim. These hats are ideal for the garden party, and often they are worn for dinners at the country club.

Shell pink is another tone constantly encountered in the province of this type of millinery. After all, why not? If we haven't shell pink shock these days, it's really a tribute to the vigor of our constitutions. For this tint is one of the favorites of the summer and is shown in every conceivable type of afternoon and evening wear.

I illustrate the preference for this tint in the evening frock of georgette second from the right. Aside from its color, this model is eloquent of other impulses of the mode. The season is just full of georgette dancing frocks. Both here and in Paris we feel this irresistible urge to the simple georgette gown and to any girl outward bound for seaside or mountain two or three of such creations are firmly recommended.

As a rule, the georgette evening gown of summer is free from any overstrained sentiment for decoration. If tucks and flounces and an original disposition of these two features won't make the character of the model no further measures are taken on the obdurate subject.

An example of the ingenuity of the Paris designer in conceiving new treatments of the familiar partners, tucks and flounces, is afforded by this version of a Chanel model. Observe that our old acquaintance, the plaited diagonal flounce, is suffering from arrested development. It extends about only a section of the skirt. Observe also that it has for running mate another plaited flounce equally stunted in its growth. Both of these details make for decided novelty. So, too, does the plaited cape collar in the back. The postscripts to this frock consist of the matching scarf wound about the throat and of the flower placed on the left shoulder. This flower, a rose in matching tint, is balanced by another similar bloom on the right at the waistline.

To go to a summer resort without sports clothes would be these days like going to Greenwich Village without a radical opinion. These clothes are, of course, the first consideration of any girl about to leave town. I have already catalogued the various types of sports togs so frequently that here I shall be content merely with describing the two models illustrated. At the left a white flannel one piece dress is topped by a circular cape of vivid red flannel. The hat also is an outburst of color. For it occurs in red felt bound with white velvet ribbons. This costume, just brought home from Paris by a friend of mine, shows that the circular cape has not been entirely removed from its sphere of usefulness by the sports jacket.

The final model—the one at the right—combines with a black satin skirt a white crepe blouse bound with the satin. Still one more testimony to the mode of the tunic blouse and also to our present determination to avoid any policy of isolation. The skirt of today is nearly always linked up with its accompanying blouse by some touch like this!

As to sports hats, the pre-eminence of the white felt is being experienced more keenly than ever. Colors, of course, occur, but they are subordinate to this absorbing passion for white. Also, it is to be remarked that some smart white felts displayed by a leading Fifth avenue designer round off with a touch of black satin. Perhaps the brim is faced with this contrasting silk, and sometimes a cocarde or bow supplies the contrast.

That we are doomed to the high crowned hat for autumn is foretold by everybody who dabbles in fashions, and this advancing mode is foreshadowed now in many of these white felt hats. The real telescope crown—high and square—is a persistent feature of such midsummer models stressed in connection with a small brim turned up either at the front or at one of the sides.

Hi, There, Young Fellers! Want to See Babe Ruth?

By Sally Joy Brown.

"WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE THE WHITE SOX PLAY THE NEW YORK YANKEES AND WHY?"

NOW for the next treat in our summertime of parties—and it's a big one this time, I promise you! We're going to see Babe Ruth, with the New York Yankees, play against the White Sox on Tuesday, July 29.

Think what a treat that will be, and get busy with your letters right away! Remember—you're going to see the leading team in the American league, and the most famous home run king there is. Maybe he'll knock out a home run with the bases full, just to make things more thrilling! And the White Sox are going to put up a great game, too, because they'll be back home, and trying to come up toward the top—so the game will be a thriller from start to finish.

This party will be just for boys, because they like baseball so much better than most girls—so, boys, your chances to win an invitation are just twice as good as usual. And I've made it easy to win—as easy as can be. Above you'll see the question you are to answer in your letters, printed in heavy type. I want you to tell me—"Would you like to see the White Sox play the New York Yankees, and why?" You all have good answers for that question, I know, so you can write good letters easily—especially when you remember what a good time you'll have and what a great game you'll see when you win an invitation. So start your letters now.

Now for the winners for the White City party and the arrangements I've made for meeting you!

I've chosen the winners and I'm printing their names below. Also, I shall mail a letter to each one, so you will get it by Tuesday. In this letter I'll tell you the plans for meeting, so if your name is in the list, watch for your invitation and the letter telling you all about it.

To Help a Small Boy.

"I am a widow and have three small sons in an orphan's home. The eldest is talented and can take lessons on the saxophone.

"I wonder if you could find some kind friend who could make this little boy happy and help a little orphan learn music which may later mean a livelihood. The master thinks he will make rapid strides in progress if he continues as he is now doing, but he will not be able to do so unless he obtains an instrument for practicing.

"The instructor, who is giving the orphans free lessons and also organizing a band, wishes him to have a C melody saxophone. I will gladly pay postage. MRS. R. K."

WHAT FASHION DOES TO THE HUMAN BODY

by Antoinette Donnelly

If you'd escape deformity and ill, seek correct carriage and beware the "debutante slouch."

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the examination of 3,000 young women at the New York Health Center it was made evident that the fashionable posture of hips thrust forward, with its resulting prominent abdomen, results in a number of ills and deformed bodies.

Miss Estelle Bertine, physical director of the institution, has examined among this body of young women a great many dress models and she says: "I have been interested in what fashion does to the human body. Having examined a number of dress models, it is apparent that habitually assuming the fashionable posture of hips forward and prominent abdomen, round upper and hollow lower back as illustrated in any fashion magazine, results in complete distortion of all harmony of line when the individual is stripped of her silks and satins.

Foot Troubles Follow.

"Bodies gradually grow rigid in this abnormal position, so the person comes to look like a caricature with her pretty face and deformed body. Backache seems the universal result and, alas, the person buying the dress is only too often likely to imitate the model who has shown it.

"Much might be said about what improper weight bearing does to the arches of the feet. About 65 per cent of the women examined were having troubles with their arches. It is much more difficult to correct arches that have become flat than to strengthen weak arches and acquire a balance in which the body weight is carried in a way to place the foot at a mechanical advantage rather than disadvantage."

In the golden age of art, the Greeks studied bodily proportion, balance and symmetry because of its relation to beauty. In this, the golden age of science, we study bodily proportion, balance, and symmetry because of its relation to health.

Ills of Balance.

As far back as the ancient Egyptians it has been recognized that the spread of the outstretched arms should equal the height. But now this measurement of bodily symmetry comes to have a new suggestion of balance between nervous and skeletal structure.

So it is with the girth of the chest at rest. If it is in ideal proportion to the rest of the body it will equal half the height. Most of us have chests either too large or too small, but every variation from the ideal helps to give us our physical individuation, and helps to explain why no two people react the same in health or disease.

Again, the length of the chest, upper abdomen, and lower abdomen should each be one-tenth of the stature. Rare, indeed, is the person who attains this perfection, yet the significance of the short, flat chest, associated with wide hips and long abdomen, is one which makes any addition in weight above a rather low normal.

Generally speaking, such a person will easily acquire fat, due to the disproportionately large abdomen. It will tend to be soft and flabby, with the fat located largely around hips and abdomen.

Defects of the Office.

In the examination of the 3,000 young women made by Miss Bertine there was recognized an almost universally poor carriage of the business woman. Eight hours a day at the desk leaves its stamp on the individual. Fatigue at the end of the day is common in what would seem to be energetic and husky enough girls. An eight hour slumping posture in a day becomes in time a habit, with a trail of ills none of which would be necessary if the sitting and standing posture were better regulated.

Wrong sitting causes weakness of trunk muscles and abnormalities of the trunk itself. One should sit in a chair so that the trunk is straight. Bending the body forward should occur at the hip joint. To prevent bad trunk position, sit far back in the chair.

In standing, the body should be balanced on the balls of the feet, with the weight on the outerside. Keeping the weight poised and the abdominal muscles flat will contribute markedly to general well-being.

The protruding head and abdomen and the usual flat feet, or weakening arches, are depressing to both spirit and the physical self. Despite the influence of the "model" walk, better known as the "debutante slouch," personal attractiveness is more properly measured by a splendid carriage of the body.

A lake shore bedroom where colors of wall paper are repeated in cushions.

PAPER AS BACKGROUND.

OCCASIONALLY it happens that people make the mistake of selecting papers which are theoretically good, well drawn, in good color, clear and well defined, but tiresome, somehow, after a short time. The trouble is that these papers are merely good as flat, theoretical designs, and not as wall paper, because they fail to furnish a satisfactory background. Background is the essential point of any wall paper. It must be a fitting ground for the furniture which is to be used with it. It must have some interest; still, this must be sufficiently indefinite to stand the test of remaining on the wall in such a way as to unify the whole room. Extremely clearly designed and vividly colored papers should be used only in some definite panels, as decorative pictures, in conjunction with plainer papers.

The present vogue for figured papers has produced a great variety of "chintz" patterns. Chintz wall paper, as a rule, connotes light colored, delicately flowered paper, suitable only for bedroom and upstairs use. Nowadays, however, there are many heavier chintz designs, which may be used, quite permissibly, in living and dining rooms, sun rooms and breakfast alcoves.

The design of the paper should be, of course, in scale with the size of the room. A large pattern, for instance, is not good for use in a small room, as it is likely to make the room seem smaller still. On the other hand, a tiny flowered paper would shrink to almost nothing in a great living room.

A fascinating little chintz design is used in the breakfast room of a suburban home on the lake shore. The small flowered decoration tilts this way and that, in a most intriguing, interwoven movement. There are just enough spots and patches of color to furnish constant puzzlement and interest, without arresting the easily and pleasingly flowing pattern as it spreads itself over the entire wall.

The colors are mauve, old blue, sage green, peacock green and lemon yellow on a string colored ground. The furniture in the room is painted mauve, with edgings of peacock green. An ecru and black fiber rug covers the floor. Little leaded windows overlooking the lake are uncurtained. Lamp shades are of lemon yellow silk, edged with mauve.

Chintz papers cover all of the walls in a most attractive little summer home. The house is furnished in colonial style throughout. A small entrance hall has a flowered paper in blue, yellow and green, with touches of black, on a light ecru ground. The woodwork and stairway are painted deep blue, as is an old fashioned wooden settle standing beside the door. The only other piece of furniture is a small table on which a green pottery vase and an old glass oil lamp with a frosted globe shield are placed. The vase is kept filled with flowers which grow in the garden or in the woods around about.

Leading from the hallway into a good sized living room is a double doorway. This room has wall paper flowered in flag blue, old gold, leaf green, brick color and mauve, with touches of ivory and black, on an ecru ground. The woodwork here, as in the hall, is painted blue, and the furniture is brown mahogany. There is a large open fireplace, built of natural stone which was gathered from around the house. For this there are polished brass accessories. Window curtains of natural casement cloth are edged with narrow upholsterers' fringe in blue and green.

The dining room has woodwork and paper matching that in the living room into which it opens. The curtains, however, are different. Here they are of leaf green gauze. The combination of this green with the blue of the window frames blends pleasingly with the lovely out of doors view. Green and white is the color scheme of the small kitchen adjoining.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms. The south room has paneled walls. Pussy willow designed paper, in gray, blue, green and sand, fills the panels. The background around them is painted French gray, as also are the mouldings and woodwork. There is a recessed window into which a seat has been built. This is fitted with a boxed cushion, covered in old blue rep. Glass curtains are of silver gray gauze and draperies framing the recess are of rep, matching the cushion cover. On the large bed is a gray rep cover, banded with blue. Lamp shades in the room are of soft bluish rose.

Another bedroom has wall paper in a delicate lacy design of flowers and leaves on a deep cream ground. The colors in the pattern are shades of green, coral and turquoise, with accents of black. Woodwork and furniture are painted a light grayish green, ornamented with motifs of flowers.

Glass curtains are of deep cream colored silk gauze. Light coral colored silk gauze is used for overdraperies which reach to the floor and which are caught back just above the sill by folded cuffs of the same material. The cover for the bed is cream colored, trimmed with coral ruffles. Braided rugs are used on the floor.

Cushions repeating the colors in the wall paper are placed on the chaise longue, as shown in today's illustration. The little round chair before the dressing table is upholstered in plain coral glazed chintz and the extra cushion is turquoise. Deep, ruffled shades on the tall electric candlesticks are of coral colored ribbon.

Old English chintz paper covers the walls of the third bedroom. The pattern is carried out in mulberry and rose, green and a little blue, with an occasional suggestion of mauve. Woodwork in this room is old ivory. Draperies are of deep, old rose casement silk, over old ivory glass curtains. The rug is mulberry, and the furniture dark walnut. It is a man's room, and quite formal in arrangement, but not lacking in warmth of color.

Those papers which are too pronounced in design and coloring to be used as much more than individual panels, are allowable in hallways. As these are usually sparsely furnished and contain little else of decorative character, striking paper is not at all objectionable on their walls.

In the Twilight.

MY DARLING: Last evening at dusk, just before the twilight flickered for a moment before plunging into the waiting arms of night, my thoughts were all of you. And as the stars began to shine so brilliantly, they reminded me of your eyes as they gaze into mine. The breeze softly playing against my cheek, carrying with it the faint perfume of dew kissed flowers, seemed to be your breath whispering "I love you."

Soon the moon came sailing majestically down its milky path, and again I saw you moving, silent and tranquil, down a rose strewn path, the beams of the moon accentuating the gleams in your hair and making a picture more beautiful than Norse ever dreamed.

My thoughts were long and reminiscent, broken only by the dark cloud which suddenly obscured the silver orb, plunging me into darkness of despair with the foreboding that just so would your winsome beauty be snatched from my life e'er I attained the heights of my dreams. But lo! the moon emerged from the darkness more radiant and beautiful than before. So I took heart again.

Just as the moon can be hidden from our sight, just so can the beauty of life seem hidden to eyes filled with earthly realities. But when love comes into her own and guides our trembling footsteps, and darkness is lost forever and life is sweet and precious.

2142—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 36 inch material with ⅞ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1940—Girl's dress. Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material with 3¼ yards of 2½ inch ribbon and 1½ yards of plaiting.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

We all want plenty of pretty wash dresses, particularly through the summer months, and pattern No. 2142 is a design that could be used for several dresses, choosing different materials or colors, and varying the trimming in each one.

The dress is cut in one piece, and has kimono sleeves. These are seamed on the shoulders, and if full length ones are preferred, the lengthening may be done by using the one piece section included in the pattern.

The sides of the dress are slashed at a low waist line, and the lower edges are gathered. Where the fullness is let in, there should be pieces set on both the right and wrong sides—covering the places, and stitched on all four edges. Narrow sash ends of the dress material cover the places, tying in a bow and having rather long ends, extending about to the knees.

Turned back cuffs and round collar are made from a contrasting material, and an outside facing is put across the top of each pocket of the collar and cuffs materials.

Make one dress of a checked gingham, using the color that forms the check to trim with; and set the shoulder seams together with a piping of this color. Another dress would be pretty made of green and white striped wash silk; and for this one, white would be the color to trim with. The sash pieces could be made of the striped silk, with set-on hems of the white. Still another dress could be made of plain colored gingham, chambray, or cotton poplin, and the trimming done with a pin checked gingham. On this dress it would look well to omit the sash pieces, and instead make the outside bands across the side fullness of the check, or if the plain color is used, work a cross stitch design in the colors used in the checks.

Pattern No. 1940 is for one of those pretty one piece dresses for small and young girls. There is a slash cut in the midle of the back at the neck for an opening, and the dress is cut in one piece—the usual fullness being let in on the sides at a low waist line. One of the printed crêpes would be pretty for this design, and would need but little trimming. The ground color of the crêpe could be matched in a plain crêpe and used for plaiting around the neck and sleeves. A fine knife plaiting will be right, and the bottom edge may be picoted. Lay the plaiting in place around the neck and then finish the neck—carrying the finish around the slashed opening in the back—with a bias binding of the plain or figured crêpe.

The bottom of the skirt will look well finished with a plain, deep hem; or the lower edge can be cut in scallops or points and bound—matching the neck binding.

Ribbon will be pretty for the ties at the sides of the dress. If the dress were made loose enough one of the dotted swisses would be lovely—say a coral ground with white dots.

The dress, showing the panel front—pattern No. 2146—would be pretty for afternoon wear made of one of the lovely crêpes. One of the dark blues, in a Canton crêpe, with the panel, collar, cuffs, and tie strings made of just the right shade of tan, would be becoming to many women, and the combination is a smart one.

Black with white has been a favorite combination for some time, but is rather striking if one intends wearing the dress for any length of time. A printed crêpe with a contrasting, plain color would be another good combination.

The dress is cut in one piece, and the closing is at the left side of the panel front. There are short kimono sleeves, seamed on the shoulders, and this seam can be finished with a narrow piping, or a narrow hand stitched row over the seam on the right side, or it may be practically covered with tiny buttons set on close together. For size 36, the dress at the bottom measures about one and five-eighths yards.

BLONDY: YOU POOR CHILD, I know just how you have suffered, for I have gone through a bad case of sunburn myself, but there is a cure, and while the odor is not pleasant the results are most effective. Apply equal parts of linseed oil and limewater. This will take out the sting and heal at the same time, you may use this same lotion as a preventive.

C. B. S.: THE FOLLOWING lotion is especially recommended for oily skin: Orange flower water, 6 ounces; tincture of benzoin, ½ ounce; witch hazel, 2 ounces. Mix the witch hazel and the orange flower water, shake lightly, and add the tincture of benzoin. Apply with a piece of absorbent cotton night and morning. This lotion is also helpful for large pores.

MAUD: BRUSH YOUR TONGUE with tooth powder, just as you do your teeth. The tongue accumulates tartar and bacteria, especially near the root, and it is just as important to brush it as to brush the teeth. Lime water is a splendid mouth wash. I'll be glad to send you my pamphlet telling how to make it, if you will send along a stamped, addressed envelope.

JENNY: I THINK YOU ARE JUST tired out and in need of a vacation. My advice to you would be to spend your vacation at some quiet resort, where you can go bathing every day and take long walks. Spend as much time as possible out of doors and forget all about your typewriter and other office duties. Make the best of every minute, and you will come back feeling greatly refreshed and ready to take on any tasks that may be set before you.

To Banish Wrinkles and Freshen Up Quickly

After a strenuous day outdoors, when winds, heat and exhaustion have combined to take away one's freshness and caused the skin to wrinkle and sag—or after a tedious or fretful day indoors—one often has urgent need for some quick rejuvenator. Maybe there's a dance on for the evening, or some other social event. How in the world can milady make herself presentable, looking as she does? It's quite easy.

Just get an ounce of powdered Saxolite and a half pint witch hazel at the nearest drug store, mix the two and bathe the face in the solution for two or three minutes. Then look in your mirror and behold the wonderful transformation! Wrinkles have vanished, loose, tired muscles have been rested and "ironed up," marks of fatigue have flown, and you look so much brighter and younger you can hardly believe your eyes. The Last Word in Paris Fashions

TRIFLES THAT TELL OF THE SUMMER MODE

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—When a Parisienne gets down to the serious affair of choosing the little, non-useful details of her toilette, you would think some weighty question affecting no less than the universe was up to her to decide, so seriously does she consider the accessories. A scarf that has as much weight as a trailing trifle of white cloud, and affords not even the flimsiest protection, will absorb her attention for an incalculable time, but when she has bought the scarf the weighty business is only half over, and there are long hours of concentration ahead of her. She has to arrange it on her charming person.

Volumes could be set down about the way a woman wears a scarf, and I wonder that the psychoanalysts don't compile illuminating statistics on the matter. There are as many ways of wearing the scarf as there are smart women in Paris, and this puts the Parisienne on her mettle to excel in her own arrangement. It is a test, and she puts in the fullest time and study to passing it brilliantly. It is the result of choosing and wearing that entitles her to her reputation as the best dressed woman in the world, and this double process receives a good measure of her attention.

She has none of the puritanical inhibitions that spring from the idea that a lot of attention to such things is a little bit wicked, or at least indicative of too much ego in the cosmos. A string of bright beads or a row of nonworking buttons she considers the master touch, and she is often content to wear the simplest of dresses and the plainest of clothes, but she will not forego that carefully studied trifle of her toilette which is the insignia of individuality. Just now the fancy of the Parisienne is completely held by artificial jewelry and a favorite form is the necklace introduced by Chanel, composed of imitation pearls the size of large marbles, sparsely strung upon a slender chain and fitted close about the throat. Sometimes the stones are jade, or coral, but the arrangement is the same, and I have seen these necklaces made with carved ivory balls instead of stones. Earrings of one color and necklace of another, often in daring contrast, are another whim that pleases the Parisienne to add a gay touch to her black frock.

Gloves are another accessory about which she is most carefully studious. White gloves are not worn by fashionable women except, occasionally, with the tailored suit. Black gloves, usually short and gauntleted, are the smartest hand covering at the moment, and if you have several bright colored bracelets you wear them outside these black suede gloves, as shown on the first model in our sketch. Of such details is the mode made.

Sandalwood crepé de chine with plaited ruffles in points from knee to hem.

Coat dress of blue kasha with a double skirt and buttons at the side.

Tailleur of brown and beige with inset pockets and a narrow belt of suede.

Coat of black crepé satin trimmed with shaped bands of material reversed.

Slim, trim, and slinky will do for the dress, with a choice of crepe de chine, figured silk, crepe satin, or alpaca with which to achieve these three qualities. It is in the accessories and the important trifles that you let your personality run riot.

The first figure shows how Madam Nash, said to be the best dressed woman in Europe, attends to these matters. Her frock is from Jean Patou, and is a chemise of sandalwood crepe de chine, perfectly straight and circumspect except for the plaited ruffles that follow a zigzag course around the bottom. Her scarf, which is worn half off, half on, as you see it, is of mousseline, the same tone as the dress, and as she wears it, it looks more like floating panels than anything else. That manner of placing the scarf and the black gloves, serving as a background for jade and lapislazuli bracelets, are the distinctive touches that make a smart ensemble.

Naturally you exercise a lot of taste and discrimination in the selection of your dress, even if it is a background. Backgrounds are always important, for the unsympathetic background may ruin both internal and external effects. It is only that the fashionable edict says, "Keep it quiet" to the costume, and it is an order not to be disobeyed without the dire consequence of being conspicuous, the cardinal sin of the mode.

Second from the left you see the most popular dress in Paris today, and it is a diatribe on backgrounds. Created by Jean Patou, this gown has been executed by that clever personage in many materials, ranging from reps to alpaca. It was made for Mrs. William K. Dick, formerly Mrs. John Jacob Astor, in kasha. The double fronted skirt, the upper showing two inches of the lower all around the bottom and up the left side, and the row of functioning buttons and button holes are its interesting features. As the dress is usually worn, the buttons and button holes do not meet below the knees, but that is a matter of taste and purpose.

The surplice fastening is topped by a small collar of the material under a collar of white crepe satin. Straight satin cuffs finish the tightly buttoned sleeves. The black follows a straight unbroken, unadorned line until the bottom of the skirt, where the double skirt effect is repeated. For the races this dress is completed by a parasol with a flat Japanese structure, made of dark blue and white to match the gown.

With the tailleur forming the tempo of the present mode, it's pretty hard to get through a talk about styles without mentioning it at least, though a mere mention is not quite fair to such an important unit. I've just been talking to O'Rossen, the famous tailor of the Place Vendome, whose tailleurs have been largely responsible for the present vogue, and I am showing you in our third model one of his new suits, which shows features he is stressing particularly. Notice the belt. The tailleur for spring had no belt, but this feature has come back into our tailored midst once more, and often is made three inches wide, with buckle of leather or metal. The pockets set into the body of the jacket are another interesting O'Rossen detail, and that row of little bone buttons above each pocket is an amusing variation. O'Rossen is making most of his skirts of the wrap around type, as this one is made, attached only at the waist line. This structure enables you to walk and not totter from step to step.

I want you to take note of the scarf that accompanies this suit. It is the particular scarf of the moment in Paris. Made of two tones of brown, the center light and the ends dark, it is picoted around the edges, and that's all there is to it. These colors repeat the major tones of the English mixture of which the suit is made, and finish gracefully the color scheme.

Lastly you have a straight coat of black crepe satin from Brandt, the collar forming an intriguing novelty with its padded and shirred sections. The bottom of the sleeves and the coat have padded rolls of tucked, padded satin to finish them. Brandt has worked a design into the sides of the coat body and the sleeves, using narrow strips of the satin reversed. It is inconspicuous, this trimming, but makes a charming detail that differentiates the coat from all the other coats of this season. This coat is worn over the simplest of dresses, of black crepe de chine, with a plaited skirt and plain jumper bodice held in place by a snakeskin belt with an onyx buckle.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

HAWK FEATHER'S PARTY

By Raymond Kelly

"MOTHER," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, "were there always calendars?"

"No, indeed," answered Mother Bear.

"Then little boys and bears must not have had any birthdays," answered Fuzzy Wuzzy, "because they couldn't tell when they came."

"Why, bless your little heart, Fuzzy," said she, "mothers don't need calendars to keep track of birthdays and Christmases. They just know, and they'd know just as well if there weren't a calendar in the wide, wide world. Calendars are so that other folk won't forget. But why do you ask? It's a long time until your birthday."

"Yes, but Hawk Feather's birthday is today and he's asked me to come to his party. May I go? He's an awfully nice boy, and he'll like anything I bring for him, and I'll be polite and I'll come home early. May I go?"

"Well, well," put in Father Bear, as Fuzzy Wuzzy stopped for breath, "it's a good thing I found that bee tree, for the nicest present a boy could get from a bear would be a pail of honey."

"So Mother Bear gave Fuzzy Wuzzy a bath in the creek that flows past the den, and slicked up his fur until each hair lay exactly as it should. Then she handed him the pail of honey and gave him a big hug and a little pat to start him on his way. He hung the pail on the handle bar of his car, gave a push with his feet, and was off, waving good-by to his mother, as he turned the corner by the filbert bush. Then he went down the long path among the tall pines, and followed the creek to where the mountain ends and the plain begins to begin.

There the creek widens out into a pond that has a wide sandy shore with great willow trees at the back. You couldn't ask a finer place for a party, and that's why Hawk Feather had his there.

All his animal friends were there, and they called greetings to Fuzzy Wuzzy, as the car came to a stop right among them. The birds were there, too, and as soon as one was tired of singing another began right where that one left off; so that the music never stopped for a moment.

Hawk Feather sat cross-legged on the sand with Fuzzy Wuzzy beside him, and all the other little guests were in a circle about them. Everybody was just as friendly as could be, because they all liked Hawk Feather, and he liked all of them, which made it simply impossible for them not to be nice to each other while he was with them.

And Hawk Feather was a wonderful little host, for he had remembered that not all of his friends liked the same kind of food. There was a whole bag of fresh bones for the meat eaters, and because it was Hawk Feather's party, Bobby Lynx and Willie Wild Cat lay side by side, and gnawed without a single growl. For the beavers, there was any amount of fresh bark and green twigs; for the otter there was fish, and the rabbit had all the clover even a rabbit could wish. "It makes any lunch taste twice as nice if it is just what you like," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, as he helped Hawk Feather eat the honey.

After eating, they all took a nap, which seems to us a queer thing for a party, but didn't strike them that way at all. Then they played tag and other games for a while before scattering to their homes, each feeling better for being friendly with his neighbors.

"Parties are pleasant," said Fuzzy Wuzzy as he crawled into bed that night.

But Father Bear, who had been listening closely, said, "Hawk Feather is a good boy. He will be a great medicine man some day."

PLAY'S THE THING says Doris Blake

SOME one has said that the great American disease is spectatoritis. We take our recreations as spectators. In the name of recreation people sit in the spectators' gallery, where responsibility and initiative are entirely absent. Our popular plays, our fiction, our movies supply a hothouse brand of romance congenial to the typically dreamy and neurotic disposition.

Our most popular games and sports fill the country club verandas with dyspeptic onlookers in rocking chairs and crowd the bleachers with enthusiasts who satisfy themselves with exercising the upper lungs and waving the arms. Our churches even are accused of being places where a complacent audience gathers, instead of a congregation expressing in outward and visible form the reality of an inward spiritual experience.

"There is no doubt that most of our commercialized recreation fails to contribute to mental buoyancy and individual creativeness," says the author of a pamphlet issued by the Women's Health Foundation, who recognizes the relation of physical health to the mental and spiritual success of the individual. "True recreation calls upon all the resources of the personality, but uses them in such a way that they are quickened, rather than exhausted. Too much of that which is called recreation brings in indifference and ends in doing nothing, thinking nothing, caring nothing.

Happiness in Energy.

"As individuals we need to be participators, not onlookers in life. For happiness comes from the use of energy as surely as energy springs from the feeling of happiness."

There are not a few people who may be said to "enjoy ill health," and who attempt to bind their families to them by their infirmities. The ailment known as "nerves," responsible incidentally for a frightful amount of domestic discord and everyday friction in households, is far too common. There are people who consistently wear a halo of nerves, of overwork, of general delicacy, who eventually become a burden to themselves, their families and their friends.

For these an intelligent choice of recreation, or even a change of interest, is recommended by the Women's Health Foundation as a wonder worker.

A Tonic in Recreation.

Every one knows that low spirits and depression are not compatible with continued health. As a tonic for dismal moods, a calming influence for overexcited feelings, a regulator of the emotional temperature, habits of active recreation are devised. And this time of the year is the best season to put them into practice.

You must keep fresh your enjoyment of life in order to be a pleasure to friends and family. You need the element of change and the stimulus of surprise. Nerves and home crankiness are often nothing more than monotonous work performed day after day.

There must be enough change, enough unexpectedness in life, to keep alive the habit of looking forward. The expectation of adventure is strongest in youth, but in some degree it should accompany us throughout the ensuing years.

SUMMER MENUS.

SUMMER menus can well be brief. A thick chicken okra soup, perhaps with toast garnishments, can well constitute the main dish, as can a fish chowder or an old fashioned beef stew full of vegetables, including whole potatoes; or combinations of meat and cereal such as many of the casserole dishes are; or those yet more elegant ways of combining these ingredients, as with a border mold of rice filled with creamed sweetbreads, or some elegantly prepared creamed fish. And vegetarian dishes, too, like rice or macaroni in cheese sauce, or some mixture with rice with just a suggestion of meat, as in a savory rice, or the meat pies, pies in their numerous forms, in which the amount of meat is so small as to constitute little more than flavor—good servings of any of these really equal a meal.

If we were looking for arrangements for these simple menus with a "one-piece" dish, with a dessert of fruit, we can find them near and far. Meals thus built seem primitive, and primitive people who have lived on such have often been advanced in fortune, have brought "new blood" into families which have deteriorated while living in what is characterized as luxury—often with too much and too many kinds of food. That is going too far, but there is something in it. As to having brief menus in summer, there is reason of several sorts for them. A medical man states one thus:

"As the warm weather comes on, you expect your gas charges to go down and your coal bill to dwindle to the vanishing point. Not every one realizes that there ought to be a corresponding saving in his body fuel during the hot months—that sitting down to a dinner of roast pork, baked beans, and mince pie on a July day when the thermometer registers 99 degrees in the shade is just as foolish a proceeding as it would be to stoke up the furnace on that day with a roaring fire."

It is quite common for people to go to the other extreme and advocate a diet for summer that consists too largely of fruit and vegetables, for the body has to do its work just the same in summer as in winter, though it is saved the work of always warming up that small part of the country in its immediate vicinity. Therefore it may well be considered a mistake to cut out the energy foods too largely. Cereal and toast for breakfast may be as sane for summer as winter, while the beautiful fruits along with these may stimulate the appetite and digestive powers to make the fullest use of these energy bearing foods.

Hot Fruits.

Meals wholly cold, or largely iced, are certainly not good for some people. If no other part of the meal, say dinner, is hot, the first thing served may be, and this nowadays is often a fruit appetizer. We can follow the Norwegian fashion and have these hot fruit juices called by them a soup. The juice around cooked cherries, with or without the cherries, is deliciously appetizing.

Hot green apple sauce for luncheon is almost medicinal, or quite, in the comfort it may give. Hot peaches briefly cooked in sugar and butter—no water—are almost inspiring for breakfast. We have extra thirst in summer. A dish of hot apple sauce, though most people might not notice it, is as thirst quenching as lemonade.

Apple Sauce Combinations.

While hot apple sauce may be eaten alone, as one often eats a dish of berries or as one eats soup—consider it the equivalent of a soup—it is excellent with cream cheese as a dessert. It may be used for filling an omelet and of course it is always good with pork chops, or cold roast pork, which latter is a reasonable summer meat when it is made as dainty and palatable as it can be made.

Green Apple Sauce.

Unwilted and unripe apples make a sauce peculiarly superior to a mere apple mush. Do not peel, but wash, cut in quarters, core, and for quickest cooking cut in smaller slices. Just cover with boiling water, cover utensil while apple is cooking over a small amount of fire, when it should soon be fluffy. Add sugar to taste. Good hot or cold.

Melon.

There are some people who cannot eat iced cantaloupe without sneezing and cannot eat any great amount of watermelon without taking cold. The bulk of cold stuff in their stomach calls the blood from the surface of their bodies for an undue length of time, seemingly, and under such circumstances they take cold even in warm weather. But these same people can eat the juice of a watermelon frozen to a mush. This is recommended, because it requires less sugar than do acid fruit juices so frozen, and much sugar in the diet makes people hot, although the sort of fire it makes is of the kindling wood order, yet its calories are many and there are other objections to great amounts of it in the summer diet.

Two cups of watermelon juice to one-half cup of rather dense sugar sirup and the juice of one orange make a good preparation. If this should seem a bit insipid add a few drops of lemon juice. Use as a cold drink or freeze to mush.

Cream of Corn Soup.

Allow one-half cup of corn cut from the cob, heated up in a little milk, for each cup of soup made. Allow also, for each cup of soup, as much salt pork cut in dice as will yield one tablespoon of fat when sautéed or fried out. Some onion may be gently sweated in this fat, if its seasoning is liked or desired. Allow one tablespoon of flour for each tablespoon of fat and one cup of milk. Stir and cook until thick, then add hot corn and seasonings, and cook until well blended.

Serve with or without straining. A bit of paprika may be shaken over it, but whipped cream, while pretty enough as a garnish, will cool a small serving of it undesirably. It is not half as palatable when tepid as when just agreeably hot. Crisp rolls or even crackers and something like raspberries and cream may be used to make up a meal with this. A salad is another excellent supplement, but cucumber plain, without even salt, can be recommended, or plain tomatoes.

Cream of Carrot Soup.

For an alternate, with corn soup in summer service, try cream of carrot. It requires a little greater niceness of cooking than does the corn soup, but it is so good with plain bread and butter that any woman can profit by having it in her repertoire.

Allow one-third to half a cup of carrot to each person to be served. Allow for each cup of carrot one small onion, about a level tablespoon of butter, one-half teaspoon of salt, and a teaspoon or a little more of sugar. When these are cooked, mash and allow for each cup of the puree two cups of hot milk. To prepare the carrots parboil them, rub off skins and slice. Cook with the onion and seasonings, with water to cover, over a gentle fire and in a closely covered kettle. The mashed vegetables make this soup thick enough, but to make a smoother soup cook one tablespoon of flour per cup with the milk before cooking the whole to a perfect blend.

Polly loves animals and has several pets, but she does not care at all for dolls.

When I asked why she didn't like to play with them she answered: "I like to play with something that has a know." C. C. O.

Jimmy called on one of the neighbors often.

One day his mother asked him what they talked about, inasmuch as he called so often.

He hesitated a little, and then said, "O, we mostly eats." J. W.

We had read of the terrible conditions of the city tenements in hot weather, and decided to give two children a month's outing on our farm.

Donna and Petey were sent to us with a letter saying that their home consisted of one dark room situated only a few feet from the elevated car tracks.

Tucking them in bed their first night with us, I was thankful that we could give them a quiet night's rest, unbroken by the sound of trains rumbling past.

Looking in on them about midnight, I discovered, much to my alarm, that their bed was empty, and finally found them on the front porch locked in each other's arms to keep warm.

"Why, Donna and Petey," I said. "Why aren't you in bed? I'm afraid you'll catch cold out here."

"Please, lady," cried Petey. Our bed was awful nice, but the birds made so much noise we couldn't sleep."

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a particular love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Sorry He Spoke.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am deeply in love with a girl working for the same firm as myself. Until recently we had been getting along fine, but one day, due to some minor reasons, I became angry and spoke some nasty and sarcastic words, for which I am much ashamed of myself. Since that occurred I have tried to apologize twice, but to no avail. I am getting to love this girl more and more every day, so if you could but help me regain her love and friendship you will greatly oblige HILLY."

Hilly, if words fail you, it would be a good idea to sit down and write a letter of apology, explaining how sorry you are that you should have caused the break in a friendship you valued so highly, and asking the young woman if she won't be good enough to give you a chance to prove to her that you really mean what you say. After that, about all you can do is to hope for the best.

Forgets Her Ring.

"Dear Miss Blake: Last year my brother-in-law became engaged to a nice girl. He gave her a beautiful diamond engagement ring. Several times of late when he has met her unexpectedly she was not wearing her ring. He asked her why, and she replied that she had forgotten to put it on. Sometimes she says she was afraid to wear it to business—that she might lose it. It seems when she meets him by appointment she always wears the ring! What do you think of this, and what ought my brother-in-law do?

"PEGGY."

It is quite probable that the girl did forget to put the ring on before leaving her home, and I do not think this should cause your brother-in-law any concern unless he has reason to feel she done so purposely. In that event he should make an issue of the question and have it settled one way or another.

Buy in July—the Bargain Month

July is the best month of the year to buy furniture. Prices are always lower than at any other time because merchants find it necessary to offer special inducements to their customers to stimulate business and offset the slowing up of sales due to the absence of so many who are out of the city for the summer months. Wise buyers take advantage of these conditions and make their purchases even in advance of their needs in order not to miss the reduced price quotations. Purchases held for future delivery are stored free of charge.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Last week we recounted the arrival in New York of a certain young man, Mr. Brown, who came to the big city to visit his cousin, Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith is a man who dresses smartly and correctly to the last detail. His young cousin, not so skilled in the great sartorial art, is impressed by the wardrobe of his cousin and the well dressed men on the streets of New York, and makes up his mind to leave the city a better dressed man than the Mr. Brown who arrived.

This introduction being in the way of a synopsis to preceding installments, we might add that Mr. Smith has been lecturing our young friend Mr. Brown on the whys and wherefores of the well dressed men they pass on the streets, and by explaining why they are well or badly dressed has been aiding the younger man to grasp the secrets of a successful dresser.

This week we have to relate a trip Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown made to one of the country clubs in the New York vicinity. Mr. Brown, whom we'll call Jim, since that's his name and what his cousin Mr. Smith calls him, is a great golf bug, and wanted to show his cousin that a Long Island course wouldn't scare him out of a neat little score. But he thought that if he had a good set of clubs that was all he need worry about.

"No, sir," said Mr. Smith, "that pair of old pants and that dirty sweater may be all right in the backwoods where you learned to fish golf balls out of the high grass, but you've got to have a decent golf outfit when you play with me at this golf club. Why, the caddy would blush to go around with you. Come on, we'll take a trot over to that shop on Madison avenue and get you some golf clothes that will turn the club Beau Brummels green with envy."

The outfit selected by Mr. Smith for his young cousin quite came up to his hopes and expectations. They decided upon a pair of natural linen knickers, for the weather promised to be hot, a Fair Isle slipover sweater, of giddy coloring that pleased exceedingly the young man, who had been brought up to believe that men's clothes should be seen but not heard, a pair of tan and blue golf hose that harmonized with the sweater, a blue and yellow foulard tie, a white oxford shirt, and a fancy silk belt.

This outfit was to be carried in a bag, while Jim wore out there a light gray English suit his cousin had suggested he buy previously. Mr. Smith took along for his golf game linen knickers checked with black, coat sweater of black and white fancy front, black and white checked tie, and white hose. "I'm dressing more or less quietly," he explained, just so the club officials won't be blinded by our combined splendor, and rule us off the course."

When they arrived at the club, Jim was so busy getting into his new golf clothes that he forgot about his golf, and when he got on the course he spent just as much time noticing what the other men wore as he did planning his strokes and complaining about the lie of his ball.

At the eighteenth green he did not know what his total score was, but he could tell you that his impression was that the colored shirts were just as popular as plain white with the golfers, that the checked cheviot knickers worn with same color but unchecked coat were well liked, that slipover and coat sweaters come in for a good share of attention, and that bright colored golf hose are not against the law.

When they had had their shower, and were dressed again for town, Mr. Smith said they'd drop around front, and Jim could see what the well dressed golfer wears when his game is over, and he settles down to the equally fascinating game of being pleasant to the ladies.

"And you won't see any one going without neckties or coats or sweater, as you did on the golf course," he said emphatically. "The careful man keeps clean shirts and an array of neckties in his locker, and can always look neat after a game. You needn't worry about our being in city clothes. We are obviously on our way back to town, while the men you will see in sport clothes are living around here, or spending the evening, or haven't dressed for town yet."

On the club veranda, and nearby, Jim found plenty of food for sartorial thought. "There seems to be more men wearing long trousers here than knickers," he observed to his companion, as they strolled about, stopping here and there to have a chat with fellow club members of Mr. Smith. "And there's a chap with gray flannel trousers. I thought white were the only proper ones."

"White or gray flannel trousers," answered his companion, "are extremely popular worn with any color jacket as a sport costume where actual combat with a golf ball is not to be indulged in. You'll find more knickers on the links, but the flannel trousers are certainly holding first place off the field of battle. Yes, the gray flannels, with or without colored stripes, are good style this year, as a daytime idea. In the evening, where the summer formal note is to be struck, the whites are omnipotent."

"That looks like a neat effect," said Jim, intimating a man standing near them. "Isn't that what you call a good color combination? The man is wearing the gray flannel trousers which have a light blue stripe, with a rather light gray coat, a blue and white striped shirt like the one we bought for me the other day, and a plain colored bright blue tie. He's wearing a striped silk belt, too."

"Yes, that is a good scheme," answered Mr. Smith, "and here's a point it suggests to me to put down in your notebook. The coat is just dark enough a gray to give contrast to the gray of the trousers. If it had been much lighter, the effect would not have been so good, for there would have been no contrast, and yet there would have been exact matching of coat and trousers. You must either have a perfect match or an obvious contrast."

"There goes another good sport out fit," he went on, calling Jim's attention to a youth who walked by, quite unconscious that he was the object of a fashion lesson. "He wears white flannel trousers striped in brown, a double breasted dark brown jacket, blue and white striped shirt with self collar, pinned, blue and yellow foulard tie, and straw hat with brown and tan striped hatband."

"And there is another outfit that has knickers instead of the long trousers. The knickers are white flannel with a brown and tan overcheck, the jacket a light shade of brown, the hose camel's hair color, brown and white shoes, and the belt and tie of red and dark blue stripes. Come on, let's go home."

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Theaters Movies
Music Radio

JULY 20, 1924.

It's One of Those Twin Complications

"THE WHITE SHADOW"

Produced by Selznick. Directed by Graham Cutts. Presented at the Monroe theater.

THE CAST.

Nancy Brent, Georgina Brent.....Betty Compson
Robin Field.....Clive Brooke
Mr. Brent.....A. B. Imeson
Mrs. Brent.....Daisy Campbell
Henry Victor.....Louis Chadwick

By Maurine Watkins.

IF WE ever are a twin, we're going to wear a card telling the world so and avoid all those little complications that come from having THE man fall in love with the OTHER one thinking it is—we. (Aren't we grammatical, though!

For instance, Betty Compson. And you're going to have to be most awfully fond of that girl to like "The White Shadow," for it keeps her before you eleven-tenths of the time as twins.

BETTY COMPSON in the dual rôle of "The White Shadow."

A bob and a laugh for Nancy, the naughty and wilful; long curls and a smile for Georgina, the soulful and good. Just a hair's length difference between them, but it gives you a chance to compare the effect of a bob and long hair, and decide whether you'll——

But love is blind, so Clive Brooke, the adorer, doesn't notice this hirsutal difference and falls in love with Nancy, then Georgina, then back to Nancy again, thinking all the time they're one and the same. (That's the kind of play it is!)

The first transfer of affection comes when Nancy, tired of life in her beau-u-tiful English home, runs off to Paris and punctures boredom by smoking and drinking and gambling with artists in the Latin quarter. (Nancy is a naughty girl!)

The second, after Georgina finds her erring sister and agreeably dies from some lovely, long, slow, certain malady undiagnosed.

And "the white shadow" is the influence her soul has after death. It marches right across the room—you see it yourself—and enters Nancy's body and makes her settle down to a happy-ever-after with Robin.

Cast Equal to the Story.

There's a lost father who wanders around like Diogenes and is "found" at the right moment, and a cruel, cruel will—but we spare you these details.

Miss Compson, minus the loving technique of James Cruze's directing, is merely a "sweet" girl who emotes at the right time. Clive Brooke, who hails from England, we understand, pleased both ladies supremely well, and who are we to complain?

The rest of the cast is good enough for the story. The scenery offers pleasant relief. (N. B.—It bears the label "Devonshire," "the Thames," and "the Alps," but to make no guarantees.)

When it's all over you wonder why they did it.

Belasco-Knobloch-Starr falled with that "one"-soul-between-them stuff a few seasons ago—but they WILL rush in!

LAURETTE IN THE ROLE OF PAINLESS HOSTESS

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Laurette Taylor and Hartley Manners gave a party at their bungalow adjoining the Beverly Hills hotel. The party began in the afternoon with swimming up at the Fairbanks' home and tennis at the hotel, and ended late. Laurette Taylor is one of those perfectly painless hostesses. She provides entertainment, but you don't feel that it is compulsory. So this party was easy and informal and charming. There was a buffet supped sehver partially by the brilliant Laurette herself when the waiters lagged, and she didn't mind telling you, either, that you had to take a dish so long as she had brought it in to you with her own fair hands. There was a Hawaiian orchestra and dancing.

Then there was the picture! No, nothing serious. Just a couple of reels showing the guests who frequent Miss Taylor's popular parties at tennis, swimming, dancing, and flirting.

The sub-titles were Miss Taylor's, and prove that that lady could go into the sub-title writing business any time she wants to. However, there is just one drawback—she is too modest for the business, one sub-title reading "Sub-titles by—but why mention her?" But she gave due credit elsewhere for another sub-title showing the swimming pool, which read "Overhead—by Doug and Mary." And she didn't stop there, either. "Climate—by California." "Scenery—by God." King Vidor called out from the audience perhaps enviously: "The only sex appeal in this picture is furnished by Lionel Belmore."

Laurette Taylor is going to do another film this year, whether in New York or Hollywood has not been decided.

Think of This! Think of This!

Ellnor Glyn was lecturing Thelma Morgan Converse for smoking when I entered, and Thelma was taking it just too sweetly, but there was a quizzical light in her eyes, as who should say, "Why, Mrs. Glyn, how can the author of books like 'Three Weeks'"—and all the rest of it.

"How will you look when you are 80?" demanded Mrs. Glyn.

"Well, maybe I won't live that long," retorted Thelma sweetly, "and if I do I don't expect to look like much of anything, so you see I shan't be disappointed!"

Mrs. Converse, who is, you remember, Reggy Vanderbilt's sister-in-law, was quite the belle of the ball next to the hostess, and looked lovely in one of those gaily embroidered white Spanish shawl dresses. She is proving popular in Hollywood with her radiant beauty and nice unspoiled ways.

She denies, by the way, that she is engaged to Charlie Chaplin, but says the comedian is quite the most wonderful person she has ever met, which means something, considering all the persons she has met in her travels.

Mme. Nazimova was present, looking kittenish but really charming in a short bob as to hair, and wearing a dazzlingly red dress. She paid no attention whatever to the women, but devoted herself to the men, joining groups of them at the piano, where Jack Gilbert was playing and singing, making us rather glad he was in the silent drama. She danced all evening after the Hawaiians appeared on the scene.

Max Constant and Robert Gordon danced every dance, too; and Constant tells me his wife, Andree Lafayette, who played Trilby, you remember, and who has been fil in Europe, will return to this country in a month or two. His face shone as he told the news. You know he and Andree were married just before coming to America to play in "Trilby," and she had to leave at once after that to appear in a picture made abroad; so they really had little time together.

Elinor Glyn scolded another little girl in the party for making up in public, saying men liked to see a girl made up, but didn't like to see her do it. Jack Gilbert spoke up

French Novelty to Be Sung at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

IN making the first American presentation of "La Legende du Point d'Argentan" next Wednesday night, Mr. Eckstein will turn a new leaf in the history of Ravinia. For while this favored garden of music has pursued the enviable policy of giving good performances of popular operas, even to the point of picking up works that have not done so well elsewhere and making them popular there—"L'Amico Fritz," for one—it has never gone in heavily for novelties.

THALIA SABANIEVA, who will appear in a new French opera at Ravinia on Wednesday.

"La Legende du Point d'Argentan," however, is one, so completely a novelty that one finds difficulty in predicting much about it other than by inference and the fact that they like it more than a little in Europe. Its score is by Felix Fourdrain, a French composer whose works occupy a high position in American regard, since he wrote several of the most stirring songs that are in the habit of appearing on the programs of class A recital singers. They have melody and sparkle and depth, and if he can inject such qualities into individual songs, one is entitled to look forward with hope and cheer to what he can do with an opera score.

Certainly the cast is one to make hope flame brighter, and more certainly last season told those of us who go to Ravinia that what will follow is sure to be a success. For "La Legende" will be sung by Ina Bourskaya, Thalia Sabanieva, Léon Rothier, and Louis D'Angelo, and after the intermission will come "La Navarraise," with a cast that contains Miss Bourskaya, Armand Tokatyan, Mr. Rothier, Mr. D'Angelo, and several others. Louis Hasselmans will officiate at the baton for both works. Wherefore you can set aside next Wednesday night for a Ravinia visit with considerable faith in the wisdom of the procedure.

Fiora Has an Unexpected View.

Passing rapidly from the auditory to the visual aspects of Ravinia performances, there is some unexpected and gratifying testimony from none less than Lucrezia Bori. She claims that after some sixteen seasons of operatic singing she got one of the thrills of her career this summer at Ravinia. It was during the scene in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" where she stands upon the wall and waves her scarf to the departing Manfredo and his band of soldiers on horseback.

"Accustomed as I am to things as they exist back stage," says Miss Bori, "this particular scene has never failed to strike me as more or less amusing. Here I am, waving my scarf as a vast army slowly disappears into distance. But what do I ordinarily see? A group of perspiring stage hands, a few chairs, some scenery leaning against a brick wall. Yet I must blind myself to all of this and try as best I can to imagine this scene as it is supposed to be, that I may fully enter into the acting and the singing of it.

"How different it is at Ravinia, for as I stood there on the battlement I could look out beyond the limitations of the back stage region and I could see the waving trees and the blue sky and the moon and the stars. I was, in very truth, looking out at nature, and it was no trouble to visualize an army. I could see the light glinting on their armor; I could see their spear points glisten; could hear the hoof beats of their horses. It was one of the greatest inspirations I have

SIMPLIFIED LIVING ON A GRAND SCALE

By Burns Mantle.

LAKE PLACID CLUB, New York.—[Special Correspondence.]—Vacations are mostly comedy. But occasionally tragedy creeps in. We were stuck in soft dirt after a rainstorm on the side of the steepest hill this side of Everest the other day, with spinning wheels no vocabulary could control. Before us black clouds and another hill. Behind us the life partner wondering why we didn't do something about it. There was nothing comic about that.

But an hour later we were over the hill and in the office lounge of a friendly clubhouse—one of those rooms that seem to reach out and embrace you, as Lewis Beach has written of his setting for "The Goose Hangs High."

The view from the lounge windows was across Mirror lake, at the moment reflecting the black, floating shadows of a passing storm. Beyond the lake the purpled Adirondacks. To the right of us groups of laughing club members, guests, etc., browned and wholesome looking, and friendly.

How restful, we thought, is the picture. How wonderful is vacation time. And then we turned back to the other view. It was the cashier's window. Not so good, looking in.

It is a semi-private club. For thirty years it has been growing and expanding here in the heart of the Lake Placid country, and probably to nine-tenths of the people of the world it means no more than the place to which the American rich come for their winter sports.

It is the home of simplified living on a grand scale. Of simplified comforts perfectly appointed. Of the simple life made pleasantly obligatory. Simplified spelling is its creator's abiding passion and the morning the little waitress dropped his bold eggs in my nabor's plate I concluded that simplified service might also be a feature. Afterward I was told that all the waitresses are college girls, and therefore neither so noisy nor so flat footed as the professionals.

Jobs for College Boys and Girls.

Every year, they tell me, there are applications from thousands of college girls and boys from all parts of the country, eager to earn their vacations here by doing anything there is to do. With 1,500 club members and guests here in July and 2,500 in August and September, there are quite a number of jobs open. But it appears the founder is quite as fussy about his help as he is about his guests. They all have to be vouched for.

Then, to play fair, he reserves for them a section of the theater—a splendid auditorium seating, I should say, 1,200—that they may attend the symphony concerts, lectures, and other entertainments free during the season. Once a week he turns one of the ballrooms and the club orchestra over to them and they have a staf dans. Being young and picturesquely healthy, and dancing much better than the guests, their parties are much prettier than those semi-formal affairs I have seen.

Being particularly interested in aspiring and promising youth, the founder and his board have also made it possible for several of these young folk to complete college courses they otherwise would have missed. A lad now in his first year at one of the big eastern colleges was a bell boy here a year ago.

We moved into rooms overlooking the lawn and the lake. An automatic elevator might have carried us up to them if it had been working. But it was new, too, and, like the rest of us, it still balked at the strange spelling

"Pres butn to call lift . . . Close both door and gate tyt . . . If you pres wrong butn pres red butn to stop and then pres tyt butn . . ."

The founder need have little fear the prohibition law will not be properly observed in this club. One reading of that sign would send any cheating alcoholic straight to the priest—or the lake.

We were gently awakened next morning by a gentleman

Odds and Ends of the Stage in July

By Frederick Donaghey.

ALTHOUGH "Morphia" moves me to wonder as to what it was in the German, it doesn't move me to the extent of finding out. An imported work of art, the new play isn't notably better drama than "The Amber Fluid," with which the season started off; and I doubt if what is shown in the Adelphi represents an improvement by R. Duncan McNab, whoever he may be, of the original by Ludwig Herzer, whoever he may be. Bad plays are written and staged in Germany, as everywhere else; but a German playwright couldn't get away at home with anything so crude and naïve as "Morphia" in this adaptation. . . .

BERNARD GORCEY He's active and not quiet in "Wildflower."

My guess is that Mr. McNab (or a cautious director) destroyed structure and form in a hurried effort to eradicate dirt; for what is left suggests an expedient stage-stunt of first-page stuff in the post-Armistice period. And what is left is not fragrant, is not dramatic, is ham theater, and is funny only by inadvertence. . . . If I'm wrong in my guess, it doesn't matter, and I can easily make another: thus, that the piece was framed up for the specialties of a performer who might feel pride if billed as the Lowell Sherman of Berlin or Hamburg or Düsseldorf.

If called upon to cast "Morphia," I would give Mr. Sherman's rôle of the morfiend to Leon Errol: not that I regard him as funnier in such a part, but because he is the more gifted acrobat. Yet, no other available player who comes to mind could give to the performance such a quality of stately, self-assured pageantry as Mr. Sherman gives. When he has his way on the stage, he is a procession, taking all the time he desires to make a given point; and I always think of him in terms of plumes, floats, and a cheering peasantry lining the roadsides. . . .

Let the Actors Tell You.

I've known many actors, and have known none who would not cut his pay by half to obtain a part like that in "Morphia." Any of them, when on the level, will tell you that he is at his best in playing a hophead, a drunk, a nut, or a down-and-out—always, of course, with what they term heart-interest. What the actors really mean is that, in parts of the kind, the public is at its best; i. e., is most amenable. The fact is that the actors are right about this. . . .

There was Tully Marshall, to whom nobody paid heed as he drilled his way through the years in rôle upon rôle until put into that of the drug-crazed youth in "The City," whereupon the multitude was ready to fight in maintenance of the belief that he was the greatest of all possible actors,—and, when "The City" was laid aside, he quickly faded back into the average. I mention him rather than any one of a score of others because he comes easily into memory as I write of Mr. Sherman.

Doctor Hall, of the Journal and materia-medica, turned in his seat at "Morphia" to explain that Mr. Sherman's frenzies were symptomatic of cocaine, and not of morphine. Another physician assured me that they reflected the deliriums induced by laudanum-drinking. A third, that the actor's pathologic étude was acute in its fidelity to poisoning by creosoted methyl. I thanked them, of course, and was too courte-

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD..... XXXI.—ETHER AND WAVES; LIGHT, VISIBLE AND INVISIBLE

THE whole material universe is supposed to be embedded in a vast medium called the ether. It is true that the notion of the ether has been abandoned by some modern physicists, but, whether or not it is ultimately dispensed with, the conception of the ether has entered so deeply into the scientific mind that the science of physics cannot be understood unless we know something about the properties attributed to the ether. The ether was invented to explain the phenomena of light, and to account for the flow of energy across empty space. Light takes time to travel. We do not see the sun rise until eight minutes after it has risen. It has taken that eight minutes for the light from the sun to travel that 93,000,000 miles odd which separates it from our earth. Besides the fact that light takes time to travel, it can be shown that light travels in the form of waves. We know that sound travels in waves; sound consists of waves in the air, or water or wood or whatever medium we hear it through. If an electric bell be put in a glass jar and the air be pumped out of the jar, the sound of the bell becomes feebler and feebler until, when enough air has been taken out, we do not hear the bell at all. Sound cannot travel in a vacuum. We continue to see the bell, however, so that evidently light can travel in a vacuum. The invisible medium through which the waves of light travel is the ether, and this ether permeates all space and all matter. Between us and the stars stretch vast regions empty of all matter. But we see the stars; their light reaches us, even though it may take centuries to do so. We conceive, then, that it is the universal ether which conveys that light. All the energy which has reached the earth from the sun and which, stored for ages in our coal fields, is now used to propel our trains and steamships, to heat and light our cities, to perform all the multifarious tasks of modern life, was conveyed by the ether. Without that universal carrier of energy we should have nothing but a stagnant, lifeless world.

We have said that light consists of waves. The ether may be considered as resembling, in some respects, a jelly. It can transmit vibrations. The waves of light are really excessively small ripples, measuring from crest to crest. The distance from crest to crest of the ripples in a pond is sometimes no more than an inch or two. This distance is enormously great compared to the longest of the wave lengths that constitute light. We say the longest, for the waves of light differ in length; the color depends upon the length of the light. Red light has the longest waves and violet the shortest. The longest waves, the waves of deep red light, are seven two hundred and fifty thousandths of an inch in length (7-250,000 inch). This is nearly twice the length of deep violet light waves, which are 1-67,000 inch. But light waves, the waves that affect the eye, are not the only waves carried by the ether. Waves too short to affect the eye can affect the photographic plate, and we can discover in this way the existence of waves only half the length of the deep violet waves. Still shorter waves can be discovered, until we come to those excessively minute rays, the X-rays.

But we can extend our investigations in the other direction; we find that the ether carries many waves longer than light waves. Special photographic emulsions can reveal the existence of waves five times longer than violet light waves. Extending below the limits of visibility are waves we detect as heat waves. Radiant heat, like the heat from a fire, is also a form of wave motion in the ether, but the waves our senses recognise as heat are longer than light waves. There are longer waves still, but our senses do not recognize them. But we can detect them by our instruments. These are the waves used in wireless telegraphy, and their length may be, in some cases, measured in miles. These waves are the so-called electro-magnetic waves. Light, radiant heat, and electro-magnetic waves are all of the same nature; they differ only as regards their wave lengths.

Light—Visible and Invisible

IF light, then, consists of waves transmitted through the ether, what gives rise to the waves? Whatever sets up such wonderfully rapid series of waves must be something with an enormous vibration. We come back to the electron: all atoms of matter, as we have seen, are made up of electrons revolving in a regular orbit round a nucleus. These electrons may be affected by outside influences, they may be agitated and their speed or vibration increased.

The particles even of a piece of cold iron are in a state of vibration. No nerves of ours are able to feel and register the waves they emit, but your cold poker is really radiating, or sending out a series of wave movements, on every side. After what we saw about the nature of matter, this will surprise none. Put your poker in the fire for a time. The particles of the glowing coal, which are violently agitated, communicate some of their energy to the particles of iron in the poker. They move to and fro more rapidly, and the waves which they create are now able to affect your nerves and cause a sensation of heat. Put the poker again in the fire, until its temperature rises to 500 degrees Centigrade. It begins to glow with a dull red. Its particles are now moving violently, and the waves they send out are so short and rapid that they can be picked up by the eye—we have visible light. They would still not affect a photographic plate. Heat the iron further, and the crowds of electrons now send out waves of various lengths which blend into white light. What is happening is the agitated electrons flying round in their orbits at a speed of trillions of times a second. Make the iron "blue hot," and it pours out, in addition to light, the invisible waves which alter the film on the photographic plate. And beyond these there is a long range of still shorter waves, culminating in the X-rays, which will pass between the atoms of flesh or stone.

Nearly two hundred and fifty years ago it was proved that light traveled at least 600,000 times faster than sound. Jupiter, as we saw, has moons, which circle round it. They pass behind the body of the planet, and reappear at the other side. But it was noticed that, when Jupiter is at its greatest distance from us, the reappearance of the moon from behind it is 16 minutes and 36 seconds later than when the planet is nearest to us. Plainly this was because light took so long to cover the additional distance. The distance was then imperfectly known, and the speed of light was underrated. We now know the distance, and we easily get the velocity of light.

LIGHT WAVES.—Light consists of waves transmitted through the ether. Waves of light differ in length. The color of the light depends on the wave length. Deep red waves (the longest) are 7-250,000 inch, and deep violet waves 1-67,000 inch. The diagram shows two wave motions of different wave lengths. From crest to crest, or from trough to trough, is the length of the wave.

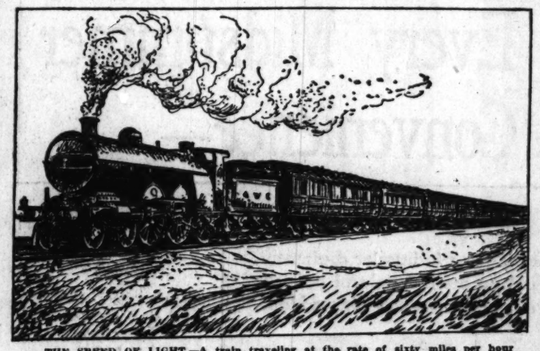
No doubt it seems far more wonderful to discover this within the walls of a laboratory, but it was done as long ago as 1850. A cogged wheel is so mounted that a ray of light passes between two of the teeth and is reflected back from a mirror. Now, slight as is the fraction of a second which light



THE SPEED OF LIGHT.—A train traveling at the rate of sixty miles per hour would take rather more than seventeen and a quarter days to go round the earth at the equator, i. e., a distance of 25,000 miles. Light, which travels at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, would take between one-seventh and one-eighth of a second to go the same distance.

takes to travel that distance, it is possible to give such speed to the wheel that the next tooth catches the ray of light on its return and cuts it off. The speed is increased still further until the ray of light returns to the eye of the observer through the notch next to the one by which it had passed to, the mirror! The speed of the wheel was known, and it was thus possible again to gather the velocity of light. If the shortest waves are 1-67,000 of an inch in length, and light travels at 186,000 miles a second, any person can work out that about 800 trillion waves enter the eye in a second when we see "violet."

Sorting Out Light Waves

THE waves sent out on every side by the energetic electrons become faintly visible to us when they reach about 1-35,000 of an inch. As they become shorter and more rapid, as the electrons increase their speed, we get, in succession, the colors red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. Each distinct sensation of color means a wave of different length. When they are all mingled together, as in the light of the sun, we get white light. When this white light passes through glass, the speed of the waves is lessened; and, if the ray of light falls obliquely on a triangular piece of glass, the waves of different lengths part company as they travel through it, and the light is spread out in a band of rainbow color. The waves are sorted out according to their lengths in the "obstacle race" through the glass. Any one may see this for himself by holding up a wedge shaped piece of crystal between the sunlight and the eye; the prism separates the sunlight into its constituent colors, and these various colors will be seen quite readily. Or the thing may be realized in another way. If the seven colors are painted on a wheel in the proportion shown in the illustration, and the wheel rapidly revolved on a pivot, the wheel will appear a dull white, the several colors will not be seen. But omit one of the colors, then the wheel, when revolved, will not appear white, but will give the impression of one color, corresponding to what the union of six colors gives. Another experiment will show that some bodies held up between the eye and a white light will not permit all the rays to pass through, but will intercept some; a body that intercepts all the seven rays except red will give the impression of red, or if all the rays except violet, then violet will be the color seen.

Prof. Soddy has given an interesting picture of what might happen when the sun's light and heat is no longer what it is. The human eye "has adapted itself through the ages to the peculiarities of the sun's light, so as to make the most of that wave length of which there is most. . . . Let us indulge for a moment in these gloomy prognostications, as to the consequences to this earth of the cooling of the sun with the lapse of ages, which used to be in vogue, but which radioactivity has so rudely shaken. Picture the fate of the world when the sun has become a dull red hot ball, or even when it has cooled so far that it would no longer emit light to us. That does not all mean that the world would be in inky darkness, and that the sun would not emit light to the people then inhabiting this world, if any had survived and could keep themselves from freezing. To such, if the eye continued to adapt itself to the changing conditions, our blues and violets would be ultra-violet and invisible, but our dark heat would be light and hot bodies would be luminous to them which would be dark to us."

What the "Blue Sky" Means

WE saw in a previous chapter how the spectroscope splits up light waves into their colors. But nature is constantly splitting the light into its different lengthed waves, its colors. The rainbow, where dense moisture in the air acts as a spectroscope, is the most familiar example. A piece of mother of pearl, or even a film of oil on the street or on water, has the same effect, owing to the fine inequalities in its surface. The atmosphere all day long is sorting out the waves. The blue "sky" overhead means that the fine particles in the upper atmosphere catch the shorter waves, the blue waves, and scatter them. We can make a tubeful of blue sky in the laboratory at any time. The beautiful pink flush on the Alps at sunrise, the red glory that lingers in the west at sunset, mean that, as the sun's rays must struggle through denser masses of air when it is low on the horizon, the long red waves are sifted out from the other shafts.

ROTATING DISC OF SIR ISAAC NEWTON FOR MIXING COLORS.—The spectroscope sorts out the above seven colors from sunlight (which is compounded of these seven colors). If painted in proper proportions on a wheel, as shown in the colored illustration, and the wheel turned rapidly on a pivot through its center, only a dull white will be perceived. If one color is omitted, the result will be one color—the result of the union of the remaining six.

Then there is the varied face of nature which, by absorbing some waves and reflecting others, weaves its own beautiful robe of color. Here and there is a black patch, which absorbs all the light. White surfaces reflect the whole of it. What is reflected depends on the period of vibration of the electrons in the particular kind of matter. Generally, as the electrons receive the flood of trillions of waves, they absorb either the long or the medium or the short, and they give us the wonderful color scheme of nature. In some cases the electrons continue to radiate long after the sunlight has ceased to fall upon them. We get from them "black" or invisible light, and we can take photographs by it. Other bodies, like glass, vibrate in unison with the period of the light waves and let them stream through.

Light Without Heat

THERE are substances—"phosphorescent" things we call them—which give out a mysterious cold light of their own. It is one of the problems of science, and one of profound practical interest. If we could produce light without heat our gas bill would shrink amazingly. So much energy is wasted in the production of heat waves and ultra-violet waves which we do not want, that 90 per cent or more of the power used in illumination is wasted. Would that the glow worm, or even the dead herring, would yield us its secret! Phosphorus is the one thing we know as yet that suits the purpose, and—it smells! Indeed, our artificial light is not only extravagant in cost but often poor in color. The unwary person often buys a garment by artificial light, and is disgusted next morning to find in it a color which is not wanted. The color disclosed by the sun was not in the waves of the artificial light.

Beyond the waves of violet light are the still shorter and more rapid waves—the "ultra-violet" waves—which are precious to the photographer. As every amateur knows, his plate may safely be exposed to light that comes through a red or an orange screen. Such a screen means "no thoroughfare" for the blue and "beyond-blue" waves, and it is these which arrange the little grains of silver on the plate. It is the same waves which supply the energy to the little green grains of matter (chlorophyll) in the plant, preparing our food and timber for us, as will be seen later. The tree struggles upward and spreads out its leaves fanwise to the blue sky to receive them. In our coal measures, the mighty dead forests of long ago, are vast stores of sunlight which we are prodigally using up.

The X-rays are the extreme end, the highest octave, of the series of waves. Their power of penetration implies that they are excessively minute, but even these have not held their secret from the modern physicist. From a series of beautiful experiments, in which they were made to pass amongst the atoms of a crystal, we learned their length. It is about the ten-millionth of a millimeter, and a millimeter is about the 1-25 of an inch!

One of the most recent discoveries, made during a recent eclipse of the sun, is that light is subject to gravitation. A ray of light from a star is bent out of its straight path when it passes near the mass of the sun. Prof. Eddington tells us that we have as much right to speak of a pound of light as of a pound of sugar. Prof. Eddington even calculates that the earth receives 160 tons of light from the sun every year!

sus to correct them; but I am too keen an observer not to have discerned the fact, which was that Mr. Sherman had used for copy a victim of the roast-beef sandwiches served at the Hawthorne races.

Etcætera.

There is much merit in the suggestion that the best interests of the theater would be served and the drama, as an art, kept from retrogression if the Cicero cops were persuaded to join the Actors' Equity, and thus frustrate the Misses Duncan in their well-meant, human, and profitable mission of vengeance.

THIS-AND-THAT

Here, according to present plans, is the schedule of new things in the Chicago theaters so far as the managers let go of the information:

August 16—"Dixie to Broadway," Great Northern.

August 17—"Tarnish," the Playhouse; "Wages for Wives," Cort; Vogues and Frolics, Apollo.

August 24—"Meet the Wife!" Cohan's Grand; "The Shame-Woman," Princess.

August 31—"Blossom-Time," the Auditorium.

September 1—"Rain," Harris; "Plain Jane," Selwyn.

As yet, nothing definite is given out as to where "Seventh Heaven" is to be housed: it is mentioned alternately for the Blackstone and the Adelphi.

The short stories by the late George Randolph Chester and his wife called "On the Lot and Off" are the basis of "Izzy," one of three plays announced for this season by George Broadhurst and his collaborator, Mrs. Lillian Trimble Bradley. . . . Chester's fiction in the reading seems to beseech dramatization, but has baffled all who have undertaken it save in the case of George M. Cohan's profitable adventure with "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

Two of last season's Chicago-first plays are soon to be shown in New York—"Kelly's Vacation," a failure here, and "The Best People," a hit—and a third, "Grounds for Divorce," will follow. . . . One of the experiments with "The Best People" before it was picked up, dusted off, and brought into the Illinois last Autumn to fill a hole in the bookings was a San-Francisco try-out by Henry Miller, Miss Ruth Chatterton, Miss Blanche Bates, and others under the title of "Goodness Knows!"

"His Imported Wife" is a good title, if it fit the play: it is on a comedy tried out last week in an Eastern town. . . . Crane Wilbur, whose "The Monster" is in the list of bad mystery-plays performed so far in Chicago, wrote it.

Frank Craven, who acted last week in "The Fall-Guy" in Milwaukee, is to act there next week in one called "Fool's Hill," of his own writing. . . . He has sent for Robert McWade, the effective actor of grouches, and Miss Blythe Daly, who was here last year in "Spring Cleaning," to help him.

"Ladies of the Evening" is something recently tried out in Montreal with such felicitous results that Mr. Belasco has taken it for his catalogue. . . . Milton Herbert Gropper wrote it; and he is identifiable as part-author with Oscar Hammerstein II of "New Toys," in which Ernest Truex recently performed here.

Miss Mary Ellis and Miss Dorothy Dalton are to be added to the list of musical-comedy stars: Miss Ellis in "Rose-Marie," with tunes by Friml and Stothart, and Miss Dalton in "My Bobby," with a tale from the Hungarian of Vajda, who wrote "Grounds for Divorce," and music by the same Friml and Stothart.

Michael Arlen, whose "These Charming People" is the brightest light fiction published so far this year, is soon to be represented in the theater here: the name of his play is not made known by the importer. . . . Arnold Bennett, who came back so well as a tale-teller with "Riceyman Steps," also is to have a new play put on in this country.

"London Life," which Bennett wrote for Drury-Lane in collaboration with Edward Knoblock, was a forthright failure there, and has been thrown into the Thames. . . . They were coauthors twelve years ago with "Milestones," a big hit in London and a fair success in this country.

Ed Wynn is to continue to advertise himself as the Perfect Fool, rightly regarding the label as a good trademark; but his new show is to be known as "The Grab-Bag," and is to be made ready for New-York's examination in October.

Another try is to be made with "The Schmers," in which the villains are four drama-critics. . . . Channing Pollock is cutting his good melodrama called "The Sign on the Door" to one act for use in the varieties.

Miss Alice Brady is experimenting with a sketch called "Marriage à la Mode," by Brander Matthews, who has written and spoken many useless words about the drama.

A comedy known on the Continent as "Doctor Stieglitz" is to be given soon in New-York under the name of "My Son the Doctor." . . . Norman Trevor, who has been acting the principal masculine part in "The Goose Hangs High," is to fill in until that play reopens by acting for the films with Miss Gloria Swanson.

New-York has at length had enough of "Little Jessie James," which was taken off last night after a run of eleven months. . . . Thomas Meighan is good enough to make denial of a rumor that he will return to the stage.

Miss Vivian Martin, having finished her tour with Donald Brian in "Just Married," is returning to the movies, where she is a somebody. . . . The Dolly Sisters are to be in the new Greenwich Village Follies.

The play known in Chicago for a run in 1920-'21 as "Happy-Go-Lucky" has been made over into a musical comedy in England, where the original was called "Tilly of Bloomsbury." . . . Miss Doris Keane is to try a piece called "Starlight," made by Miss Gladys Unger from an Hungarian work.

Walter Huston, the actor out of the varieties who made a success for himself last season in the New-York production of Miss Zona Gale's "Mister Pitt" (the dramatization of her novel called "Birth"), is to act in a new work named "The Easy Mark."

Miss Nance O'Neil is going to play Hamlet,—but in California, which isn't so bad. . . . Also, she is to stage out there Maeterlinck's "Mary Magdalene," in which Miss Olga Nethersole once acted in New-York, and Daudet's "L'Arlesienne," which hasn't been acted in this country in many years. . . . All this under the auspices of the University of California.

Robert Mantell, who is seventy years old, says he is going to tour Great Britain this season in his répertoire of Shakespere. . . . He was a popular player in the English provinces before he came to this country, more than forty years ago.

London, up against it for new plays with which producers seem willing to take a chance, is still being entertained with revivals. . . . "Diplomacy" is said to be a success there, although it is the most familiar of all the pieces subjected to occasional resurrection. American managers used to be fond of hanging special casts on the good old piece, which, when last seen in Chicago, didn't stand up too well: that was in 1916, in the Blackstone, with Gillette, Miss Blanche Bates, and Miss Marie Doro in the big type.

George C. Wharton, for many years connected with the City News Bureau and the Chicago offices of the Associated Press, goes to Springfield (Ill.) as manager of the Orpheum Circuit's theater. . . . He was business-manager of the Olympic for the two years previous to that theater's being taken over as the Chicago house of the Columbia "wheel."

Miss Charlotte Greenwood, a pretty-good clown-lady, is again to head a company bearing her name: the name of the piece, which will be with tunes, is not announced. . . . She was an amusing person in "So Long, Letty!" and not bad in the second Music-Box Revue, shown here last year.

One of the new plays is called "Sign Here!" and is the work of William Macart and Miss Ethelynne Bradford, for years a "team" in the varieties. . . . "Most of Us Are" is the title of a new comedy by Frederick Lonsdale, author of "Aren't We All?" and "Spring Cleaning."

Arthur Bourchier in London is to revive Bernstein's "The Thief," quite a success in this country back in 1907, when Miss Margaret Illington and the late Kyrle Bellew had the chief parts. . . . And the title-rôle will be acted in London by Bellew's daughter, who bears her father's prænomen.

Eddie Girard, for years a popular star as a member of the "team" of Donnelly and Girard, is to go into the cast of "The Belle of Quakertown," which had a try-out here last season as "The Town Clown." . . . Donnelly and Girard toured with great success for years in "Natural Gas," "The Rainmaker," "My Friend from India," and other pieces. . . . Henry V. Donnelly has been dead since 1909.

"The Fatal Wedding," whose revival in New-York at the three-dollar scale was an error, is to be boiled down for use in the two-a-day. . . . Miss Dale Winter, who used to sing out in Colosimo's night-refuge, is replacing the comic Miss Luella Gear in "Poppy."

BOTH SING, AND ONE DANCES, ALSO

MISS HELEN LOW

MISS LOUISE GROODY

MISS LOW is now what is known in the lingo of revues as "number leader" in "Artists and Models"; and this means that her task is to sing the solos for soprano. She does it well: she sings as if she were a musician as well as a soprano trained for opera, and she gets the words across. To her fall the respective arias named "When Beauty Calls" and "Music of Love."

Miss Groody's is a new photograph, and is reproduced for that reason: that she is in "No! No, Nanette!" is by now general information; and putting her into the part of Nanette was among the wise repairs made by the management of this delightful entertainment. . . . Miss Groody's previous visits to Chicago were in "Fiddlers Three," "The Night-Boat," and "Good-Morning, Dearie!"

GETS A CHANCE

MISS HELEN MACK

She is a new member of the cast of "On the Stairs," replacing Miss Audrey Hart in one of the incidental characters. . . . Her career in the theater appears to have been limited to rehearsing for this piece.

STAGE-NEWS

Paganini is the central figure of the latest operetta by Franz Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow," the popularity of which has never been approached in this country by any of his other pieces. . . . A play about Paganini by Edward Knoblock was put on for George Arliss in 1915, and was one of that actor's numerous failures between "Disraeli" and the stroke of luck which put him into "The Green Goddess."

Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, who stepped into the "legitimate" when Mr. Belasco put her into Miss Ina Claire's original rôle for a tour in "The Gold-Diggers," is to have the title-part in Mrs. Catherine Chisholm Cushing's comedy named "Marge." . . . And Ian MacLaren is to be in the cast of "The Green Beetle," by the author of "The Cat and the Canary."

Lionel Atwill is to return to the title-part of "The Outsider," one of the plays closed in New-York June 1 by orders of the actors' union. . . . He has refused an invitation to take part in some try-out performances, in California, of Somerset Maugham's good tale called "The Moon and Sixpence."

Miss Gertie Millar, who was here in 1910 in "Our Miss Hobbs," is now the Countess of Dudley. . . . She was the widow of Lionel Monckton, who composed many good tunes for pieces brought hither from London.

Madame Simone, who is coming back from Paris under the management of Miss Anne Nichols, expects to spend her American season in New-York, with Montreal as a possible side-issue. . . . A bulletin from Miss Nichols' office says that, after doing some plays in French, the actress "will make her début in English." When Simone acted in this country in 1911-'12-'13, she used English, and much better English than is heard from most American players.

"Leading-men" are said to be scarce and in high demand, in spite of the fact that producers seem to be holding off pending an outcome of the troubles with the actors' union.

The Hawaiian orchestra retired to the garden at 12 o'clock and the guests followed, sitting on the grass and listening to the boys' music, muted as to instruments and voices, for an hour or two.

"One Night in Rome" has been previewed, and is said to be a fine picture, with Miss Taylor in a part different from any she has ever played.

Picture persons really go to church, whether the public believes it or not. Lois Wilson is an excellent Episcopalian. Christian Scientists include Conrad Nagel, Milton Sills, Hobart Henley, and a dozen others. Wallace MacDonald, Doris May, Dorothy Phillips, and many others are Catholics, who never miss church. Eugene O'Brien and Norma Talmadge have recently been attending the Catholic church much together, along with friends.

And Doug's Away.

The opening of "The Thief of Bagdad" at Grauman's Egyptian theater was the most brilliant picture premiere the city has ever seen from the standpoint both of production and audience.

Charlie Chaplin seems worried over the numerous engagement rumors floating about, and came all alone. Larry Semon, too, whose engagement to Lucille Carlisle seems to be definitely broken, sat in lonely grandeur in the front row.

Whether Katherine MacDonald's mantle is about to fall on the shoulders of Mary MacLaren, her sister, isn't known, but she is going about a bit with Sam Rork, who, you recollect, launched Katherine; and the two were together at "The Thief of Bagdad." Mary wore a blue and silver gown and looked pretty. Eleanor Boardman was present with King Vidor, the two having apparently been reconciled after a short disagreement. Mabel Normand was present with a big party of non-picture friends, and looked sweet in white satin, white embroidered shawl with deep fringe, and silver head dress. Alice Terry, also with a group of non-picture persons, was a real vision in flesh colored chiffon trimmed with pink ostrich fringe.

Marilyn Miller and Jack Pickford were there. Marilyn wore pink chiffon with pearl and crystal trimmings.

Thank You! Thank You!

Dear Mae Tinée: I'm not writing to ask you any questions this time, but to thank you for answering my questions about the heroine in "One Exciting Night" and the hero in "Monte Cristo."

I've noticed at different times that some folks seem to delight in criticizing the delightful reviews you write, and I want to say that I don't think they have anything at all to criticize. I just love your reviews, and think that in most cases I can abide by your decision. O, of course, once in a while I disagree with you, but, goodness, "variety is the spice of life," it is said, and, besides, even if I never agreed with you, it wouldn't mean your opinion would be wrong. Some people have the idea that because they don't agree with you, you're wrong. "O, inconsistency, thou are not a jewel!"

I've just finished reading "The Prestons," by Mary Heaton Vorse. Have you ever read it, Mae? I think that if you have that you will agree with me that darling little Ben Alexander (he wouldn't like to hear me say that, being a boy and probably doesn't like to be called darling) could take the part of Jimmy, in the aforementioned book, just perfectly. All along when reading the book I imagined Jimmy looking just like Ben Alexander. Benny was perfectly darling in "Penrod and Sam," and also in "Boy of Mine," which are the only two I've seen him in.

Well, perhaps you think I've written about enough, but I just want to say once more that there are plenty for you, Mae, and who wouldn't want to have you change your reviews for anything. Long live Mae Tinée!

JEAN.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago

Have My Way.

Mr.—Am I never to have my way about anything?

Mrs.—O, yes. When we agree you may have your way, but when we disagree I'll have mine. E. M.

Coming in Handy.

"Do you stand back of every statement you make in your newspaper?" asked the timid little man.

"Why—er—yes," answered the country editor.

"Then," said the little man, holding up a notice of his death, "I wish you would help me collect my life insurance." C. B.

Graphic.

"It gets awfully hot in Arizona in the summer time."

"That so? How do you know?"

"Well a traveler out there last summer says he say a coyote chasing a jack rabbit across the prairie and it was so hot they were both walking." E. M. C.

It Was This Way.

"Please, ma'am," said the little girl next door, "mother wants to know if you will lend her your phonograph this afternoon."

"Is she going to have a dance?" asked the neighbor.

"No," was the reply. "We're tired of dancing to it. Mother wants to keep it quiet for a couple of hours, so the baby can sleep." A. D.

Chastised.

A Negro minister discovered two men playing cards on Sunday—and for money.

"Rastus," said the minister, "don't you know it's wrong to play cards on the Sabbath?"

"Yes, passon," answered Rastus ruefully, "but, believe me, ah's payin' foh mah sins." M. L. M.

A Touch of Broadway.

It is a long way from and 2,000 feet higher than Broadway up here. But I still found a bit of atmosphere—Cissie Loftus and Marian Kerby are sitting at the next table. Miss Loftus is giving a recital Tuesday. Miss Kerby, who played the best bad sister "Seventh Heaven" ever had, is staging "The First Year" for the club's amateur dramatic association.

In the lobby Robert Hilliard and carnation as big as life. Robert has been here six months. Seriously ill when he came, he is well and hearty now and takes the lobby crowd over the bridge hurdles regularly.

Here eating becomes an adventure. When you order Puft rye or club farm sosaj or flid capon, you may know what you are going to get and you may not. The fryd cornmeal muf is also good and you would luv the strobert ya cream. But, if dieting is a passion or a necessity with you, beware the scrtipped milk! And sponj cake! And blueberi py! O lady—be watchful!

I must tell you more about the founder. He came here thirty years ago, they tell me, with $500 and a burning desire to start something. Curiously, he was most eager to capitalize decency by putting a premium upon clean living.

Thousands of other evangels of similar stamp have been equally ambitious, but so far as I know few of them have been as persistent or as successful as he.

He invested his $500 in Lake Placid land and borrowed $5,000 to develop it. His investment today represents something like $3,000,000, and his annual salary budget totals $750,000.

He owns, or the estate owns, 8,000 acres of land, on which a good counter can count thirty-seven farms and any reasonably smart hotel clerk can find fourteen hundred sleeping rooms in a hundred and nine buildings. A fairly successful thirty year work, I would say.

But imagine building up an enterprise of this character, and making the independent rich like it, with a set of rules the opening paragraph of which contains this warning:

"... Those preferin the greater liberty of hotel life will not find the Club congenial and shud not cum herin to break down customs which they find irksum; for it is impractical either to chanje them or make a few new comers independent of what the founders and old members all observe . . . Thoze whose views ar evidently too widely different from thoze of the Club for satisfactory reasns will have much embarasment by voluntarily withdrawin.

Followed by a few additional admonitions the like of which no ordinary vacationist prepared to buy his way through any resort ever heard of. For example:

No nois that cud disturb byt sleepers between 10 p. m. and 8 a. m. or durin quiet ours 3:30-5 p. m.

No smoking in dininroom, parlors, bkrart, music room, on ladies piazas or thoze with 'No smoking' posters; and no smokin by women.

No lotteries, raffles, church fair schemes, gift skemes or other ramblin even for small sums to keep up interest.

No dogs in clubhouses even on leash. None on grounds except on leash.

No solisitin for gifts, sales, loans or charity.

No conduct dres or manners that cud justly offend the refined family life which is the Club's chief feature.

Prohibition law strictly enforst.

Gifts may be made freely at close of visit, but tips, fees, or any gratuities at other times ar strictly prohibited.

Evenin dres is never worn by men.

No frequenting questionabl resorts.

Members are spesaly askt not to giv introdiuns or privilej cards to any one who wud disregard the overwhelmin Club sentiment agenst reselvin women smokers or any of the gamblin, drinkin or fast set, and also to report any annoyans due to disregard of these rules. Engajements by those who wil not conform to Club standards wil positivly be canseled.

It appears they are also a little bit snoopy, too, for the good of the cause. Club gests are clasifyd, whether they lyk it or not. If you behave yourself you get an "A" rating. If you indulge any of the major home sports, such as wife beating, you are no better than "B."

What "C" stands for I don't know. It could be "better get cash," if it were not that cash here is spelled with a hard "K" as in "Kustomer." And I can hardly imagine a "D" person. I suspect, however, he must be one of whom the scouts report that "he et his blueberi py with his nyf."

I don't know what they are going to write about Dr. Melvil Dewey, Ph. D., the founder hereinbefore referred to, when he passes on. But I know one thing I should engrave upon his tombstone. And that is this:

"He made the rich behave."

When he stands up in heaven and the presiding officer demands "For what purpose does the gentleman arise?" he can answer with a clean conscience and a record of which I, for one, would be inordinately proud.

French Novelty to Be Sung at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

ever had in my life, and now I know what atmosphere really means."

As a matter of fact, Armando Agnini, the stage director of Ravinia, has a pleasant habit of utilizing natural resources in preference to artificial whenever such a course is possible. It can be done rather frequently, since Ravinia functions in the summer, when real flowers and real foliage are to be had, and there are large gardens and groves upon which to draw. In connection with some expert stage carpentry and Mr. Agnini's uncommon talent for lighting effects, the atmosphere to which Miss Bori refers becomes a noticeable element.

When Cho-Cho-San and Suzuki sing the flower duet in "Madama Butterfly," they strew the Japanese home with real flowers. When Suzuki shakes the cherry tree, real petals fall. And one never sees here what is generally the case in the first act of this opera on other stages, namely and to wit, early spring cherry blossoms blooming in the same garden on the same day with late autumn chrysanthemums.

Reality, though not stark realism, gets into the scenery as well. The Nile scene in "Aida," which, incidentally, is a great effect, was copied from a famous painting. The battlement scene in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" is a reproduction of a castle in France, now fallen into ruin, but which in its day witnessed just such scenes as that of the departure of the troops in the opera. Even the scenes that are more conventional because more frequently seen, the hall of Lammermoor castle in "Lucia," the throne room in "Rigoletto," the reception room in "Traviata," the salon in "Fedora," look like the real thing. It is of advantage to audiences and casts alike, for the artists "work better" when the stage is properly equipped.

Other Treats of the Week.

In addition to the Wednesday night bill, already referred to, three operas will come up during the week for their first performance of the summer. "The Barber of Seville," finest example of the classic buffa opera, is billed for tonight, with Vicente Ballester, best of all the Figaros, in that part. Graziella Pareto will be the Rosina, Armand Tokatyan the Almaviva, Leon Rothier as Don Basilio, and Paolo Ananian as Dr. Bartolo. A first rate cast, and not the only one, since Florence Easton is to sing the name part of "Tosca" on Friday night, to the Cavaradossi of Giovanni Martinelli and the Scarpia of Giuseppe Danise. Gennaro Papi will sing both of these.

The week's list will close Saturday night with "Martha," and in the cast occur the names of Miss Pareto, Miss Bourskaya, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Virgilio Lazzari, and Mr. Ananian. Mr. Lazzari will likewise be the soloist in Eric DeLamarter's concert with the Chicago Symphony orchestra tomorrow night.

Story of the Fourdrain Opera.

Though the music of "La Legende du Point d'Argentan" will be a secret until Wednesday night, the plot need not. Here it is in its official transcription:

In the village of Argentan, toward the end of the eighteenth century, lived a poor family, whose little son, a two year old child, was slowly dying, wasting away from lack of the care and comforts that only money can procure. Pierre, the father, had been long without employment, and in his despair had lost faith in God, and proposed that all three should find rest in death. But Rose-Marie, his wife, holds steadfastly to her confidence in the divine power, and persuades Pierre to live and to hope. He enlists for war and Rose-Marie is left with no succor but that of her ten deft fingers.

Argentan had long been famous for the point lace which bore its name, "Point d'Argentan," but the secret of its design had been lost. For its rediscovery Mgr. de Rohan offers the sum of a thousand ecus d'or, the finder to weave a magnificent robe which the monsignor desires to present to the queen. Rose-Marie prays to the Virgin that she may be inspired to find the secret of the design so that the life of her baby may be saved. She has scarcely finished her plea when a poor woman knocks at the door of the cottage and asks for shelter and food. Rose-Marie offers both, and while the woman is being fed Rose-Marie confides to her the desire and pain of her mother heart; her fears for the life of her child, and her ambition to re-create the famous "Point d'Argentan."

Legend tells that three centuries ago the design had been given to the peasants of Argentan by divine hand. It is said that at the crossroad outside the village a shrine to the Virgin had been erected, the figure of the Holy Mother crowned by a golden diadem upon which the setting sun daily wove a veil of light. One day, as though by unseen hands, threads of snow-white delicacy came floating from the sky and caught in magic, lacy tendrils upon the diadem's golden points. Inspired by what they believed to be a visitation of God, the peasants took the marvelous design for their lace, thereafter to be known as "Point d'Argentan."

Rose-Marie tells the legend to the poor woman who listens pityingly and then proposes that Rose-Marie work at her lace making while she prays to God to bless and inspire her good Samaritan. Rose-Marie falls asleep over her laces. And now the beggar woman is transformed—she appears as the Blessed Virgin surrounded by a heavenly host.

At her command the angels shall weave of the white threads of her garment a magnificent robe of "Point d'Argentan." And Rose-Marie's mother heart shall know happiness again.

Spalding Sits in as Judge.

Albert Spalding sat in as one of the judges at the graduating class of the Paris conservatoire last month, the first time an American had been invited to join in the deliberations of that venerable institution. His reactions were later recorded by himself in the Outlook.

At first, he says, finding that the women contestants were to be segregated from the men, he felt an instinctive protest against the proceeding. Before the day was over—there were some fifty entrants, all playing a piece by Faure and the last movement of the Beethoven Concerto—he admitted that if the single standard had prevailed not one of the first prizes would have gone to a woman. As it was, there were three firsts for the women and six for the men. Wherefore he says that the double standard is wrong from both social and artistic standpoints. The first prize should be awarded not to the best man or the best woman but to the best violinist.

Mr. Spalding complains, and those of us who have served on American juries can echo his complaint, that few of the players had "something to say." In most cases there was admirable training and faithful reflection of the teachers' ideas, and few individual ones. "With reasonable good luck," he says of one of the women, "she might achieve a tolerable position as a provincial teacher or a player in some small town orchestra. If she really loved her work, found joy in the work for its own sake, she would be happy; she could, after twenty or thirty years, look back with the satisfaction of a trained artisan. But if, as so often happens, her enthusiasm for work had not been love of the art itself, but only for the fame attached to supreme achievement, it was a disheartening, a despairing vista of years that lay ahead of her."

AN AMERICAN

MARGERY MAXWELL.
[Atwell Photo.]

She is one of the hopes of young America in music, for she has the voice, the art, and many other qualities of the successful singer, including plenty of good looks. This summer she is a member of the fine opera company at Ravinia.

Music Notes

The Chicago band, William Weil, conductor, desires to raise $50,000 so that it may continue in existence. Indorsed by the Association of Commerce, it prints a list of reasons why it should so continue, the principal one, of course, being that it gives concerts.

Mrs. Helen Warrum Chappell, soprano, formerly a member of the Chicago and Metropolitan Opera companies, will appear in recital on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock in Kimball hall. Esther Payne Muenzer, pianist, will assist.

The music department tries to answer the questions asked it, but one came in by a recent mail that is a bit too much for it. The letter was from the management of Germaine Schnitzer. It explains that this accomplished pianist will be in Europe until December and in the United States from then till April. It then asks, "May we ask your prompt reply relative to special tour terms and dates?" We hate to appear ignorant, but we do not know.

"Captain Blood," Rafael Sabatini's nautical story, is to go into the galloping celluloids, and will be accompanied by a musical score of the sea. The musical director—unnamed, but with an address at 1400 Locust avenue, Brooklyn—is on a search for material. He wants old English, French, and Spanish nautical tunes, old Yankee sea chanteys, and legendary pirate songs. Any one with suggestions is invited to communicate with him.

Mme. Leschetizky, widow of the famous piano pedagogue, and herself a pianist of much prominence in Europe, will make her American debut here with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at its subscription concerts of Nov. 7 and 8.

The English Grand Opera company of New York relays further information about its performances of the "Nibelungen Ring" next fall. The State Symphony orchestra will play, and Fred Patton has been engaged to sing Alberich in "Rheingold" and Wotan in "Walkure."

SEE NEW RADIO ERA UNFOLDING IN PHONOFILM

Movies in Home, "Motion Music" Predicted.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

"Talking movies" in the home, entertainers pictured as they perform for radio audiences and preservation of desired radio numbers for repetition at will for the benefit of the family circle are developments of the not distant future seen by electrical engineers and scientists in Chicago following exhibition of the De Forest Phonofilm at McVickers during last week.

While it was generally pointed out that the Phonofilm is far from a state of perfection, the performance it has shown leaves no doubt that the time is near when the publicly exhibited "talking movies" will be quite common.

Faulty amplification, apparent in the favoring of certain tones in music and voice and distortion or slurring of others, marked the exhibition at McVickers; but a similar fault had to be overcome before amplification as applied to radio could be called anything like successful. In fact, even today, there is vast room for improvement, especially in loud speakers.

Future Easy to Picture.

Listening to the performance of the Phonofilm, and bearing in mind that inventions for transmission of scenes by radio are already well past the experimental stage, it is not hard to picture the time when radio performances will be seen in the home as well as heard, and also that further step when means will be at hand to record both the visualized part of the "show" as well as the aural, and to preserve them for future repetition, a performance in which the Phonofilm, in its evolution, will play a prominent part.

One can imagine easily the time when the notes of the nightingale, singing in its English haunts, will be picked up by the microphone and spread over a charmed world, while a silent motion picture camera, in conjunction with the "mike," operated with "unseen light," impresses upon the carrier wave at the same time the antics of the feathered songsters.

This fancied, and it is not a far cry to great events recorded via radio for all who may care to hear and see—educational, judicial, civic, whatever the public will.

Truly, "that which is whispered in secret" may be shouted from the loud speaker and the whisperer's lips read upon the radio screen.

"Mike" for the Reporter.

Comes now the view expressed by W. Meakin, London publisher, before the National Union of Journalists, of which he is president, that the newspaper reporter of the near future will be equipped with microphone as well as notebook, and that if he would rank in the forefront he must combine the repertorial qualifications of swift and accurate observation, with ability orally to express movements of news import with the same expertness that he now employs in writing. With the ability to grasp the dramatic, the exceptional, and the picturesque, he must cultivate crisp, vividly descriptive qualities of oratory.

Already a step toward this end has been taken in this country in radiocasting the two national conventions, when Graham McNamee, chief announcer, displayed decided descriptive ability; but who can deny that some trained newspaperman, under the same conditions, provided he was equipped with Mr. McNamee's radiocast training, probably would have made some of the exciting phases of the Democratic pow-wow a bit more realistic and hence more gripping.

Warns British Publishers.

Mr. Meakin's forecast seemed more in the nature of pointing out to the publishers of the British empire that a medium belonging by its very nature to the newspapers in their sphere of public service, had been, through monopolistic grants to the British Broadcast company, withheld from them, and a warning that they must correct an error permitted when radio was in its state of public infancy or be counted among the unprogressive.

Throughout the British Isles there is not a newspaper owned radiocast, while in this country many of them are owned by or have newspaper connections. France, Belgium, Canada, and even China, have newspaper conducted radiocasts, and it is to be expected that a movement to break Marconi's grip on the radio situation in England will be made before long.

B. L. A. PRESENTS RADIO STARS TO LISTENERS-IN

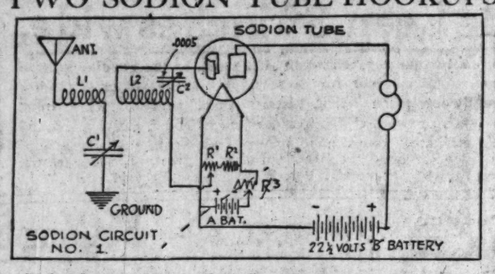
More radio stars appeared in person before the Broadcast Listeners' association, at the open meeting in Hamilton park field house, 72nd street and Normal boulevard, last Friday evening. Among those who appeared, through the courtesy of the Morton and Edelson Booking agency, are; Eddie Gray, WHN, New York, composer, pianist, and vocalist; Joe Jordan, Harold Morave, and Catherine O'Bryan, "the Tri-City Girl," whose monologues often have been aired by WOC. Technical discussions proved of unusual interest, as well as the question and answers period. Sally Menkes and Bob Brown are expected to entertain the association membership and visiting radioans next Friday evening.

Objects of the B. L. A. and its accomplishments for the benefit of owners of receiving sets were outlined over WLS Thursday evening by F. H. McDonald, president, who also told of the great work being done to safeguard the interests of the listening public by the American Radio association, the national organization, with which the B. L. A. is affiliated, and which has headquarters at 50 Union Square, New York.

WNYC's Assigned Wave Held to Be a Detriment

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Allocation of the 526 meter wave length to WNYC, New York's municipal broadcasting station, has caused many to question the wisdom of operating so powerful a station in a densely populated section of the city where broadcast listeners are numbered by thousands.

TWO SODION TUBE HOOKUPS



Hookup No. 1—Employing the Sodion tube to reform a "blooper."

L1—50 turn coil on 3-inch tube, preferably cardboard or low loss form, wound with No. 24 wire.

L2—50-turn coil, same as L1.

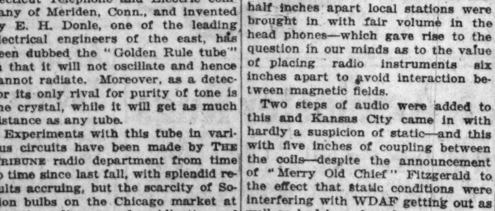
C1—.001 mfd. variable condenser, one having low losses preferred.

C2—.0005 mfd. variable condenser of low loss type.

R1—44-ohm potentiometer.

R-2—100-ohm resistor.

R-3—Sodion or other rheostat of proper resistance. In event six volt battery is used this resistance should be at least 20 ohms.



Sodion Hookup No. 2—How variocoupler set may be changed to make a one-stage radio frequency receiver, with Sodion detector.

L1—Primary of variocoupler.

L2—Secondary of variocoupler.

L3—Primary of radio frequency transformer. If low loss coil form is used, this should be about 12 turns, ¾ of an inch away from secondary. No. 16 or 18 wire should be used.

L4—Secondary of R. F. transformer. In case of low loss coil form being used, this should consist of about 40 turns of No. 18, 20 or 22 wire, shunted by .00025 mfd. condenser.

C1—.001 mfd. condenser.

C2—.0005 mfd. condenser.

C3—.0005 mfd. condenser. In event low loss coil is used condenser should be .00025, or 11 plates. Univernier or Accuratune dials would take care of the very sharp tuning.

R1—Rheostat to suit r. f. tube.

R2—Sodion 44-ohm potentiometer.

R3—100-ohm resistor.

R4—Sodion or other rheostat of proper resistance.

Any radio frequency tube may be used in this hookup—C-301 A, C-199, C11, C12, the corresponding U V tubes, Meyers, De Forest, or others of proven value as R. F. amplifiers.

SODION DETECTOR TUBE OFFERS MEANS TO REFORM "BLOOPER"

BY EXPERIMENTER.

With the advent of fall and the increase in listening in the "blooper" will be with us again in all its radiating glory, and it will rest with the owners of single circuits, audions, and the like as to whether they will go on disturbing their neighbors or whether they will prefer to take steps to reform the offending hook-ups.

Converting the single circuit into a double circuit receiver will not always go very far toward eliminating the trouble caused other listeners in, but for those who prefer to stick to the single circuit the Sodion tube offers a splendid medium for so doing, with not many radical changes involved.

Noted for Purity of Tone.

This tube, manufactured by the Connecticut Telephone and Electric company of Meriden, Conn., and invented by E. H. Donle, one of the leading electrical engineers of the east, has been dubbed the "Golden Rule tube" in that it will not oscillate and hence cannot radiate. Moreover, as a detector its only rival for purity of tone is the crystal, while it will get as much distance as any tube.

Experiments with this tube in various circuits have been made by THE TRIBUNE radio department from time to time since last fall, with splendid results accruing, but the scarcity of Sodion bulbs on the Chicago market at the time discouraged publication of these.

The Sodion, briefly, utilizes the peculiar properties of a highly electropositive or alkali metal, known as the sodium ion, and is highly evacuated.

Its leading quality lies in the small amount of energy that it can convert into audible sound, and the wide coupling—hence, the less resistance in circuit—hence, the less resistance in the antenna circuit the better it works and the less resistance the greater the selectivity in any set.

Works with Patched Up Circuit.

One of the first experiments tried was conversion of a single circuit "blooper" into a gentlemanly radio, and it was in so doing that a genuine surprise was encountered. The original circuit had a 50 turn coil wound on a three inch tube as the inductance. This was tuned by a .0005 mfd. variable condenser. Another fifty turn coil on another three inch tube was wound, No. 24 DSC wire being used in both cases. The accompanying diagram No. 1, shows the reformed blooper. The extra coil was used as the antenna pickup coil with an .001 condenser in the ground. Coto and Cardwell condensers both were tried with excellent results.

With a 100-ohm resistor wound for us by the Unity Manufacturing company of Chicago and a "potentiometer" made up of two Cutler-Hammer 15-ohm resistances [it then being difficult to obtain the Connecticut parts for the Sodion, consisting of the 100-ohm resistor and the 44-ohm potentiometer] hooked together, with the center as the potentiometer arm, we started out by betting that it wouldn't work. We lost, decidedly. With 4½ inches of coupling between the two coils, placed as shown in the diagram, the degree of selectivity was such that it was quite a step on both condensers from 345 to 360 meters.

Amazingly Wide Coupling Used.

With the two coils twelve and one-half inches apart local stations were brought in with fair volume in the head phones—which gave rise to the question in our minds as to the value of placing radio instruments six inches apart to avoid interaction between magnetic fields.

Two steps of audio were added to this and Kansas City came in with hardly a suspicion of static—and this with five inches of coupling between the coils—despite the announcement of "Merry Old Chief" Fitzgerald to the effect that static conditions were interfering with WDAF getting out as well as had been hoped.

KDKA, registering static on a reflex set, gave forth only a faint rippling between audible frequencies when heard in the horn, with the improvised Sodion circuit and two stages of amplification.

Two New Tubes Coming.

For those who might wish to adopt the Sodion as the detector in a circuit using coils wound on the low loss form dealt with two weeks ago, a semi-aperiodic primary could be used, winding twelve turns pyramid banked in the first slot for the pickup coil. Skipping one slot the secondary could be begun in the third slot, thus providing wide coupling. This would do away with a variometer or tickler, as the Sodion does not employ regeneration—that is, the type S-13 does not. However, the Connecticut Telephone and Electric company is developing two new types of tubes, one of which will be for use in regenerative circuits, while the other will be a radio and audio frequency amplifier. Both of these will be dealt with in later articles, each having shown splendid performances in laboratory tests. It will be some little time, probably, before they will be available to the public.

CANADIAN CHAIN GETS CALL THAT HAS A MEANING

Morocco Aids Move---News of the Radiocasts.

The Canadian National railways, through courtesy of the French colonial office and the government of Morocco, has come into possession of the radio call letters of the Moroccan, government, and the call letters have been adopted by all stations owned or used by the system.

The radio call letters of Morocco were CN. To these the Canadian National railways has added the letter "R" and the first letter of the name of the city from which radiocasting is being carried on.

This means that the Ottawa station, which had been CKCH, now is CNRO. Similarly, the other stations will follow suit.

Plans are under way for holding the greatest convention of radio enthusiasts yet recorded in connection with the third annual national radio show to be held during the week of Nov. 3, in Grand Central Palace.

CHAIN TO AIR MR. COOLIDGE'S ACCEPTANCE

New York, July 19.—Notification ceremonies and the speech of acceptance by President Coolidge, Aug. 14, will be broadcast direct from Continental Memorial hall, Washington, D. C. Frank W. Mondell, permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention, will make the notification address. The ceremonies will be held at night to facilitate broadcasting to a large audience. It is expected that the majority of the twenty stations which radiated the Republican national convention will be linked together by land wires and connected to the microphones in Washington. Broadcasting in New York will be done by WEAF.

Chicago Radio Association Presents Young Musician

Members and guests of the Chicago Radio association, meeting Thursday evening in Ogden park fieldhouse, were entertained at the last meeting by Joseph Straub, 15 year old accordionist. There were other numbers also on the program. E. Hemmel of the Triangle Electric company made a technical talk. Mr. Hemmel will talk next week on and give a demonstration of the five-tube Pilodyne receiver.

Dialog Finds Moon Ditties by Moon's Aid

Moreover, Luna Brings in Lost WOAW.

BY DIALOG.

It seems to have been C. D. Tuska who discovered the moon, but the lot fell to us during the week beginning Friday, July 11, to discover that the moon is a publicity hound of the first water. Full, she likes to be sung about; and when sung about on the radio she beams at what engineers would designate as an "assisting frequency."

But we wish first to tell what the moon helped us to do. Last Friday week we turned in our copy for the radio department, lamenting the loss of WOAW. The next night, with the moon gleaming full high in the heavens, we tuned into WOAW first 'crack, loud and clear as in March. It was then that we discovered the moon and remembered that Mr. Tuska had discovered her before us. Then we discovered WOAW with a moon song. See the conspiracy?

Tube Goes Flooey.

Sunday, "the same old moon in the same old milky way," and several far radiocasts with moonful songs on their programs; Monday the same combination, likewise Tuesday, and Thursday. Wednesday was an exception as to reception, but that may have been the fault neither of the moon nor of radio conditions. We had decided it was to be laid to both, after two hours' trial, and marked down "worst night in two months." Then, on Thursday evening, when WOC could only be brought up to headphone volume, we began a tour of investigation. An hour's testing unmasked a faulty tube in the second radio stage. Replaced by a good one, we started fishing for WNYC, also on 526, and slammed square into WOAW, louder than on Saturday and Monday nights.

Monday was the banner silent night of a long time, and our belief that radio always will begin to improve by the end of June seems to be in fair way of being borne out by fact. Space is more than limited, so a resume of the briefest character is imperative.

Stations heard loudly and clearly Saturday, July 12, included; WRC, 10 p. m.; WOAW, about 11, "Stars and Stripes"; KSD, 11:15.

Opera and Other Things.

Monday, July 14.—9:40, WWJ, Detroit News orchestra, clear; WHO, piano solo by Helen Grimes, 5 years old; 9:10 and several times thereafter, WMC, trying for distance. "Somebody Stole My Gal," probably started a search for her in Honolulu, judging by the noise we got anent the lost dame; 10:07, WFAA, clear, but weak; 10:11, WCAE, Pittsburgh, clear; 10:15, WOS, nearly as strong as Memphis, and more musical; 10:20, WLW, with the opera "Lakme," swinging so strong we cut to one stage of amplification, and stuck through rest of the second act. Found WBAH a degree and a half down on the dials. Heard most of the opera, with drifts to: WHAZ, Troy, 11 p. m., slathered with static; 11:10, KFKX, clear; 11:15, WGR, strong and almost free of static (sounds fishy, eh, after WHAZ), with dance music; 11:26, WSAI signing off; 11:30, WOAW, quartet singing "Beware," 11:56, WHN, New York, clear and strong; 12, WSB, Atlanta, very clear; some "blooping"; 12:20, Omaha again, dance music, clear, still no static.

Some night; some moon; some opera!

And it's growing better and better, night by night!

Tune in; we have to sign off!

Voluntary Subscriptions Pay for Radio in Denmark

LONDON, July 17.—Wireless telephony and telegraphy in Denmark is a state monopoly. Broadcasting does not take place regularly. There is, however, a Danish radio club which, with permission from the telegraph authorities, has been enabled to broadcast three or four times a week. Expenses are paid by voluntary subscriptions from the possessors of wireless receiving sets.

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

One hundred and eighty-seven radio listeners wrote to W.G-N (formerly WDAF) THE TRIBUNE'S broadcasting station at the Drake hotel, to comment upon the test program given in conjunction with WEAF, New York.

W-G-N was linked with the New York station by telephone wires. A program given in the Broadway station's studio was sent over the wire to the Drake and broadcast from there. Five other stations were linked with WEAF in the same manner. The purpose of the test was to determine the success with which one entertainment program could be broadcast simultaneously by a number of stations.

Only six out of the 187 persons writing to W-G-N disliked the project. These six were positive that they did not want to tune in on such a broadcast.

The other 181 persons said they liked the principle of the test although some of the writers added that they would rather hear W-G-N programs than the one given by WEAF.

The technical part of the broadcast worked out with great success, the quality of the music losing but little by the fact that it was played several thousands of miles away from the station putting it on the air.

This evening's program at W-G-N will be featured with a concert by Mme. Joan Young. Her numbers will be interspersed by selections by the Drake concert ensemble. Ralph Emerson will give an organ recital at the Sunday evening vesper hour.

'RADIO CAMPAIGN' DOOMED, VIEW OF BROADCASTERS

See Disappointment in Front of Politicians.

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Managers of national, state, and local political organizations who have recently flocked forward with announcements that they intend to make a "radio campaign" are doomed to disappointment, to some extent, according to opinions expressed today in the offices of the big broadcasting companies.

"Makes It Unanimous."

Discussion of the subject was precipitated by announcements in today's newspapers from William M. Butler, Republican national chairman, that President Coolidge would make few public appearances during the campaign, but devote his speechmaking largely to talking into the microphone.

"That makes it unanimous," said one broadcasting manager. "Now they've all said they're going to do it. The demand is going to exceed the facilities by far, and some of them are going to be disappointed. We have not only Presidential candidates and the national campaign to handle, but we have state campaigns and others of a more local nature.

"Can't Be Done," View.

"It simply cannot be done. Radio men in touch with the various national committees have found out one thing, and that is that their officials know almost nothing about the practical problems involved. It devolves upon us to straighten out the tangle.

"They announce they are going to broadcast, but it is we who will have to deliver the goods."

SPARK WAILING IS HELD LEADER IN INTERFERENCE

New York, June 19.—The final talk of the series by John V. L. Hogan, consulting radio engineer and past president of A. I. R. E., before WEAF'S microphone, concluded with a request for specific data regarding interference difficulties experienced by WEAF'S listeners. These have yielded valuable figures regarding the problems to be met before radio's ills are entirely cured.

The sources of greatest interference were spark telegraph signals, which were rated as the worst source of interference by 39 per cent of those complying with Mr. Hogan's request. Whistles came second, with 31½ per cent, and cross talk (that is, interference from other broadcasting stations), 29.6 per cent.

A "Social" Disease Brought Her to the Operating Table

She was married—a good, thrifty housewife, respected by all who knew her—but when she went to the hospital to undergo a serious operation, the doctors traced the cause to a venereal disease.

It was just one of the thousands of tragedies which result so often from the ignorance or carelessness of men who marry, thinking that they have been cured but who are still in the grip of "social" disease. Any man thus afflicted may pass one of the most serious of all diseases on to an innocent wife, and he may leave to his child the inheritance of a crippled body, blindness or imbecility.

The records of hospitals and asylums and the daily experience of physicians if opened to the public would tell a startling tale of the suffering brought to multitudes of women and children—innocent victims of venereal infections.

One form of these diseases alone causes two deaths out of thirteen; and this same infection kills fifty people where consumption kills but one. Thousands and thousands of men, women and children, many of whom contract these infections innocently, suffer untold misery, which could be prevented by prompt and proper treatment—for venereal diseases can be cured.

No woman who recognizes signs of trouble which are either caused by a "social" disease or which appear suspicious should delay consulting a physician. And surely any parent whose child has become infected will take steps at once to secure the needed treatment.

The directors of the Public Health Institute have determined to utilize to the fullest extent every method that advanced medical science has developed to relieve the suffering of women and children who are in the toils of these diseases. And for the assurance of the most efficient attention, the utmost privacy and the highest degree of comfort, with women assisting as physicians and also as nurses and attendants, they maintain a special department for women and children at 72 East Randolph Street.

The large number of individual treatment rooms makes it possible for many patients to be given attention at the same time and in the greatest possible privacy.

If any member of your family has a "social" disease, either inherited or acquired, delay in treatment will only make a bad matter worse. And every infected person is a menace to the others in his home. Early treatment is not only to the advantage of the infected one, but is a safeguard to these others.

If the afflicted one is not already under the care of a competent doctor, the Institute is ready to give its help. The low charges make this service available to people of even the most limited means, and the charge is the same to all. No patient pays more than another for the same service. No one, in fact, who needs treatment is turned away because they may lack immediate funds.

A call at the Institute for a diagnosis will enable you to find out just what your disease is. And it may save you from the serious conditions which so often result from delaying treatment.

The Real Inside Dope on the Movie Stars

From Disgrace and Poverty to Great Director

By Julia Harpman.

OUT at Bill Bergman's stable at Lake Tahoe, Cal., there was a hostler who knew more about horses than any one else on the place. In San Francisco, where the natives boast there are no flies, the man had been a salesman of flypaper. He had to sing in a 2d avenue, New York, restaurant, but the patrons of the place thought his voice was too terrible even to laugh at, and the hostler-flypaper-salesman-would-be-singer was fired without the price of a meal.

He was Erich von Stroheim, who has half a dozen other front names, none of which ever did him any good, and a last name of which Von Stroheim is only half. He was born in Austria on Sept. 22, 1885, of noble parents. His father was a respected army officer and his mother a countess of great beauty.

Following the training of all the men of his family, Erich prepared, from his earliest boyhood, for life as an army officer. In due time, he entered the Imperial Military academy, in Austria, from which he was graduated in 1902 as an officer in a regiment of dragoons.

He was graduated from the war college in 1906, with the degree of "sub auspices Imperitories" which carried the award of a diamond ring, engraved with the royal initials.

Von Stroheim's regiment was among the contingent of Austrian soldiers sent to annex the tiny territory of Bosnia in 1908. There was a spurt of fierce fighting and Von Stroheim found himself within saber reach of the enemy.

Gets Life Scar.

Every one agrees that Von Stroheim has no claim to manly beauty. In portraying some characters, such as the horrible Hun in "Hearts of Humanity," he even accentuated this natural homeliness. But at least once in his life he was grateful for his bulging eyebrows and his prominent frontal bone.

In the action which ended in the annexation of Bosnia by Austria, one of the defenders of the losing cause slashing about him with his long, evilly curved saber, split Von Stroheim's forehead open. The scar is still ugly and gives a somewhat evil look to the Austrian's face when his features are in repose. But he was lucky not to lose his eye. Only the peculiar protrusion of his forehead saved his sight.

Von Stroheim quarreled with his superior officer, with the result that he was stripped of his honors, disgraced in the eyes of his country and his family. He debated between suicide and banishment and chose to come to America. In 1909 he arrived in New York penniless and unknown.

Wrapping packages in New York at a weekly salary of $7 seemed a mighty good job to the starving newcomer. He rented a room in Brooklyn for $3.50 a week and managed to get along comfortably as long as the job lasted. But he was not a particularly good bundle wrapper, and eventually he was fired. It was necessary, then, to reduce the cost of living which seemed at that time irreducible.

He discussed his plight with his landlady, who told him there was a tiny room up near the roof and if he moved up there, she would reduce his rent to $2 a week. The difference of a dollar and a half a week meant many meals to Erich, for he had learned that one can be well nourished on milk and bread.

He packed his clothes and looked in every drawer to be sure he had left none of his belongings behind. In a drawer of the cheap oak washstand he found a copy of "McTeague," by Frank Norris, which had been left behind by a former roomer.

Von Stroheim took the book along. He could read English although he spoke only a few words of the language. That night, he started to read the book and did not stop until he had finished it.

"Some day, I'll do something with that book," he said to himself. "McTeague" was uppermost in his mind for years after that. He read it over and over and always there was the determination to "do something" with the story. He knew nothing then of moving pictures and his purpose regarding the book was vague and unformed. Recently, Von Stroheim finished his direction of a stupendous feature pictured called "Greed." He wrote the script, directed, and cut the picture. It originally ran forty-three reels and required seven hours to be shown. "Greed" is the picturization of Norris' "McTeague."

Odd Jobs.

But before Von Stroheim became the great actor and an even greater director, he was harassed by misfortune. Many times he was cold and hungry and out of a job. The proprietor of a 2d avenue basement restaurant gave him a job of entertainer. If the crowd liked his singing, he was to receive $3 a night and his dinner. But his singing received no applause.

"If they'd a laughed at youse, even, that would o' been worth somethin'," the boss said in disgust.

So Erich lost that job. And he paid his last cent for dinner that night.

On the next day he enlisted in the United States army and served a term. After that he worked as French and German correspondent for a fashion journal, for which he also solicited subscriptions. He was sent west by the publication as Pacific coast representative.

After he lost that job Erich went to Mount Tamalpais, Cal. He was given his board and lodging at the West Point inn in exchange for feeding pigs and chickens and doing odd jobs about the place. At the end of the season the inn closed and Von Stroheim found work as a railroad section hand at $35 a month. He was promoted to the position of assistant section foreman, but he hated the work, and after saving a little money he went to San Francisco.

There, in spite of the dearth of flies, Von Stroheim sold enough flypaper to keep him from starving. Next he obtained work as a bank clerk, but he was discharged because he never smiled.

Writes Vaudeville Sketch.

During his wanderings he had written "Brothers," which he persuaded a theatrical man to try out at the Orpheum theater in Oakland. Von Stroheim was encouraged by the theatrical man's opinion that with a better cast the sketch might get on the regular circuit.

He managed to borrow $500 with which to pay better actors. In preparation for the recognition which he felt certain to come Von Stroheim took his company to Los Angeles to rehearse. He paid all their expenses, even their laundry bills, thinking that the custom in theatrical circles. His borrowed money lasted two weeks. When that was gone the actors quit.

Through John D. Maxfield, a representative of the bureau of forestry, Von Stroheim obtained a position as forest guard and probationary ranger in Muir woods.

Maxfield knew several influential men in the moving picture world, and he suggested to Von Stroheim that he try his luck in that field.

Von Stroheim went to Los Angeles and took a room on Main street, miles away from the Hollywood studios. He couldn't afford to taxi, and even the cost of carfare was a strain on his thin purse, so he walked daily to Griffith's studio and waited in the "cattle pen," among the hundreds of men and women who went in those days, before actors' agencies had come into being, and stood in the broiling sun, awaiting a chance to work.

Engaged in Films.

One day, while Von Stroheim stood with the crowd of men and women who hoped to get a chance as extras, John Emerson passed along the sidewalk in his makeup and his costume for the character of Alvig in Ibsen's "Ghosts." He was dressed in evening clothes, with a red ribbon across his breast.

Von Stroheim touched Emerson on the arm.

"That red ribbon wouldn't get by in Norway," he told the actor. "Such ribbons are worn only by waiters in Parisian cafés."

Emerson asked Von Stroheim to arrange a ribbon decoration suitable for the character. Later Emerson decided not to appear in "Ghosts." Instead he made a picture titled "Old Heidelberg," and engaged Von Stroheim as an assistant director and actor at $18 a week.

At the completion of that picture Von Stroheim went back to the "cattle pen." Disheartened, he decided to gamble on his future.

He brought out his old dress clothes, which he had put into the bottom of his trunk when he fled from Austria, had them pressed, and put them on. He went to the Alexandria hotel in Los Angeles, which was then the gathering place of the élite of movieland, and, flourishing a card engraved with all of his many names, ordered a boy to page David Wark Griffith. At that moment Von Stroheim had 50 cents in the world. But the trick worked, and Griffith received him and promised him work.

Praised as Hun.

However, before the promise materialized Emerson again engaged Von Stroheim, paid all his debts in the west, and took him to New York, where his ability as a director, especially in the making of foreign pictures, was quickly proved.

From 1915 to 1918 the solid foundation of his fortune was laid. He became associated in the making of pictures with Douglas Fairbanks, Sir Beerbohm Tree, Norma Talmadge, and other stars.

He first attracted fan attention by his work in "Hearts of the World." He returned to Hollywood to play the Hun in "Hearts of Humanity," which was perhaps his best work as an actor, though he received the praise of the critics for his acting in "Blind Husbands," which he wrote and directed, and in which he starred, and in "The Devil's Pass Key" and "Foolish Wives." The last named is said to have been the first million dollar picture. Its cost of production, according to Von Stroheim, totaled $1,103,736.38.

Von Stroheim's first marriage, which occurred in San Diego in 1918, when he was making only $150 a week and before he became famous, lasted only a short time. Erich and his bride, Mae, separated after four months. After the birth of their son Mrs. Von Stroheim No. 1 filed suit for divorce and, in spite of her husband's general denial of her charges, she was granted her decree. Mrs. Von Stroheim No. 1 was a modiste when last heard from.

He Weds Again.

For a time, the father paid $15 a week for the support of Erich Jr. When his former wife started action in the Superior court, Los Angeles, asking $100 a week for the maintenance of her son, Von Stroheim agreed to pay $75 a week. Recently, he petitioned the court to reduce the amount. At the same time, the child's mother asked the court to increase the allowance.

During the filming of "Hearts of Humanity," Von Stroheim met and fell in love with Valerie Germonprez, sister of his business manager. Miss Germonprez played the part of an ambulance driver in the picture. They were married in October, 1920. They have a young son who, sad to say, bears a closer resemblance to his father than to his pretty mother. The son was born Sept. 18, 1922. He was christened with the ponderous name of Joseph Erich St. Ritus von Stroheim.

Erich, the elder, is a poor business man, in spite of which he has amassed a rather comfortable fortune. He played in "Blind Husbands" for $150 a week and he sold his rights to the story for $250. Furthermore, he directed the picture for no salary at all.

His latest contract stipulates that he receive $110,000 for directing three pictures a year. He completed "Greed" in June, 1923, for which he was paid $31,000. Eight months later he was still cutting the picture—eight months without salary because he would not let any one else cut the picture which he had dreamed about for years.

Drive into these fine highways at any point, Toronto to Chicago, and find new beauties and summer pleasure.

2,000 Miles of Fine Paved Roads

Whether you plan your main route here or elsewhere, include some part, at least, of this charming summer playground. You can drive around Lake Erie, through Canada or the States—and Michigan is full of outdoor delights.

The Lake Erie-Niagara Falls Trail: Toronto, Niagara, Buffalo—each of the three a center of a great vacation territory; lakes and resorts in Canada, New York, Ohio — with hundreds of attractions on both main roads and by-paths; Cleveland and the famous beaches and resorts around it; Toledo, Detroit, innumerable playgrounds. And then the wonderland of Michigan woods and waters on The Michigan Trail—fishing, golfing, canoeing, camping, bathing, and always good hotels in easy reach of wood or stream. Any one of these centers will easily provide a week's—or a fortnight's—delightful vacationing. Come this summer!

The Tour-Book, with Good Maps, Is Free

Write for it today—before you do any further planning for your vacation. A post card will do—to the Great Lakes Tours Association, at Detroit, or at Buffalo—whichever is nearest. Ask for booklet AS.

HOME

The home, the foundation, yes, the very life blood of our nation; what have you done, what part have you performed to make your place of abode a home in all the word implies?

Have you progressed with the times, have you embellished your home in a way to make it attractive to those whom you wish to be there; have you satisfied the demands of a growing generation whom we are teaching a sense of the beautiful in all our schools or have you been satisfied merely with a shelter and a place to rest?

Our viewpoints have greatly changed in the last half century and no longer is it only a privilege of the classes to have well furnished homes, all of the present generation demand the same rights.

Modern methods of manufacturing have brought the so-called luxuries of a few decades ago within the easy reach of the artisan; the mechanic, the teacher and all of those who work for a wage and it is your bounden duty to those whom you love not only to provide them with food, clothing and shelter but to beautify the last named so as to make it a home in the fullest meaning this wonderful word can express.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Listing the Joys of a Summer on Our North Shore

By Mme. X.

SUMMER has been skittish up to now and refused to settle down to business, said business being to provide us with sunshine and soft breezes, both of a brand to permit twenty-four hours a day of outdoor life if we housebound mortals should desire such. But now the season seems to be settling down to business, though Mr. Lugubrious Blue is still quoting a mysterious weather prophet who says that up to Aug. 13 there will be no trusting the signs of fair and warmer. After that, we may expect a ferocious hot spell.

This p. p. p., however, is not putting any money on this soothsayer. "Carpe diem" is our motto, which means enjoy each day as it comes and so outwit malignant fate which might otherwise spoil the present by the shadow of the future. There are worse lots in the world than to live in summer on the north shore, that green and flowery stretch of land lying between Chicago's smoke bound confines and the Great Lakes Naval Training station's rosy towers. There is a gay and friendly quality to this district which it would be hard to match elsewhere.

The north shore near Boston, with its rocks and pine forests, is perhaps more beautiful, but not to the wayfarer. Stone walls and thickets of shrubbery and trees shut out the houses, lawns, and gardens too completely from the passerby to permit of any glimpses. This is true also of New York's neighboring countryside. This is pleasanter, of course, for the dwellers in these verdant spots, but does not make it so interesting for the tourist driving through the land. It is the glimpses of fine houses, artistically laid out grounds, gardens blazing with many colors, populous tennis courts, and behind and beyond all these the shimmering, iridescent lake which makes Chicago's north shore a delectable district, while the same gay and friendly foreground backed by fertile fields and dusky woodlands surrounds it on the west and south.

In Other Parts.

With attractive and luxurious country clubs furnishing each community with golf courses, tennis courts, swimming pools, and opportunities for social gatherings; with excellent roads making communication easy and speedy; with, for north shoreites, Ravinia's open air opera, like a priceless jewel in a matchless setting, one would think there would be small inducement for dwellers in and around Chicago to wander during the summer time. Yet even these pleasant conditions are not adequate to keep some of our restless citizens at home during what are the best offerings as to weather of the twelve months of the various seasons provided by the temperate zone.

There is Mrs. William G. Hibbard at this moment wandering in Scandinavia, having visited Iceland, the North cape, the fjords of Norway, and adjacent high spots. She leaves behind her in Winnetka a delightful house and garden equipped in every way for summer enjoyment and diversions. Her sister and brother-in-law, the William B. Hales, who are her next door neighbors, though their house and gardens are quite hidden by shrubbery and groves, are likewise wandering, having gone to England to attend the great Bar association meeting in London at the moment.

Col. and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis and Mrs. Jacob Baur are other Chicagoites who are taking part in this important gathering. Mrs. Baur has taken a course in law and was admitted to the bar some years ago.

Still others who seek more than summer can give them in this part of the world are Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick, who have a delightful and up to date camp in the woods of Wisconsin to which they are taking a party of friends, leaving Lake Forest tomorrow in a special car. Their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, Mrs. Frank C. Letts, and Miss Muriel McCormick, all of whom will probably stay about ten days fishing, tramping, leading that delicious and restful open air existence which is more life giving than any cure yet invented.

Here, There, and Everywhere.

When they return from this outing Mrs. McKinlock and Miss McCormick are planning a tour of eastern summer resorts, going first to visit Mrs. Warren Salisbury at her beautiful country place, Thor Court, in the Berkshires, near Pittsfield, Mass., and then to stop with Mrs. Lawrence Viles at Hyannisport, Mass. On their return it is possible they, with Mr. McKinlock, may pack up and go to Europe for a brief sojourn. If they do this it will mean that Chicago will not see much of the McKinlocks, who have given up their apartment on the Lake Shore drive and intend to make their new home in Florida and their place at Lake Forest their principal places of residence, using as headquarters in Chicago one or the other of the many comfortable hostelries which are undermining home life in our once highly domestic city.

The McKinlocks' Florida abode is going to be sufficiently alluring to warrant their desertion of their native city in its favor. It is to be of Spanish architecture, a style especially suitable to the country discovered by Ponce de Leon, and that harmonizes perfectly with the semi-tropical landscape, the clattering palm trees, the blazing bougainvillea, the scarlet poinsettia and other exotic vegetation. It is delightfully situated on a neck of sandy land which lies between the battering, fiercely blue sea and the tranquil, mirroring lake. They will get all the bracing ocean breezes that blow and also see the southern sun set behind a barrage of palms on the further mainland.

They will be part of as cosmopolite a society as can be found in our country these days, for the winter colony at Palm Beach is made up of people from, not only all over the land, but from distant countries. The glories of fashionable Europe having been considerably dimmed by the world war, the rich and luxury loving Americans are creating at Palm Beach and in other mild winter resorts, settings sufficiently gay, picturesque and sumptuous to lure lovers of this kind of life from remote countries.

Off to Provincetown.

Others who are abandoning the north shore at one of its loveliest, most amiable, and seductive moments are Arthur Aldis and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis. This trio is going to spend some time at Provincetown, Mass., that enterprising artistic community where Mrs. Arthur Aldis is settled for the summer. She went there because of her interest in matters dramatic.

At Provincetown is established a cult, composed of persons who are not satisfied with what is now accepted as

MISS ELIZABETH CHASE.

Among society's most ardent and accomplished equestriennes are Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., Miss Elizabeth Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase of Lake Forest, and Mrs. William E. Swift, all of whom were enthusiastic attendants during the last two days at the annual Hinsdale horse show at the Mayslake Hunt club.

Mrs. Bowen, who prefers to ride side saddle, a method of mounting more common in England and on the continent than in this country, rode several of the horses from the stables of Benjamin Leslie Behr yesterday and Friday, as also did Mr. Bowen. The Bowens, like Miss Chase, find recreation in the far western places, where they spend much of their time in the saddle.

Miss Chase, who is photographed with Golden Sunset, which she rode in the recent horse show at the South Shore Country club, manages to spend most of her time astride a horse. She is frequently seen on the bridle paths in Lake Forest, and her trips away from this region are wont to take her to Arizona or a western ranch, where riding is even a more rugged and appropriate sport. Both Miss Chase and her sister, Miss Janet Chase, were mounted on entries in the show at Hinsdale.

An accident to Strike Breaker, recently purchased by Mrs. Swift, prevented her from riding the thoroughbred as she had planned in the Mayslake show, but she was an interested spectator at the ringside.

drama. Between you and me, I don't blame them, either, though whether they are on the right track is another matter. They have made a theater out of a shed on a pier. They have assembled a company of semi-professionals, and are working out a triple alliance of playwrights, players, and playhouse—the three p's, like this column, you see—which may evolve something of value to American drama.

A similar movement is going on all over this country. I've forgotten how many little theaters and other similar institutions exist today throughout the land, but it is a formidable number and manifests a widespread interest in the subject.

Before going to Provincetown, however, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis are going to the School of International Politics at Williamstown which opens its sixth season there on Aug. 1. Others who will attend this interesting institution are Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Collier, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Macpherson, Mr. and Mrs. Perry M. Shepard, and Henry J. Patten.

Back to the Fold.

The numerous Farwell connection is rejoicing in the approaching return of one of the younger members of the family, Albert Farwell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Farwell. For several years he and his wife and children have been living in New York. Business now brings him back to Chicago. He has already bought a house in Lake Forest, one that was originally built by the "Jamie" Evanses about a quarter of a century ago, on Deerpath avenue, where it crosses the Milwaukee and St. Paul tracks. It is sheltered from the nearby railroad by a thick little grove of trees and is a green and secluded spot. Like so many of the young married set, the Albert Farwells, who arrive in September, will live in Lake Forest all the year round.

Others who are a recent acquisition to the winter colony in this fashionable suburb are the Robert Sturgises, who have taken a cottage there for three years, at the end of which time they expect to build a home on a piece of property not far from Mrs. Sturgis' cousins, the young Cyrus McCormicks. Still another young couple are Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hubbard Jr., who are building a house in a neighborhood populous with similar young married couples. The junior Charles Edward Browns, the Donald B. Douglases, the Thomas Cowleses, the Leslie Wheelers, the Wayne Chatfield-Taylors, and the William Mitchell Blairs all live in this district.

The winter life in Lake Forest for young people is gay. There are many outdoor parties, with skating, snowshoeing, and other winter sports, besides any number of dinners and dances. It is a healthy life for the children as well as for the parents, which is the reason given by most of those who make their homes in these suburban communities for so doing. It has its drawbacks, however, in that in a large measure it cuts off these dwellers in country districts from opera, theaters, concerts, lectures, and the other things that make for culture in a large city, and which distinguish the urbanite from the provincial. Bridge and mah jongg are entertaining time destroyers, and they are nothing else. They do not develop in their devotees any stronger brain powers, any keener vision, any more alert understanding of the mental processes of others. They merely serve to pass that enormously valuable and irretrievable possession, time, in such fashion that it leaves nothing of value behind it to enrich and ennoble life.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Lederer of 6356 Kenmore avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn Jeannette, to Alan H. Keefer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Keefer of the Chicago Beach hotel.

The writer speaks thus bitterly because she, too, feels the fascination of bridge and mah jongg and has the same animosity against those who are able to indulge without limit their taste for these two diversions that a bon vivant feels against another mortal who can and does eat and drink everything and as much as he wants to, and, believe me, I've marked more bitter hatred in this connection, that of the would-be eater against the devourer of everything, than any aroused by religious differences. We are always hardest on those failings to which we are most susceptible.

Big Baseball Benefit.

Next Sunday is going to be a big day at the Chicago National league baseball park—what you and I and the next man generally call Cub park. The big match between the Algonquin Indians and THE TRIBUNE team will be played that afternoon. The gate proceeds are to be turned over to THE TRIBUNE Ice Fund and the Camp Algonquin Fund, the fresh air camp run for the benefit of city bound mothers and children whose only other outlook during the hot months is the sun baked, smoke hung city streets. It is run by the United Charities of Chicago, and THE TRIBUNE each summer opens a subscription department for its benefit. The baseball game will be a real tussle, as the players on both sides are experienced and in good practice.

Sidney Smith will be at the bat, Carey Orr will wear the catcher's mask, Richard Henry Little will umpire (a most perilous job), Carl Ed will make announcements, while Frank Willard will make home runs.

The world of fashion, marshaled by Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, chairman of the Algohquin benefit committee, is taking an unusual interest in the affair. Mrs. Chadwick's committee includes Mrs. Philip D. Armour, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter, Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. John V. Farwell, Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, and Mrs. George A. McKinlock. Mrs. Chadwick has enlisted the services of a band of debutantes to sell boxes—the Misses Mari Smith, Mary Meeker, Laura Thompson, Marjorie King, Alice Coonley, Barbara Kirk, and Jane Warner. On her list of patrons are, besides those already mentioned, the Messrs. and Mmes. Edward Bennett, Samuel T. Chase, Clyde M. Carr, Francis R. Dickinson, Francis C. Farwell, James O. Heyworth, R. R. McCormick, David J. Malloy, Ralph Poole, Louis Wasey, Donald Wegg, Tiffany Blake, A. B. Dick, Albert M. Day, and Slason Thompson.

The boxes are only $10, and hold eight people. The general admission is $1, so a seat in a box costs only a quarter of a dollar more than one in the grandstand or elsewhere. Those whose summer is spent in green and flowery places should be especially tender and generous towards those whose fate is the hot and odoriferous city during the same period.

MISS RUTH FRANCES HAMBLEN.
[Melvin H. Sykes Photo.]

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ruth Hamblen of 5445 Fulton street to James F. Truman of Des Moines, Ia., and Chicago, by Miss Hamblen's grandmother, Mrs. Ruth Stewart. The wedding will take place in the fall.

No Onwentsia Horse Show.

Austin Niblack, secretary of the Lake Forest Horse Show association, announces that on account of the recent destruction by fire of the Onwentsia club stables it will not be possible to hold the customary horse show this year. The burned stables are being rebuilt bigger and better than they ever were before, and will have house room for 150 horses. They will be fireproof—the stables, not the horses.

This decision eliminates one of the most entertaining and picturesque features of the north shore summer season. These horse shows were originally founded, it must be about thirty years ago, to help provide funds for the building and support of the little Episcopal church, the Church of the Holy Spirit. There was much jocose comment at the time at the rather sporty air it gave this new institution to be, as it were, started on horseback. At those early horse shows there was an impressive assemblage of four in hands, high, two wheeled dog carts; low swung, C spring victorias; smart looking phaetons (driven by the ladies to whom they belonged), as well as sleek riding horses and bobtailed hunters.

Those simple hearted, cheerful times seem as far away from this gaseous motor age as are the days of Roman chariot races. There was an elegance, an aristocratic air to horse shows in that era which one finds nowhere nowadays. What we have gained in speed and excitement we have paid for in other ways. Speed and excitement are the motto all through the many details that make up modern life. Repose, courtesy, serious reading, and careful thought have disappeared in order to make room for these two exacting masters.

Backward and Forward.

Among the many social gayeties of Lake Forest last week was the circus and barn dance in Louis Swift's big barn which a band of young women, under the leadership of Mrs. Thomas Cowles, organized to help raise money for the roof garden which the Children's Memorial hospital has established for its tubercular patients. The committee immediately in charge of this entertainment was, besides Mrs. Cowles, chairman, Mrs. William M. Blair and Miss Harriet McLaughlin. Mrs. Cowles is also chairman of the Junior auxiliary committee of this institution, a group of young women who work in the hospital and in the Rummage Shop and in social service work for the hospital.

Last evening the gay world of Lake Forest danced by starlight, moonlight, and electric light of the Lawrence Armours' tennis court which had been converted for the evening into a dance platform. Or, I should perhaps say, at this writing they expected to do so, at a dance given by the Armours and John Borden.

Next Saturday Col. and Mrs. Noble Judah are tempting fate in this season of coquettish and whimsical weather by sending out invitations for a dinner dance which will be given partly in their charming courtyard and partly in their equally attractive house. Everyone hopes they will have as fine a summer night for this affair as they had a year or two ago when they gave a similar open air banquet for Gen. Gouraud and his staff, an entertainment which was generally conceded by all who were present to touch the high water mark for this delightful form of hospitality. Mrs. Judah is sure to have entirely original and picturesque features for the party, and every one invited is looking forward to the occasion with more than ordinary interest.

The Judahs are among the devoted attendants at Ravinia opera. It is getting to be more and more the mode among the north shore's smart set to go to that temple of music and to study and enjoy the performances of that remarkable and wonderful company of artists. Among those whom this chronicler has seen there most often recently have been Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Poole, Mrs. and Mrs. Cyrus Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Martin, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Arthur Meeker Jr., and Miss Mary Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bennett, Mrs. George D. Giving Up Their Treasure.

News has come to Mrs. William Goudy that her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Leigh, have recently bought Mrs. George Keppel's house on Grosvenor street. This is one of the finest houses in London. It is next door to the one in which they have been living for several years and which they lately sold. Mrs. Keppel's is a much larger and more beautiful house than theirs, though the latter was a delightful, sunny, and charming abode. But their new purchase will permit of much bigger parties and more sumptuous dinners.

Mrs. Leigh is universally conceded to be one of the most popular as well as one of the smartest and most beautiful women in London society today. The Leighs have three young children, two daughters and a son. They have taken a place in Scotland for the summer, having recently given up Lee's court, which has been the home of Mr. Leigh's family for two generations. Lee's court was one of the show places in Leicestershire, but required an army of retainers to keep up its vast gardens, its many acres, its game preserves, its big stables, the palatial house itself, and all the other appurtenances of an English country estate. In renouncing it the Leighs joined the increasing throng of stoical Britishers who are doing likewise with hardly a murmur, though it wrings their hearts to give up what a thousand years has rooted deeply into English custom, that landed gentry which has furnished England with much of her bulwarks, her roving sea captains, her famous generals and especially with so many of her statesmen.

But do you hear any laments from them over there? Not one!

We Ask Men
To protect their hair
By Edna Wallace Hopper
I speak for all women when I say that we want men to keep their looks. And above all, their hair.
The woman do that. You would never forgive us if we did not. We beg you to follow our example.

My whole career on the stage has depended largely on my hair. So many years ago I went to France and secured the best hair helps she knew. And I have kept up with every new discovery.
The result is my hair as you see it. It is thick and lustrous, finer far than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Now countless women who use what I use are attaining like results.
I am offering to women the best I have found, and men are also welcome. My Hair Youth combines the utmost that modern science knows. I am sure that no one knows anything for the hair which does what this combination does.
I apply it with an eye-dropper directly to the scalp. Applying tonics to the hair is ridiculous. The whole thing lies in the scalp, in the roots, and there my Hair Youth goes.
It combats the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. It tones and stimulates the scalp. Hair thrives on such a soil as flowers thrive by like methods.
I believe that my Hair Youth now combines the greatest hair helps in existence. I have never seen anything else which brought comparable results. Now I have placed it in every drug store, on every toilet counter. All who desire may obtain it. The name is Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth. It will amaze and delight you. I authorize every dealer to return the price to anyone who claims the slightest disappointment.
I shall send you a trial bottle if you will mail me this coupon. Please do that if you have any wish to protect and develop your hair.

ART AND ARTISTS

Primitive Man the Theme of Norton Murals

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE are three of the one man exhibitions at the Art institute which may be grouped together if only for the extremely ineffectual reason that they were thrown open to the public on the same day. Two of the exhibitions are found in a single gallery, and the other shares a room with four canvases belonging more properly to the permanent collections of the institute.

Possibly it is as well to begin with the John W. Norton murals. In point of time, they represent the beginning of human life and adventure on this planet. Subdued in coloring, they are splendidly effective. Nothing distracts from the vivid action that Mr. Norton in each picture, as in a chapter of a book, faithfully reproduces. The best example of this is undoubtedly the "Before Man," a scene showing a jungle when the saber tooth tiger ruled supreme. Facing the snarling brute is a group of monkey-men, hairy, hideous, muscular, the human frame disguised in ape face and skin.

The series of murals, twelve is the contemplated number, is to be installed in the Frank G. Logan Archaeological museum at Beloit, Wis. Five finished paintings are in the present exhibit. They show the artist has spent much time in study of primitive man and his habits. One interesting conception is of the first men crossing the upper regions of the Pacific, venturing from Asia to Alaska in a dugout canoe. Another group is pictured around a camp fire, where one of the men of the Neanderthal type is building a blaze with flints, and a woman, a baby balanced on one arm, is stirring the flame.

A fourth mural is called "The Lake Dwellers." It depicts a village on one of the Swiss lakes, a peaceful and domestic scene filled with friendly barter and talk. The tiny house has a thatched roof and rests on piles driven into the lake, a method of construction devised for protection. A platform or porch is made of poles. A group is disporting in leisurely fashion upon this platform. In the distance are mountains and a man tending a number of animals—goats or cows or sheep.

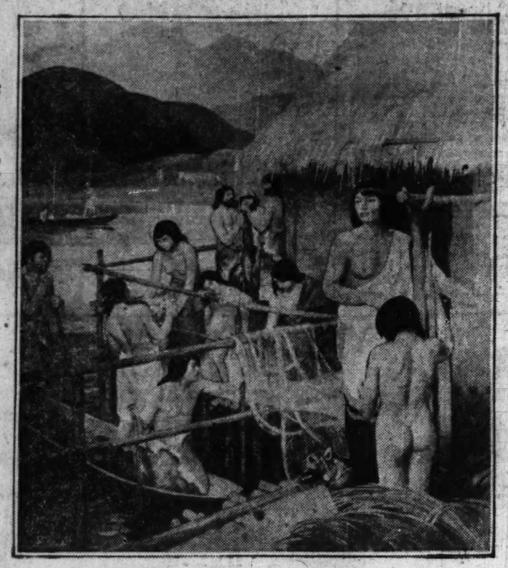
Another picture shows men spearing fish in a stream, and this, too, is well done and authentic in detail.

The two exhibitions hanging on opposite walls in a nearby gallery are those of paintings by Joseph Birren and paintings by Frank C. Peyraud. They are admirably suited to be hung together, though a more contemplative mood pervades the Swiss landscapes of Peyraud than the robust glimpses of the Cape Cod coast by Birren. These paintings by Joseph Birren have great charm. An atmosphere of salt air and wide spaces breathes through them. Even the tangled bits of stream and woods have a feeling of life and vigorous onrush to adventure.

Mr. Birren paints with a quick brush. The effect is rapid, jerked, quivering with sentient emotion. His color is alive; his landscape natural. Not too finished, yet surely not to be called unfinished, his pictures possess the power of making the untouched country appeal strongly to you. They make you long to forsake trodden ways and discover for yourself the secret places, the haunts of the trickling stream that falls into a deep pool at the base of a moss covered rock, or the asylum of sun flecked leaves where the wild strawberry hides and the first blackberries ripen in late summer.

There are several of just such places in his pictures. Some are really in Illinois—we have his word for it—others on the Maine coast. The most perfect trout pool, where a brook has passed in the shadow of a huge stone to spread itself into a deep blue mirror, bears a most incongruous title—"Gem Studded Coast"—either my reading of the painting is at fault or some mistake was made in the catalogue of names.

Another fascinating little picture is "Mill Pond of Ipswich," a lovely bit of rustic setting with water and bridge in the foreground and two shy cottages peering from the safety of leafy barriers in the background. It is a whimsical, poetic bit of pure loveliness.



"The Lake Dwellers of Switzerland," by Frank W. Norton, is one of twelve murals to be installed in the Frank G. Logan Archaeological museum at Beloit, Wis. At present, for the summer weeks, it is one of a group of five to be on exhibition at the Art institute. These murals depict in graphic form the customs and costumes of primitive man. They have historic as well as artistic interest.

There are many pictures you will hate to miss. For example, the windblown hilltop of "Asolean" and the fairy blue landscape of fields, hills, village and sea of "Rockport"; the old tree whispering, over a stream, secrets withheld from the tangled thickets that crowd to listen, called, so matter of factly, "Saginaw Trail"; the broad salt flats, sun warmed, windblown, of "Eastward", another tangle of trees "Pattern Weaving"; a long view down a fascinating shore, cut by a jagged protuberance of rock wall and emphasized by a fisherman's cottage, "The Harbor Wall"; and the "Ravine," a wooded dell sweet with the song of magic brook.

Frank C. Peyraud is a native of Switzerland. He was born at Bulle, in 1858, but for so long has he been in America and Chicago that this now he considers his homeland. His art training was acquired principally in Paris, where he was a pupil of the Ecole des Beaux Arts and of Bonnat and Freiburg. When he came to America he continued his studies at the Art institute. He is represented in the permanent collection of the Art institute by "After Rain, Chicago," which was presented to the museum about ten years ago by the Friends of American Art.

The present exhibition is of paintings made on a recent visit to Switzerland. They are very French and very finished and very charming. An air of composure sits well on them. Nothing, apparently, is unpremeditated. In composition, color, subject, each step has been considered before it has been taken. It is the fruit of careful thinking and exact training, lit, too, by a spirit that knows choice in selection of picturesque subject.

Perhaps the loveliest paintings are those of "Bellegarde," "An Old Church, Gruyères," "Afternoon in Eliney," "Spring, Gruyères," and "After Rain, Gruyères"—a lovely village Gruyères must be. These corners and bits of it make you long to go and explore its fascinations at once.

Then there are the lonely heights of the Alps, where the snows linger from year to year: "An Alpine Village," "Eternal Snows," and "In the High Alps: Zinal Glacier." These are of interest, too, and have a lonely beauty of their own. "The Woodland Path" brings us into more homely surroundings, and, with its trees, road, and distant mountains, is a canvas rich in beauty.

Randolph Rogers, an American sculptor who died in 1892 in Rome, is represented at the Art institute by "Lydia the Blind Girl" and one or two other groups as well. The bronze doors of the Capitol at Washington were carved by Mr. Rogers. Waterloo now claims to have been his birthplace, and a monument to his genius is under consideration for erection there next year. Lorado Taft gives him fair praise in his "The History of American Sculpture."

Leopold Seyffert has been granted a leave of absence from the department of portraiture in the Art institute art school and is planning to spend most of it painting in and around Vienna.

Prof. Wimmer of the costume design department in the institute school will also be in Vienna this summer.

Two other faculty members, Miss Grace Conard and Miss Louise Perrett, will spend the summer in Europe.

Laura Van Pappelendam is arranging to motor through the region of Santa Fé, and will spend a part of the summer in the Grand canyon, at a point where the Colorado river winds a mile below the surface. The west is splendidly adapted to this artist's vigorous palette.

Two of the graduate students of the Art institute school, John Matthews and George Mallory, have left for the orient, where they will tour India and paint the picturesque scenes and costumes of the natives.

Locked In.

One evening in getting ready for a party I found myself locked in the bathroom. Owing to a defective lock the key would not turn. As the bathroom was three stories from the ground there was not much chance to escape by the window.

Some one heard my call for help and tried key after key, to no avail. Then, thinking the engineer might be able to help me, I sent for him. He could do nothing with the lock, so had to take the transom out and climb through, while I held a chair for him to step on. As he had a game leg and a boil on his neck, it was a painful process for him to climb through such a small opening. He was successful, but found he would have to take the door from the hinges to set me free.

This took but a few minutes, which seemed to me like hours before I was allowed to step out before the number of people who had gathered in the hall.

However, I went to the party and thought I had a good excuse for being late. T. J. M.

Taking Advantage.

I was the only girl in the office, and as every one including my boss had gone out for the day, I took advantage of their absence and washed my stockings, which had been splashed with mud. I hung them in front of the electric fan in order to have them dry quickly, and returned to my desk. When they were almost dry, in stepped my boss with one of his best customers. As he was nearer the fan than I, he took down my stockings and handed them to me. In agony, I remained at my desk with my feet hidden, until he went out, half an hour later. Since then I blush every time our customer comes in. R. N.

Making an Impression.

It was my first day at work in the toy section of a big department store. My fondest hope was to make a good impression. My chance came sooner than I expected.

A woman and small boy came up to my counter and asked for a whistle. The child hesitated between a policeman's whistle and one fashioned like a bird. I had just caught sight of the manager and, wishing to show him that I could make a sale, I hastily grabbed the policeman's whistle and blew it, thinking I would hasten the child's decision. The sound attracted everybody's attention, and just then I remembered that one of the rules for employes was never to demonstrate.

Out of breath and his eyes flashing angrily, the manager strode up to me and said, in a voice that carried to the other end of the room: "Miss, the children in the playroom are waiting for you to entertain them." J. W.

Into the Waves.

I was dressed for church on Sunday morning, but went down to the lake shore of our college town for a few minutes before starting. Drawn up to one of the piers was a beautiful new canoe, whose owners had apparently left it for a few moments without a guard.

Wishing to try it, I stepped in idly and had paddled a short distance when I saw two young university men, the obvious owners, racing down to the shore. Making a quick movement to turn back, I upset the canoe and to my consternation found myself in the water while the paddles, cushions, and other appurtenances of the overturned canoe floated away with the waves.

The young men managed to fish me out of the water and I felt like a wet hen with my soaked hair streaming down my back and rivers of water running from every fold of my clothes. Too embarrassed to offer a word of explanation, I gathered my drenched finery about me and fled for shelter without a backward look. K. F.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER

North Dakota now has eleven women county officials, in addition to the office of county superintendent of schools and state superintendent of schools to which positions women have been eligible since statehood. The state also has two women members of the legislature.

In Burma the highest ambition of a wife is to be able to maintain her husband in lordly idleness and to supply him with abundant funds for cock fighting, bullock cart racing, and gambling.

When her husband insisted that she milk the cows before doing her regular housework, Mrs. George Walter of South Bend, Ind., filed suit for a divorce.

Miss Birdie Reeves, aged 16 years, of St. Louis, has been adjudged the world's fastest typist. She recently demonstrated that she could write at record breaking speed and at the same time recite Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address."

France has just awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor to Mme. Moll-Weiss, one of its foremost domestic science experts.

More than 200 women will attend the Republican national convention as delegates and alternates.

Why Artists Want Their Models to Use Princess Pat Natural Tint

A surprising tribute from the profession in all the world most critical of women's beauty

ONE of the most curious and interesting side-lights on the virtues of Princess Pat Tint is its almost universal use in the studios of famous artists.

In explanation, a well known Chicago painter says: "Princess Pat Tint is the only rouge-shade I have ever found that gives my models an absolutely life-like color, one that I can transfer to my canvases without modification."

This tribute is even more remarkable than the mere words convey—for artists invariably paint in the clear, cold "north light" that is merciless in revealing false notes of color. And Princess Pat Tint withstands this test without a single hint of artificiality. Think of it!

Now, being a woman, you have tried to match odd silks. What a task it is. You can get almost the right shade, but not quite! With the usual orange rouges, you can get almost a natural color—but, ah madam, not quite!

And why? There lies the fascinating secret of Princess Pat Tint, the secret of the difference between it and all other rouge-shades known. Here is the explanation: Princess Pat Tint contains a certain ingredient—a so-called "variant"—which will change color on the cheeks instantly the Tint is applied. Moreover this ingredient changes differently on every type of skin. Have you ever watched the play of softly colored lights with which such beautiful effects are achieved in a Belasco play? You have seen pure white shade marvelously into delicate rose, and deepen or diminish at the will of some one unseen.

This is exactly what happens with Princess Pat Tint—except that Nature herself is the mistress of effects. She takes the warmth of your skin, considers it with its texture and moisture. With these to give control, she permits the secret ingredient in Princess Pat to vary and modify and change until she has exactly the right coloring for your particular type—and then arrests the change.

No human skill can do this for you with the fixed, unchanging colors of ordinary rouge. That is why so many rouges which resemble Princess Pat Tint in outward appearance, but which lack the "variant," do not give Princess Pat naturalness. They simply cannot. Princess Pat Tint is made with a degree of care and skill which amounts to a fine art. It is a triumph in balancing delicate ingredients which has its counterpart only in the delicate color values Nature imparts to the most beautiful flowers.

Added to its other virtues, Princess Pat Tint is waterproof—so thoroughly waterproof that even a swim in fresh or salt water will not affect it. So if you want Princess Pat effect—and naturally every woman does—you must use genuine Princess Pat Tint. There is no substitute.

And to enable you to know the startling difference, you may send for—and receive free—a miniature trial compact of the original Princess Pat Tint.

Better Blackberry or Raspberry Jam Easily Made in 15 Minutes

Tastes Better—Looks Better—Costs Less and Never Fails

By ANN PROCTOR

Everyone who likes fresh berry pie or preserves will love good blackberry or raspberry jam. Particularly when all the flavor of ripe blackberries or raspberries is preserved in the jam. Until now, however, an expert was required to make them, and they have been expensive. CERTO, the natural "jell" making property of fruit, has solved the problem so that everyone can make and eat a lot of these delicious preserves.

To make blackberry or raspberry jam by the quick and easy CERTO method, follow this simple recipe:

Crush about 2 quarts ripe berries in separate portions, so that each berry is mashed. This allows fruit to quickly absorb the sugar during the short boil. (Measure 4 level cups (2 lbs.) crushed berries into large kettle, add 7 level cups (3 lbs.) sugar and mix well. Use hottest fire and stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one full minute, remove from fire and stir in ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) CERTO. From time jam is taken off fire allow to stand not over 5 minutes by the clock, before pouring. In the meantime, skim, and stir occasionally to cool slightly. Then pour quickly.

Use same recipe for strawberry or loganberry jam.

This CERTO process banishes all the guess work or worry as perfect results are certain when a simple recipe is followed. Unlike the old method "pound for pound" mixture boiled for thirty or more minutes, with considerable juice and flavor of the fruit being boiled away, the economical CERTO method requires only one minute's boiling and thereby saves the juice to make one-half more jam. That's the only reason why more sugar is used with CERTO.

CERTO is a pure fruit product—contains no gelatine or preservative. CERTO positively saves time, fruit, flavor and guess work. It makes all kinds of jams and jellies—some you have never tasted before. CERTO is highly endorsed by national authorities and local cooking experts. Every woman who tried it recommends it to her friends and says she'll never be without it. Over seven million bottles were used last year.

The above recipe and nearly 100 other Jams, Jellies and Marmalades are in the CERTO Book of Recipes which is enclosed with every bottle of CERTO.

Get a bottle of CERTO from your grocer right away. Start the new—the sure, quick, economical way of making jams and jellies that keep indefinitely. You'll never return to the old "hit or miss" method. Make plenty of blackberry or raspberry jam this year—no home ever has too much.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Des Plaines Camp Meeting Closes Tonight

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

DES PLAINES camp meeting, which closes its sixty-fifth annual session this evening, will have as the preacher at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Bishop John M. Moore of Nashville, Tenn., of the Methodist Episcopal church, South. Bishop Moore is one of the leaders in the southern church who is seeking to unite into one denomination the two branches of the Methodist Episcopal church, representing a membership exceeding 7,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal church voted at the general conference in Springfield, Mass., in May, by a majority of 802 to 13, in favor of union, and the specially called general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, voted, on July 4, at Chattanooga, Tenn., to unite, by a majority of 297 to 75.

The question now goes to the various conferences of the two denominations for further discussion. If three-fourths of the conferences give a vote favorable to union, a general conference will be called, in which the union will formally take place.

Bishop Moore was a member of the joint commission on unification which drew up the plan of union. He was also a member of the joint commission on a church hymnal which the two denominations have been using in common for several years. He is also a member of the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America which represents thirty denominations, including both branches of Episcopal Methodism.

Bishop Moore was a student at Yale university, '91-'94, where he received the degree of Ph. D., having been previously graduated from Lebanon college. Later he studied at Leipzig and Neidelberg universities, Germany. He has been pastor of prominent churches in the south and editor of The Christian Advocate, the church official paper, and is the author or several books.

The Very Rev. Mgr. W. D. O'Brien, LL. D., who has been appointed pastor of St. John's Catholic church, 18th and South Clark streets, is having the rectory fitted up as a residence for the priests of the Catholic Extension society. Mgr. O'Brien is the diocesan director of the Church Extension society, and the purpose of the new pastorate is to combine the activities of the extension society with the spiritual care of workers in the downtown districts. St. John's is one of the old and important parishes of Chicago, but the shifting in residential areas has compelled the change, while at the same time it serves the double purpose of keeping alive a well known church and ministering to an important diocesan society.

THE REV. ASA J. FERRY, D. D.

Dr. Ferry, who has been pastor the last three years of the Edgewater Presbyterian church at Kenmore and Bryn Mawr avenues, announces that early in the fall work will begin on the erection of a completely equipped community house, which will be the first unit in a church plant costing not less than $500,000. The present assets of the church in subscriptions and salable property exceed $300,000. The new community house will have an assembly hall, social parlors, reading room, library, and gymnasium which will include bowling alleys and a running track. When the community house is completed it will be used for regular church services, while the new church auditorium is being erected on the site of the present church.

Dr. Ferry came to Chicago from Philadelphia, where he made a notable record as pastor of the Bethany Temple church. He took the church as a mission of the original Bethany church, known widely as the John Wanamaker church, led in the erection of two buildings and increased the membership of the church to 2,000. Recently a poll was taken among students of the various Presbyterian theological seminaries, and Dr. Ferry was ranked as a preacher fourth among the 10,000 ministers in the Presbyterian church. Dr. Ferry is a graduate of Macalester college, St. Paul, Minn., Princeton university, and Princeton Theological seminary. He was chairman last year of the evangelistic committee of the Chicago presbytery.

Dr. Ferry is maintaining this summer in the Edgewater church a daily vacation Bible school. "I regard it," he says, "as the finest teaching opportunity we have. It is a mistake to imagine that only the children from the slums and the foreign populations need such a school. It is equally adapted to the better residence districts and to the best English speaking populations."

The Rev. Louis C. Stumpf has resigned the pastorate of the Madison (Ill.) Presbyterian church to become field secretary of the Illinois Fundamentals association.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will be in Chicago next Thursday and Friday in attendance on the business of the world service commission. He is announced to preach in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York City, on Sunday, Aug. 17.

The Rev. Albert G. Johnson has resigned as pastor of the Albany Park Baptist church and accepted a call to the Temple Baptist church, Detroit, Mich. He will preach his farewell sermon in Chicago next Sunday.

The Rev. E. J. Hanhauser, S. J., assistant pastor of St. Ignatius church, will celebrate today the golden anniversary of his entrance into the Society of Jesus. Solemn high mass will be celebrated by the jubilarian at St. Ignatius, 6559 Glenwood avenue, at 11 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Alexander Burrowes, S. J. Father Hanhauser was born in Cincinnati, O., and educated there in St. Xavier college. In Chicago he has hitherto been identified with Holy Family parish and St. Ignatius college.

Important appointments in Catholic parishes are announced by the chancery office as follows: The Rev. H. M. Shea transferred from St. Patrick's, Kankakee, Ill., to St. Mathew's, Chicago; the Rev. E. B. McNally transferred from St. Columbanus, Chicago, to St. Patrick's, Kankakee; the Rev. A. C. Martin from St. John's, Glenwood, to St. Agnes', Chicago Heights; the Rev. Edmund P. Kelly from Blessed Sacrament, Chicago, to St. John's, Glenwood.

A correspondence course has been prepared for clergymen of all denominations who are reservists in the army by the chief of chaplains, United States army. The subjects include "Organization of the Army," "Administration, Discipline, and Courtesies," "Practical Duties of Chaplains," "Military Hygiene and First Aid," "Military Sociology," "Map Reading and Sketching," "Military Law," "American Political Institutions," "Rules of Land Warfare." Practical demonstrations and conferences for discussion will be held at the summer camps.

The St. James and Oakland Methodist Episcopal churches have united and are now holding services jointly in the Oakland church, Oakwood boulevard and Langley avenue. Today and next Sunday Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon of the St. James church will preach at both services. During August Dr. A. L. Young, Oakland pastor, will preach at all services. The united churches will soon begin to build the new St. James church, which was destroyed by fire, at Ellis avenue and 46th street.

The novena, the nine day preparation for the feast of St. Anne, July 26, will be held at St. Anne's shrine, 58th place and South California avenue, with exercises at 6, 7, 8, and 9:30 a. m. and 3, 7, and 8 p. m. There will be public processions today at 3 p. m. and on Tuesday, Friday, and Saturday at 8 p. m.

Prof. W. D. Schermerhorn, Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, will speak this evening at 7 o'clock at the union outdoor services of the Ravenswood churches at the Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A., Wilson and North Hermitage avenues, on the subject, "Twentieth Century Christianity." Daniel Jensen will sing.

The eighth annual joint convention of the Sunday schools, evangelical leagues, Christian endeavor and women's missionary societies of the Illinois conference of Evangelical churches will open at Naperville Park, Ill., next Tuesday and continue over the following Sunday. On July 28 the twenty-eighth annual camp meeting of the Illinois Evangelical churches will begin, continuing over Sunday, Aug. 3. Among the speakers at the convention will be Dr. Albert H. Gage of Chicago, Dr. J. A. Heck of Pennsylvania, Dr. C. A. Mock of Le Mars, Ia.; Prof. H. U. M. Leedy, musical director; Miss Alice Peters, Mrs. L. S. Stamm, and the Rev. W. L. Bollman. The Rev. W. B. Rilling of Oak Park is chairman of the camp meeting committee.

The annual report of the Congregational churches of the United States shows that Congregational churches have decreased 110 churches in numbers but have increased 3,322 in the number of members, property values having increased $8,412,461, bringing the total to $132,388,691. The benevolent offerings totaled $5,366,181, an increase for the year of $153,965.

The Rev. R. Jeske will preach at 11 o'clock today in the First St. Paul's Lutheran church, 1301 North La Salle street, the Rev. H. Kowert, pastor.

The Rev. William Augustus Simms has accepted a call to become rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, 4427 Drexel boulevard, and will begin his work on Sept. 7. He was born and educated in Newfoundland until his coming to Chicago, where he graduated from the Western Theological seminary. He was ordained to the diaconate and priesthood by Bishop Charles P. Anderson. Since June, 1921, he has been rector of Holy Communion church, Maywood.

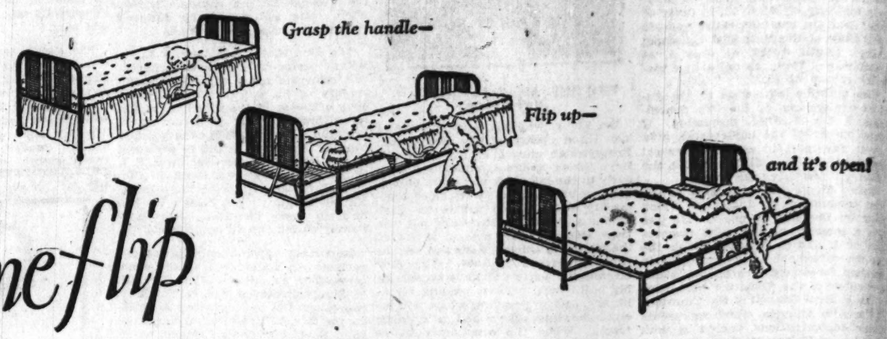
A Comfortable Bed by Night : A Couch by Day : Look for the Herz Name Near the Handle

HERZ
Double
DAY BED



One flip

The Double Day Bed with all the advantages you've always wanted!

The Herz Double Day Bed has all the advantages you have sought, a genuine innovation in double day bed making—beautiful appearance, long life and complete utility.

It opens with "One Flip"—the simplest and easiest operation in the world. Children can do it as well as their father or mother. No pulling—no tugging! Just grasp the handle and raise. This bed is 27 inches wide when closed. One flip—and your full 54-inch double bed is ready. No scratched floors or rumpled rugs. No moving bed about. This will prove a revelation.

Both sides of this double day bed are of equal height. The mattress is of the same thickness throughout. Heavy coil springs in both front and back do away with the usual "hard edges and the ridge through the center." A large, sanitary, well-ventilated and easily accessible storage space for bedding; adjustable head rest. These and other features of interest appeal at once.

The Herz Double Day Bed is built in a large number of beautiful period and modern designs and finishes, in metal, wood and reed, at a wide range of prices. The 100% pure layer felt mattress comes in a great variety of handsome coverings. You can find exactly the type and finish you desire for your home. In making your selection, you have your choice of coil type or link type springs—either of which will give the ultimate in sleeping comfort.

Now—HERZ DUO-COIL BED SPRING, No. 701, for Every Bed in the Home

The Herz Duo-Coil Bed Spring, just perfected, is now available. This coil spring has a perfected coil which is combined in double decks, or two entire sets of springs superimposed one on the other. With special processed steel in construction this gives an unparalleled sleeping surface. Sleep on a Herz Duo-Coil restores energy—gives maximum relaxation—conforms to dormant muscular pressure. It is a boon to sleepers harassed by nightmares—fatigued by insomnia. The Herz Duo-Coil has been invented and built to bring peace and rest. Containing many more coils than the average bed spring, it costs but a trifle more than the ordinary spring at that.

HERZ BED COMPANY • 2320 South Western Avenue • CHICAGO

Ample Storage for Bedding—instantly accessible when the bed is opened. To store away, simply fold the bedding and flip back. This puts it out of sight completely. The bedding storage space is six inches deep, sanitary and well ventilated.

No Hard Center Ridge or hard iron bar where the springs join in this double day bed. The springs join perfectly in the center. Both sides being of equal height, one side is just as comfortable as the other and the mattress always lies absolutely level.

Soft Edges Front and Back are made possible by the use of heavy coiled springs which give the maximum of buoyancy—and yet, the edge can't sag. The Herz Double Day Bed makes a comfortable seat for living room, sun parlor or wherever it may be used.

The Adjustable Head Rest is an exceptional feature of this double day bed. It is raised in a jiffy and puts your head and shoulders in the most natural, comfortable position for genuine relaxation.

Look for This Suggestion Folder

Wherever a Herz Double Day Bed is shown, you will find attached to it a folder which gives suggestions on various uses in the home and on circumstances under which a day bed will prove a great and lasting benefit. Be sure to secure this tag-folder.

OWN YOUR OWN HOME.
IN ONE OF THE NEW DE LUXE APARTMENTS OF THE South Shore Co-operative

Located one block from Jackson Park and the South Shore Drive on the Southwest Corner of Cornell-av. and Sixty-Eighth-st. [lot 210x196 feet] in the heart of the best section of the South Shore district.

The finest and best appointed building in the co-operative field, consisting of 7, 6, 5 and 4 rooms. Every bedroom has a private tile bath, equipped with showers. Floors thoroughly deadened with Flaxlinum. Casement windows and doors supplied with weather strips. Woodwork in either ivory, white or hand rubbed mahogany. Every apartment contains man size rooms planned like a private home. Nineteen steam heated garages with private street entrance—five 33 feet wide. Grounds and building represent $500,000.

40% SAVING IN RENTS.
Here are some facts well to know:
In the first place the co-operative plan of building has come to stay. Through it you will have a better apartment in better surroundings and save 40% over present rent costs.
Furthermore, in 7 years time the cost of 7 rooms apartment renting for $250 per month will cost $80 per month.
A 6 room $200 per month apartment $70 per month.
A 5 room $160 apartment $55.
A 4 room $100 apartment $35.
In the interim you will pay 40% less per month for these apartments than for those we are now building, thereby saving on the seven year loan. This will give you a cash equity at the end of the loan period of one and one-half times the cost of your stock plus the increase in property value. On this security your bank should loan you, provided you were in need of it, more cash than the original equity cost.
Now is the time to make your choice. They will be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1. An agent is on the ground at all times, and will gladly show prospective purchasers through the apartments.

TRIBUNE TOWER will be occupied before May 1, 1925. Reserve Your Space NOW!

The skeleton of Tribune Tower is already high above Michigan-blvd. In two months it will be complete—456 feet high—rising far above all surrounding buildings.

Its graceful, soaring lines will thereafter be clothed with Indiana limestone in variegated tones. The interior will be made beautiful with marble from Tennessee and from Italy, with English oak, Mexican mahogany and black walnut, with hand forged iron work and solid statuary bronze.

Chicago business men may then have office space such as they have never had before.

They may have offices in a structure internationally recognized as one of the architectural gems of the world—the crowning achievement in skyscraper construction—a structure built with ambition to make every interior detail worthy of its exterior beauty—a structure equipped with every comfort and convenience made possible by modern science and engineering.

No tenant will have an inferior office in Tribune Tower. Eleven floors only (13 to 23) are being leased—the remainder of the lower floors being used by The Tribune itself. Every office has a superb outlook over lake or loop. Therefore, the policy has been adopted of one rate to all tenants. Remember, Tribune Tower will be ready for occupancy in April, 1925. Reserve YOUR space NOW!

"It's Cheaper to Buy Brand New Furniture."
FACTORY SAMPLES OF
Furniture and Rugs of the Better Grades at Prices
50% TO 60%
LESS THAN RETAIL

Our factories have instructed us to dispose of all our samples during the exposition at the new Furniture Mart immediately.
Ordinarily we do not cater to retail trade, but in order to move our goods rapidly we find it necessary to open our display rooms to the public.
These goods that are displayed before retail dealers are, obviously, of better construction and finish than the average stock.
Among the living room furniture is everything that could be desired in the latest designs of coverings in mohairs, tapestries and damasks.
Exquisite dining room and bedroom furniture in walnut and mahogany and many odd pieces too numerous to mention that would beautify the home.
We will appreciate an opportunity to show you what we have. You will be under no obligation whatever to buy anything. Rarely does a person see our stock and leave without making a purchase.
If you care to drive down, park your car in front and our man will drive it around to the rear, where ample space for parking has been provided.
An early visit will be to your advantage. We are sure to dispose of our samples quickly at these prices.

25 YEARS IN THE AUTO TRADES.

We are building for the future just as carefully as when this business was originated. We believe our reconditioned cars to be superior to any used cars in the city. They cannot in any way be compared to the type of cars offered for sale on vacant lots. We guarantee title of ownership. These cars are twice inspected after being reconditioned. Once by our Service Department testers and then by the exacting

Automobile Testing Laboratory

whose methods and equipment are so complete that any make of car cannot carry their seal of approval without being in par excellent condition. Thus you are assured of

FULL VALUE

We maintain that our Used Cars are superior values to New Cars selling at comparable prices, because originally they were better built, better equipped, have higher grade material, are more comfortable, more economical and present an appearance that closely resembles new.

The Democratic Candidates

A CAMPAIGN BANNER

CUT HERE — CUT HERE

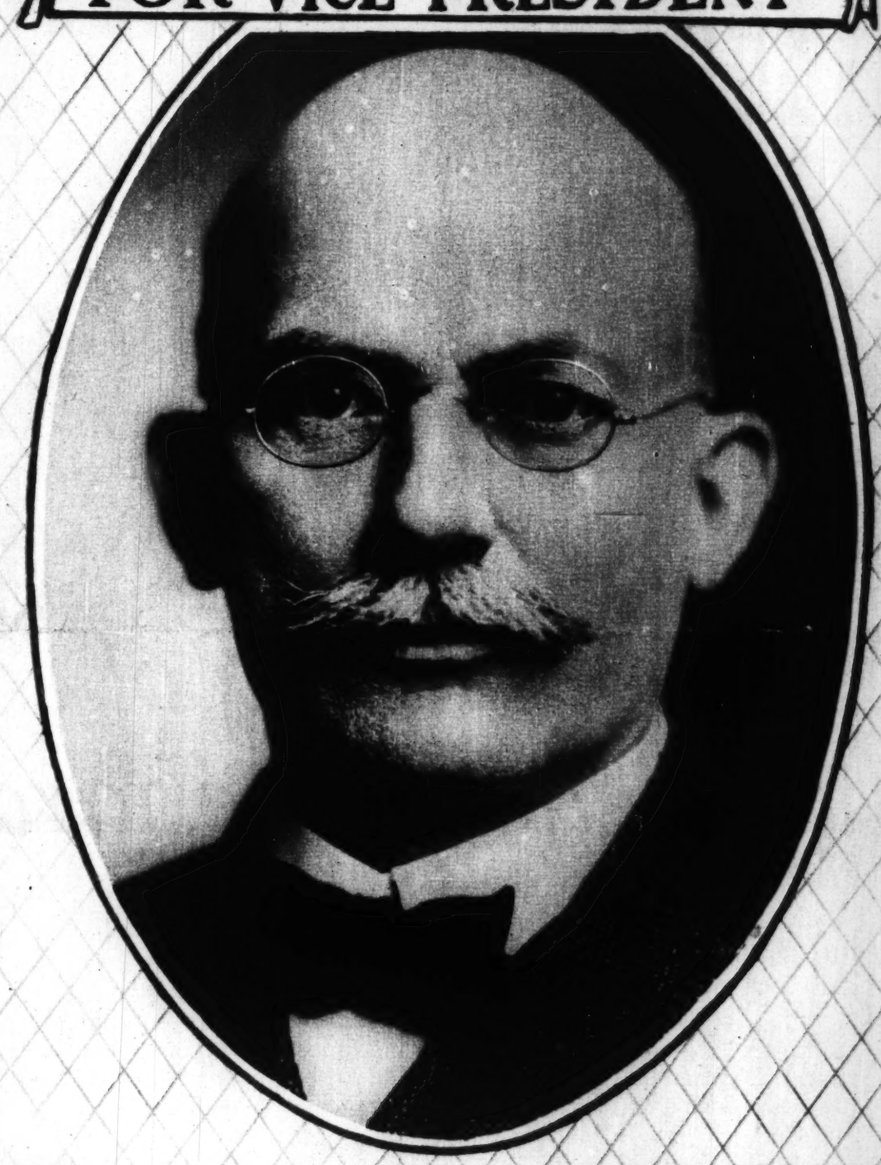
JOHN W. DAVIS
OF WEST VIRGINIA

FOR VICE PRESIDENT



CHARLES W. BRYAN
OF NEBRASKA

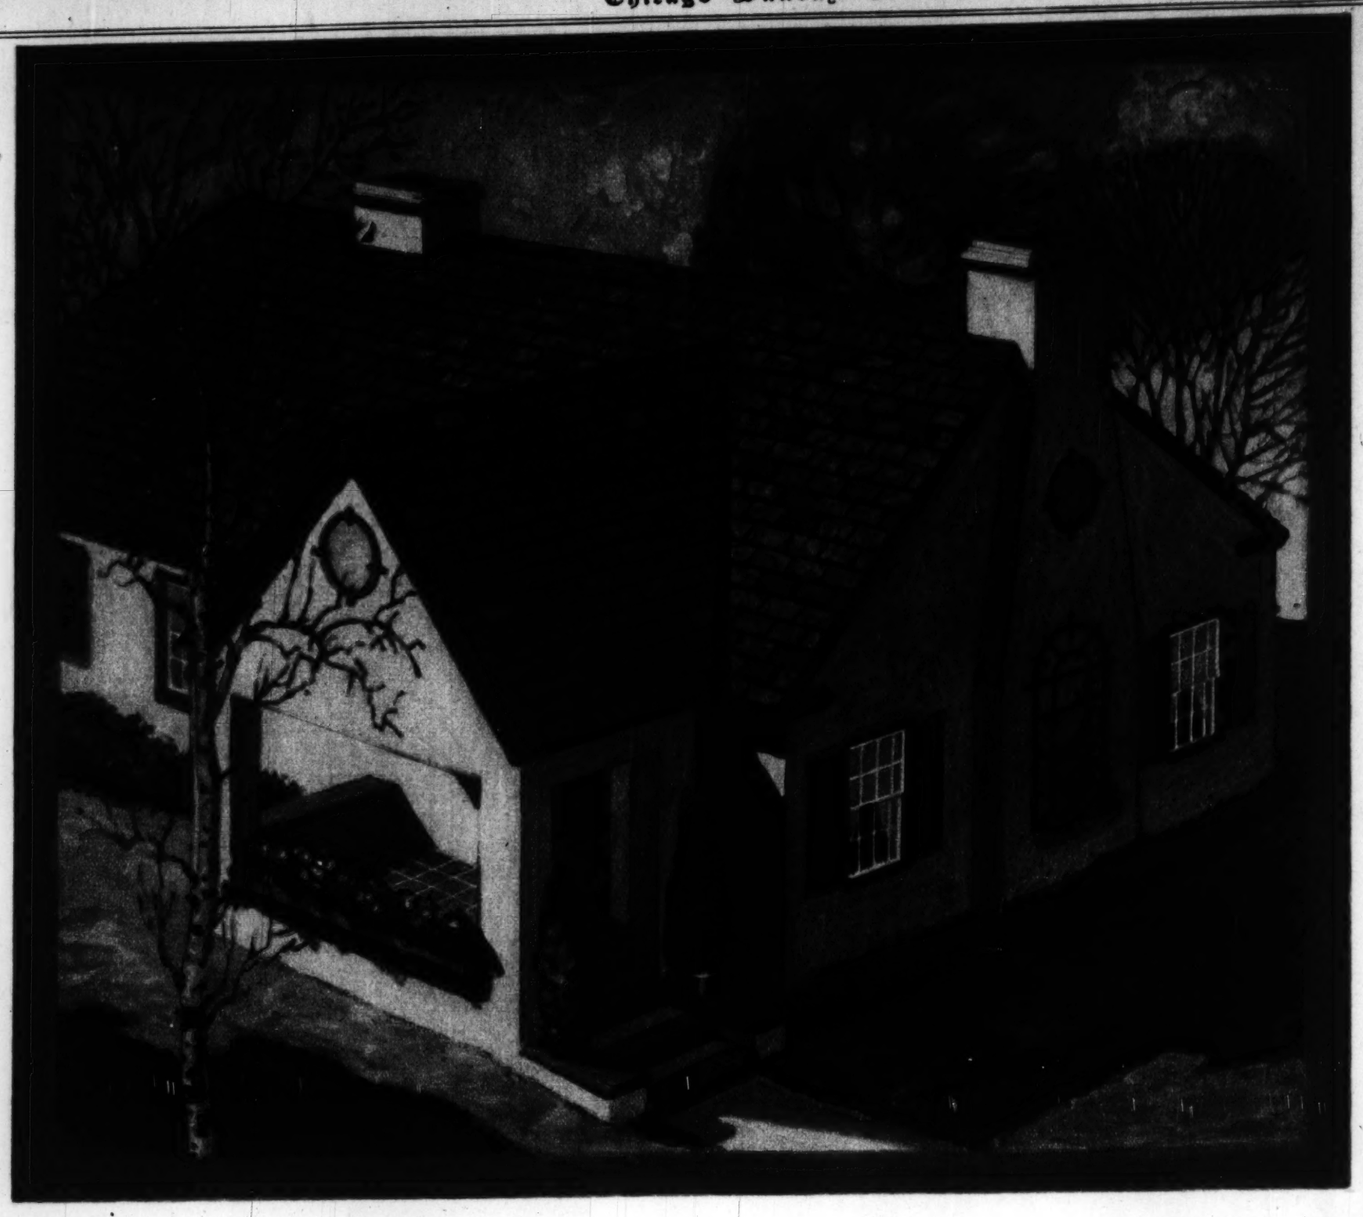
CUT HERE — CUT HERE

TO obtain a Democratic campaign banner for display during the coming months, simply cut along the dotted lines. The banner may then be used in any way you prefer. If you want to paste it in your window, do so with stickers at the corners, first testing it to see if the light behind is strong enough to make the printing on the other side of the page show through. If the printing does show, spread a sheet of plain paper over the back. The portraits also are excellently suited to being framed, in which case they should be mounted on good cardboard.



The Richardson opal roof shown on the bungalow, designed for House Beautiful magazine by Puckey and Jenkins, architects, Chicago

RICHARDSON Product

From the makers of Flex-a-tile Housetops, Viskalt Membrane Roofs, Viskote and similar products

Never before such a roof as this!

Rare beauty of color in the opal roof blended by Richardson from gems of slate

Skillfully blending rare gems of color in slate, Richardson now offers an opal roof of exclusive new beauty.

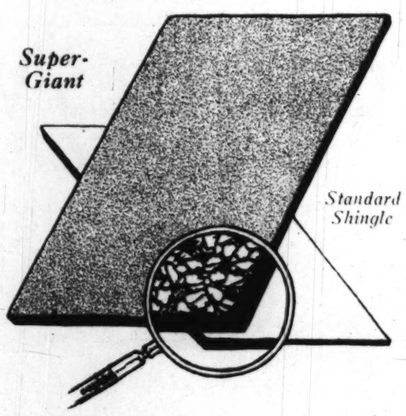
This beautiful new roof is built from shingles on which are combined in almost infinite variety the two favorite Richardson colors in slate—weathered brown and jade green.

Applied to the roof just as they come from the bundle, the Richardson opal shingles give a coloring like autumn leaves floating on a woodland pool.

Architects, home owners and builders who have seen this roof agree that it offers the most distinctive of the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

In addition to opal, the Multicrome Roof is laid in other pleasing color effects. The rare weathered brown, for instance, an exclusive Richardson color in slate, has proved especially popular when applied in combination with other Richardson Shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl. In fact, there is a Multicrome Roof to harmonize with every color scheme, and to please every taste.



The Super-Giant Shingle—50% thicker, 100% more rigid and 35% more economical in cost of laying

The new colors, opal and weathered brown, are used only on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—famous for its beauty and endurance.

With its inner foundation of Richardson felt, which has for fifty years been recognized as the best; thoroughly coated and saturated with Viskalt, the vacuum-processed waterproofing, 99.8% pure bitumen, the Super-Giant Shingle assures lasting beauty for your roof.

Prove the facts yourself

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, or to your contractor, and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask to see the Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown and opal. Note the rare color and larger size. Then compare it with other shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our new booklet Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson Multicrome Roofs, and containing valuable roofing information. Or, ask for our booklet, Roofing on the Farm. Just use the coupon below.

TWENTY-FOUR FEET FROM THE GROUND—Six horses, every one of them up in the air, gave the photographer a chance to provide you here with a picture believed unique in the annals of racing. It was in the $5,000 Independence Day handicap at Hawthorne track. Red Wingfield, the winner, has the pole. (Tribune photograph.)

ANOTHER WHITNEY BRIDE—Miss Joan Whitney, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney of New York, with her husband, Charles Payson, leaving the church after their wedding at Manhasset, L. I. The ceremony followed close upon the marriage of Miss Barbara Whitney, daughter of the Harry Payne Whitneys (who are not to be confused with the Payne Whitneys), to Barklie McKee Henry of Philadelphia. On this earlier occasion Mrs. Payson was a bridesmaid. (Photograph from Fotograms.)

"BEATEN UP"—There was a little difference of opinion as to precisely how Miss Rosetta Duncan (left) received a broken nose in talking things over with the Cicero police, but the incident closed "Topsy and Eva" for several performances—the show being bereft of its Topsy—and there was no difference of opinion about that. It was deplorable, but good publicity. Miss Vivian Duncan here is helping her sister display something new in clothes on their return from a recent run over to England. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

A NUN NO LONGER, Miss Rosamond Pinchot, niece of the governor of Pennsylvania, sets forth for Europe on the Paris, having relinquished the ecclesiastical tole in which she won New York acclaim as one of the chief performers in "The Miracle." Adherents of close-cropped bobs will be interested in noting the state of Miss Pinchot's coiffure. She is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Amos Pinchot, wife of Gov. Gifford Pinchot's almost equally famous brother. (Photo from Pacific and Atlantic.)

WALKING ON WATER, one of the standard miracles of tradition, is an actuality nowadays. They do it at Southend, one of the popular English resorts, with these newly devised water shoes—small floats about six feet long, maneuvered, somewhat in the manner of skis, with the aid of a double paddle.

You cannot conceal it—

Free your skin from the faults that trouble you, instead of trying to conceal them

A poor complexion cannot be disguised

But you can rebuild your skin by the right treatment!

Remember that your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place.

This new skin is your opportunity! Begin today to give it the special care it needs—and see how blackheads, blemishes, large pores will disappear. People will comment on the wonderful improvement in your complexion.

Around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap there is a booklet that tells you just how to take care of your skin.

Thousands of women have built up a clear, lovely complexion by following the famous skin treatments in this booklet. Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today, and begin, tonight, the right Woodbury treatment for your skin!

They must be sheer and in the difficult new shades

even so your stockings can be made to give good service

VAPOR and airdale, blush and sunburst, these are the colors for your street hose. And such ravishing shades to wear with your shimmering evening gowns—chiffon stockings of mauve, star dust, dawn. Ravishing—but oh, how difficult!

Yet with proper care the subtlest of colors—the most gossamer weaves can be made to give good service.

Just dip your stockings in a thin, almost cold Lux suds after every wearing. This frees them from perspiration—that deadly enemy to silk and colors.

With Lux there's no rubbing as with cake soap, to rough up their delicate texture, or streak and fade lovely colors.

Lux contains no free alkali—no harmful ingredient of any kind. It is so pure and mild it will safely cleanse anything that water alone won't harm.

The makers of the famous "Onyx" hosiery say: "We advise every woman who buys our silk stockings to launder them in Lux."

That's how millions get those prettier teeth

Do you realize how much white teeth add to woman's beauty? And how many women get them now, just by combating film?

This offers you a ten-day test of the method they employ. Learn now how much it means.

Teeth are coated

You feel on teeth a viscous film. Much of it resists the tooth brush, clings and stays.

Soon that film discolors, then it forms dingy coats. That is why teeth lose luster.

Film is also the teeth's great enemy. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. It breeds millions of germs, and they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Two ways to combat it

Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight that film. One acts to disintegrate the film, one to remove it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Now careful people of some 50 nations have adopted this new method.

A constant aid

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant. Those are there to fight acids, and the starch deposits which may form acids. Every use gives manifold power to both these tooth-protecting agents.

Pepsodent is bringing a new dental era. You and your family should know what it means, and we urge you to find out now.

Send for this 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

One week will bring a revelation to you. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

No more shiny nose!

There is now a new cream that prevents shiny nose for hours and hours—and those unsightly little spots of oil and moisture, too!

It is a special cream, like nothing you have ever used before. Cool and dainty, you can tell by the very feeling it will make you fresh and lovely.

Apply it to nose, forehead, chin, etc. Not a trace of shine or oiliness remains! Add a light dusting of powder, if you wish. With Vauv as a base it will cling tenaciously. And there you are, with the most delightful finish—soft, smooth, beautiful!

This finish lasts—imagine it!—for a whole day or evening; because Vauv is a real corrective. It absorbs the excess oil and moisture that commonly cause shine. If you make it a regular part of your daily toilette, you will find that it also reduces enlarged pores.

Of course it is absolutely harmless. It does not clog the pores, but actually cleanses them; for when it is washed off, it carries away the impurities it has absorbed.

It is an excellent protection against sun, wind and dust. For your special convenience, it is put up in tube form. This tube lasts a month or more, even with regular daily using.

Try it today!

Ask your druggist or toilet goods dealer for a tube of Vauv today. If he is not yet supplied with it, send us 50c and 3c postage, and we will mail you a tube direct.

The Summer Art Colony

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune

The bath in the brook, that is so full of little sharp stones.

One of those dear little art children.

The near-artists are very vie de Boheme. Led by the young man with the home-grown musical instrument, they are singing "Give Me Whisky, Give Me Gin, and Any Little Thing the Cat Brought In."

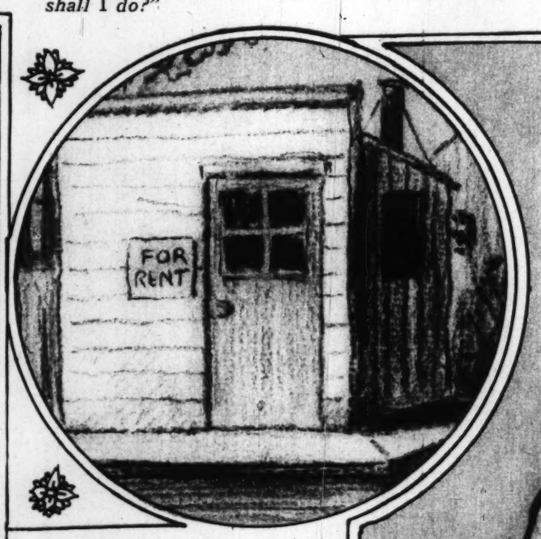
Three girl chums out on a sketching expedition. This ought to show that artists have just as much style as other people.

The virile artist. Very revolutionary. Wants to abolish money and everything that smacks of the Barbizon school. Only paints when the spirit moves him, which is very seldom.

The class in outdoor landscape painting is hard at work back of a cow barn. This is a very popular class—at least five of the pupils have terrible crushes on the instructor. They are painting a distant hillside with a cute little red barn in the foreground. The girl at the extreme left has only taken up art within the past ten days. She came up to visit, and it did look such fun. "O, heavens!" she is saying, "I've gone and painted the grass rose madder instead of green! What shall I do?"

The native, who remembers the good old days when no artists ever came to the village. Hates all artists since the time her cow, Bella, choked on a tube of flakewhite, left in the pasture by some worthless student!

Mrs. Gaunt has been a member of the colony for ever so many summers. She doesn't hold with the modernists, however. She is out gunning for picturesqueness this morning, and on the lookout for wild cows and bulls.



Isn't this a cute little studio? It's one room, and no bath, with a dear little north light window, for thirty-five a month. Pretty soon an artist's family will occupy it for July and August.

The artist's wife has gathered all the picnic things into the basket and when her lord and master is ready they will go home. He is very busy just now, flirting with little Miss Somebody or other, so his wife will have to wait a bit.

"O, isn't it quaint! Aren't they picturesque!" The motorists from the nearby summer hotel stop by to look at the artists in their summer quarters. The consensus of opinion is that they are too quaint for anything.

You Must Perspire

But It Should Not Annoy

THAT body odor so evident everywhere—in warm places, at the office, at the dance, or at the table—need not be yours.

Frequent bathing tends to increase it. Bathing keeps the pores free to throw off their pound-and-a-half of perspiration daily.

The way to insure peace-of-body and peace-of-mind is to follow the morning bath with a generous shower of Vivaudou Talc. It absorbs but does not prevent perspiration. It neutralizes body odors without making you reek of perfume. It soothes the skin, and keeps your body bath-sweet until next bathing time. It prevents smarting and chafing so often caused by acid perspiration.

Your five miles of pores need the cooling, soothing, neutralizing comfort which Vivaudou Talc insures. You must never retard perspiration. You must never choke the pores. That would be fatal. But you can be strictly clean nevertheless.

After the hot strenuous game

Be sure to use Vivaudou Talc because it is purest imported talc and unusually rich in soothing boracic content. Absorbs moisture without drying the skin. It keeps you cool while others are suffering. You are sure you are not embarrassing others.

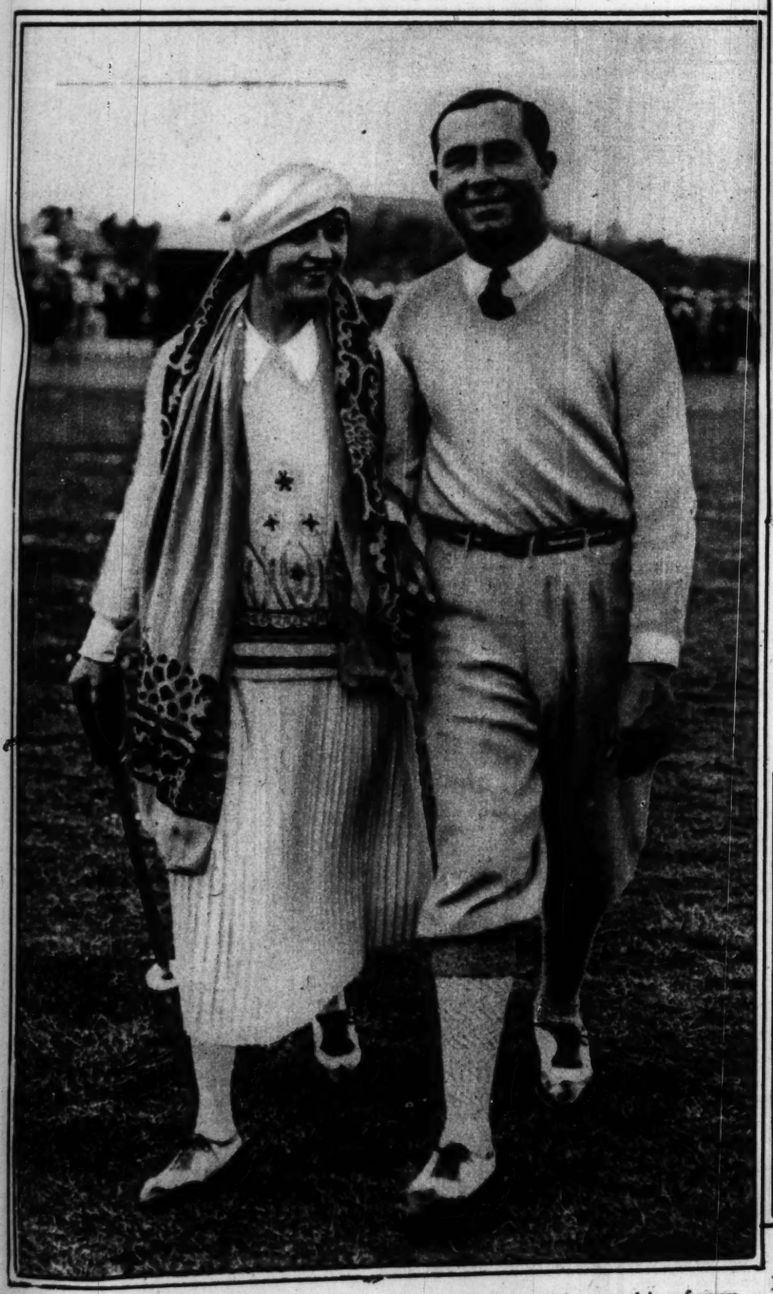
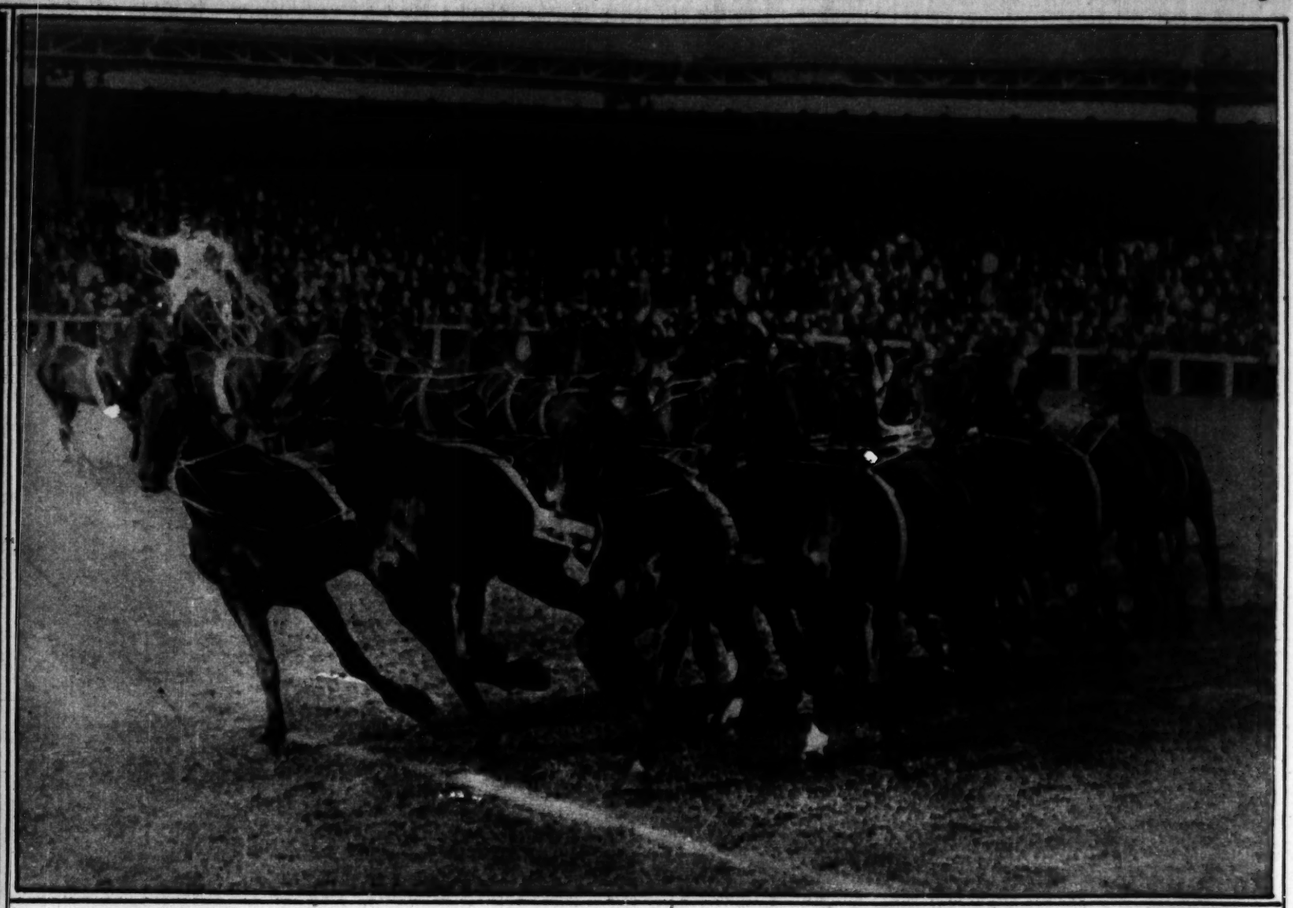
ANOTHER REPETITION OF HISTORY—Nearly three centuries ago a British Lord Doune, at the altar, took a Barbara Murray as his lady. And just a few days ago another Barbara Murray, this one of New York, became the bride of the present Lord Doune. They are pictured leaving the Paris church following the ceremony. (Photo from Pacific and Atlantic.)

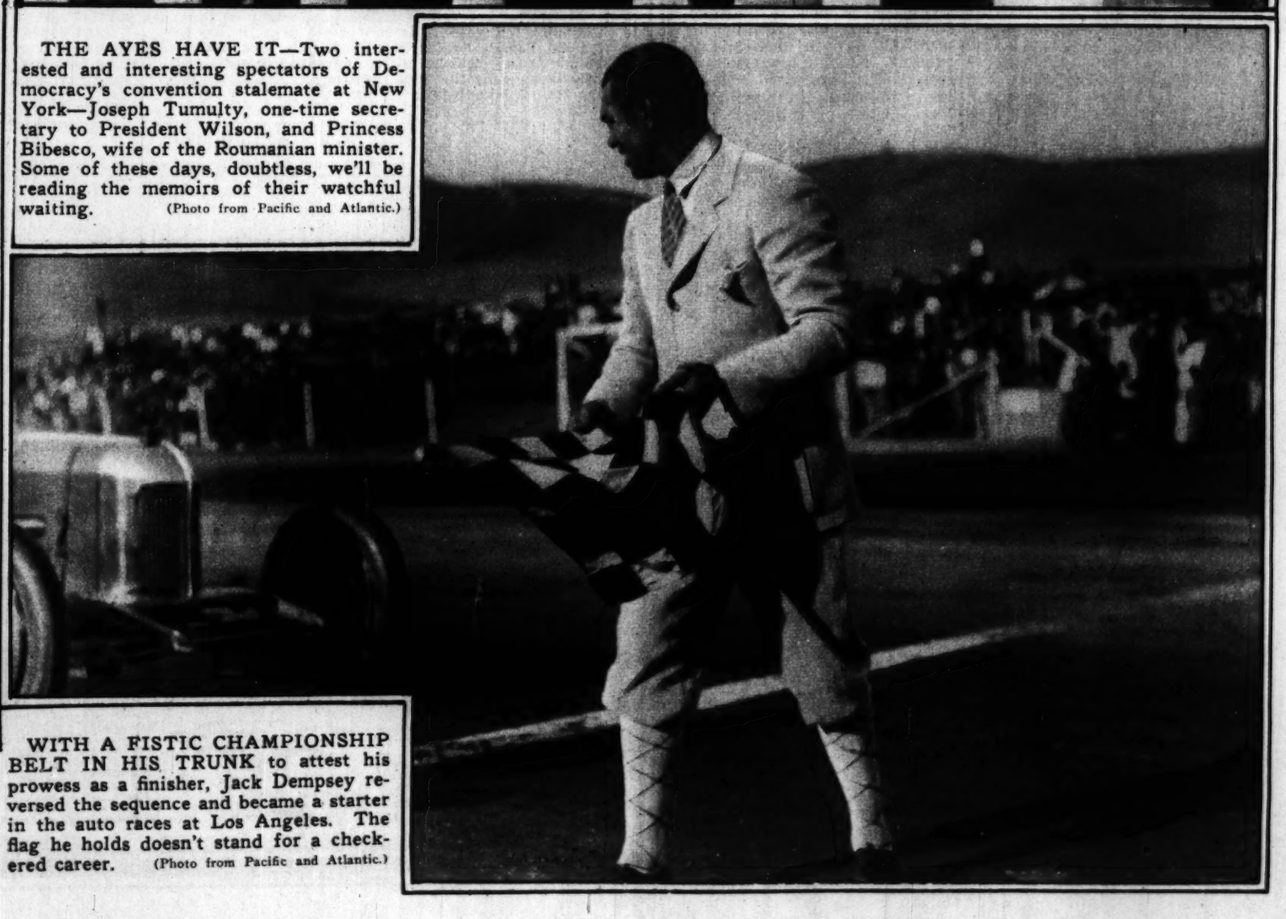


NICE PLACE, ENGLAND—Mrs. Walter Hagen, with something funny in the way of a walking stick, leaves the links at Hoylake, pleased as Punch about everything, apparently, including her husband. It might be added that said husband had just lifted another sporting honor for the United States by winning the British open golf championship. (Photograph from Wide World.)

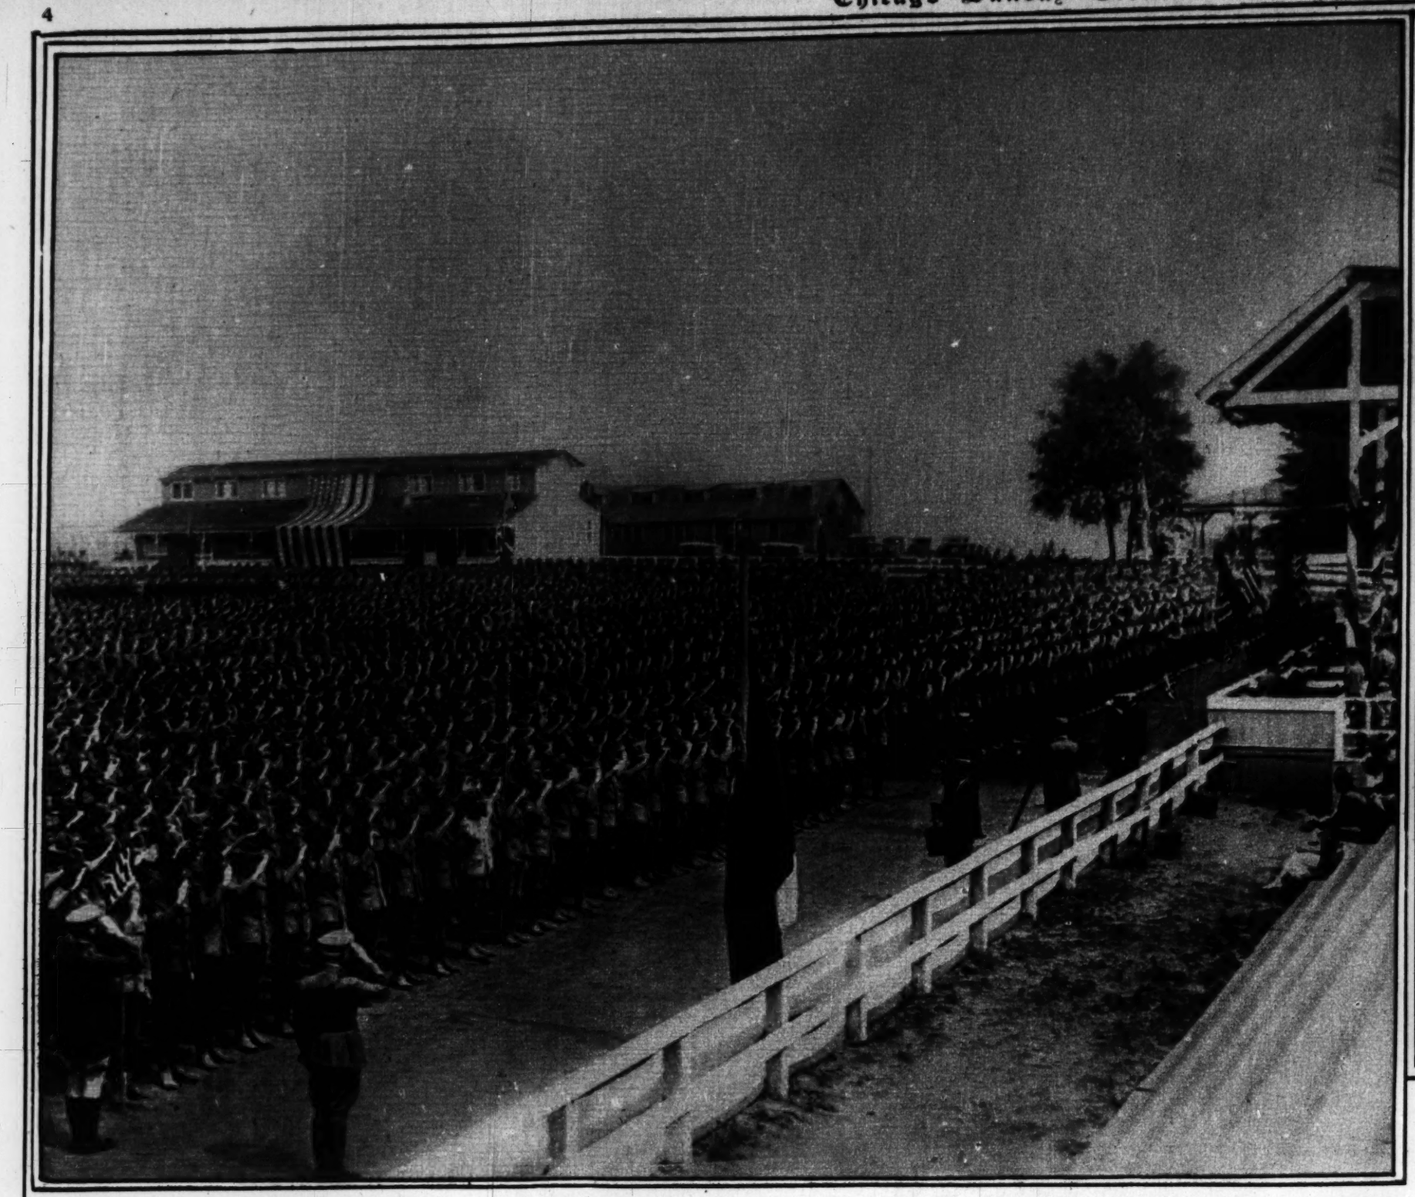


FORTY HORSES, ONE DRIVER—This novel feat of equestrianism was displayed by Capt. Arreteau at a recent horse show held in the Buffalo Velodrome, Paris. Standing perilously on two of his steeds, the driver maneuvered the remaining thirty-eight many times around the ring without a mishap. (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

THE AYES HAVE IT—Two interested and interesting spectators of Democracy's convention stalemate at New York—Joseph Tumulty, one-time secretary to President Wilson, and Princess Bibesco, wife of the Roumanian minister. Some of these days, doubtless, we'll be reading the memoirs of their watchful waiting. (Photo from Pacific and Atlantic.)



WITH A FISTIC CHAMPIONSHIP BELT IN HIS TRUNK to attest his prowess as a finisher, Jack Dempsey reversed the sequence and became a starter in the auto races at Los Angeles. The flag he holds doesn't stand for a checkered career. (Photo from Pacific and Atlantic.)



AN ANTIDOTE FOR PACIFISM—This stirring and significant scene was enacted in the citizens' military training camp at Camp Meade, Md., when the "rookies," having just taken the oath of allegiance, saluted the flag, with Gen. Martin looking on. This camp is conducted on the principles first made famous at Plattsburg. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

HAULING LUMBER to the railroad instead of bringing the railroad to the mill is a device now found useful in inaccessible regions of the northwest. Here is a cable suspension bridge which spans a river and deep gully in Washington and which, by means of an ingeniously simple lumber carrier, swings huge logs quickly to their destination. The bridge proper is 210 feet long between the towers and the distance of the round trip haul is approximately one mile. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

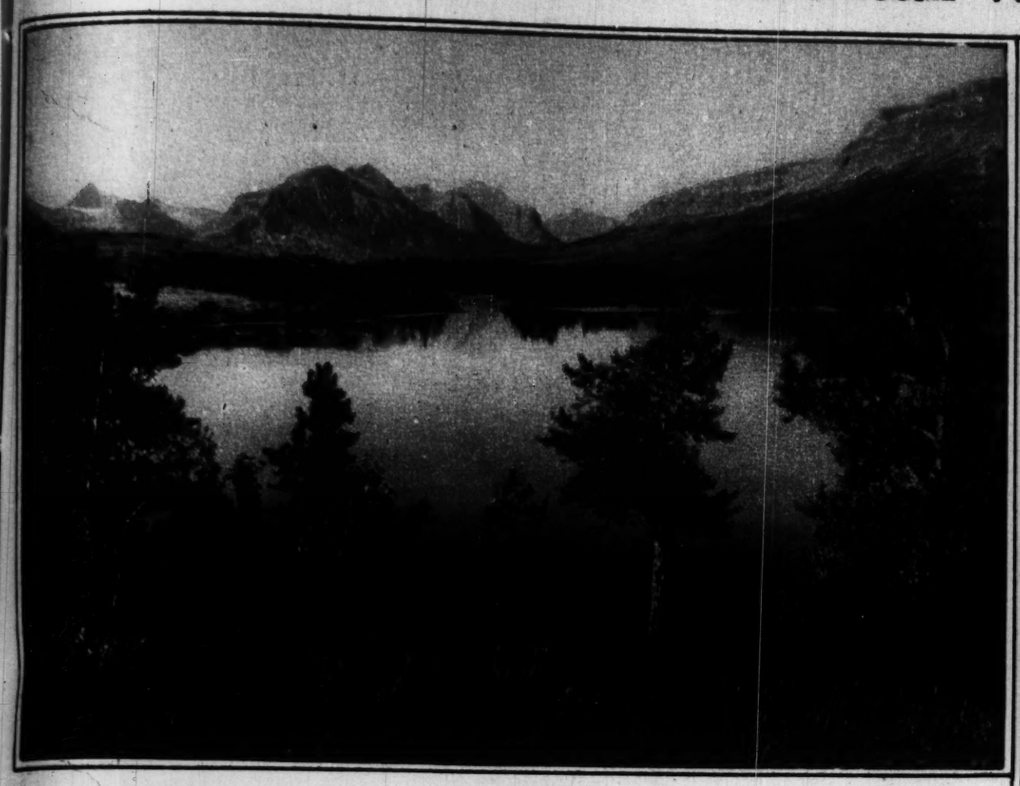
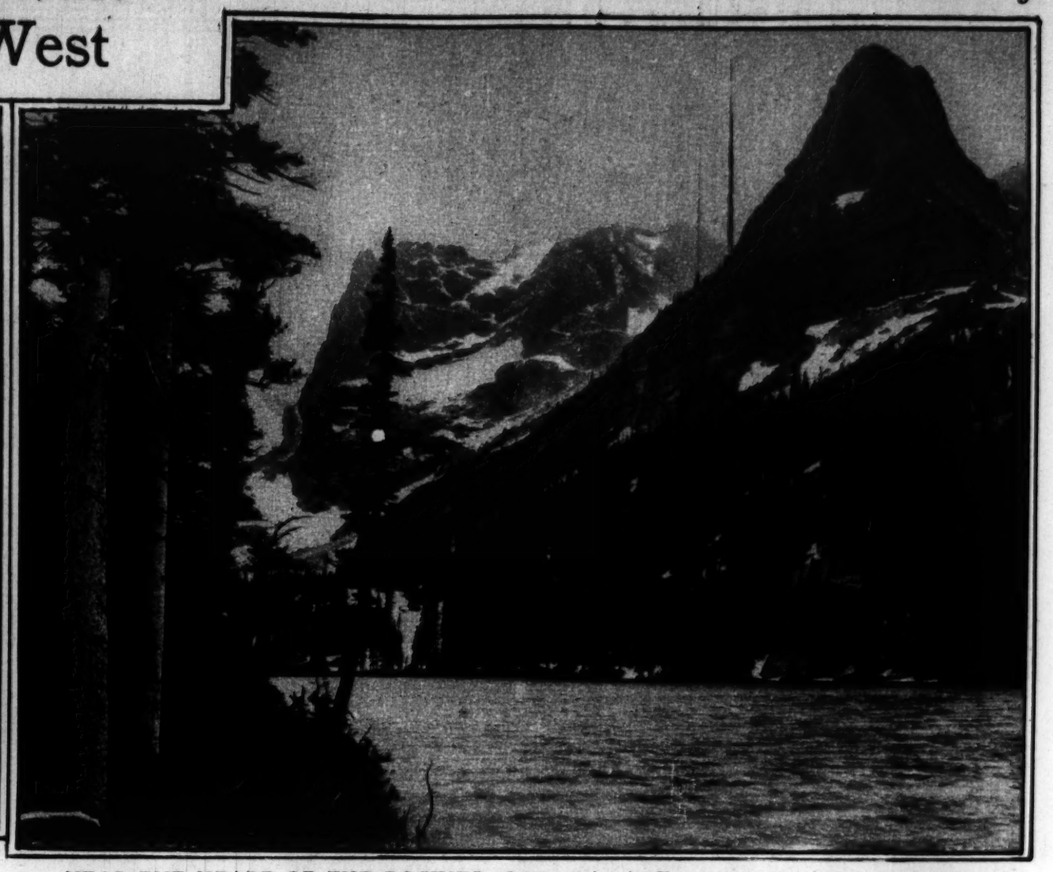
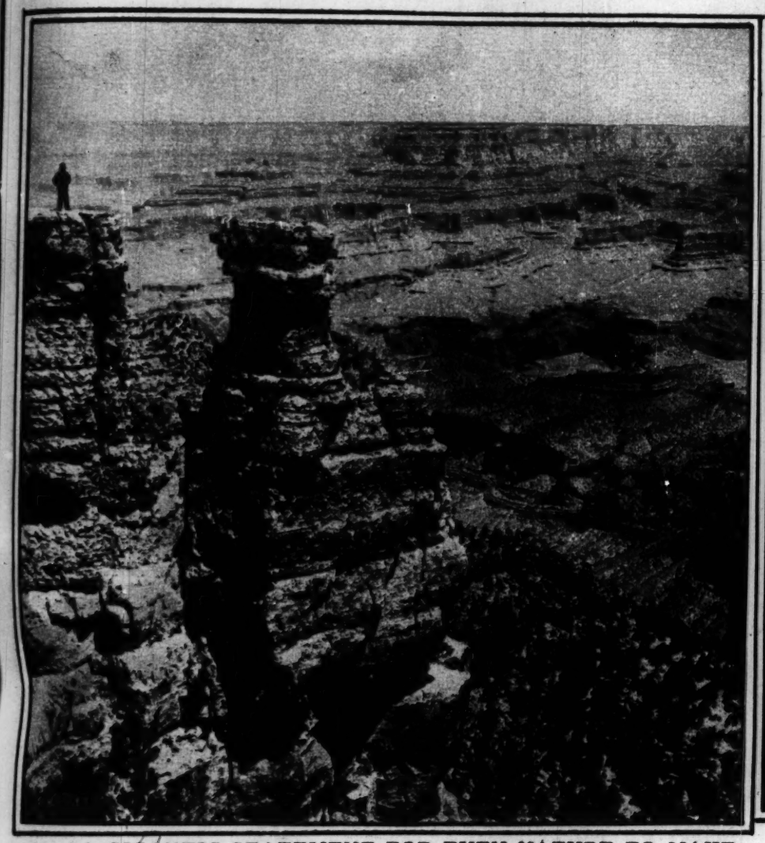
Tourist Shrines of the American West



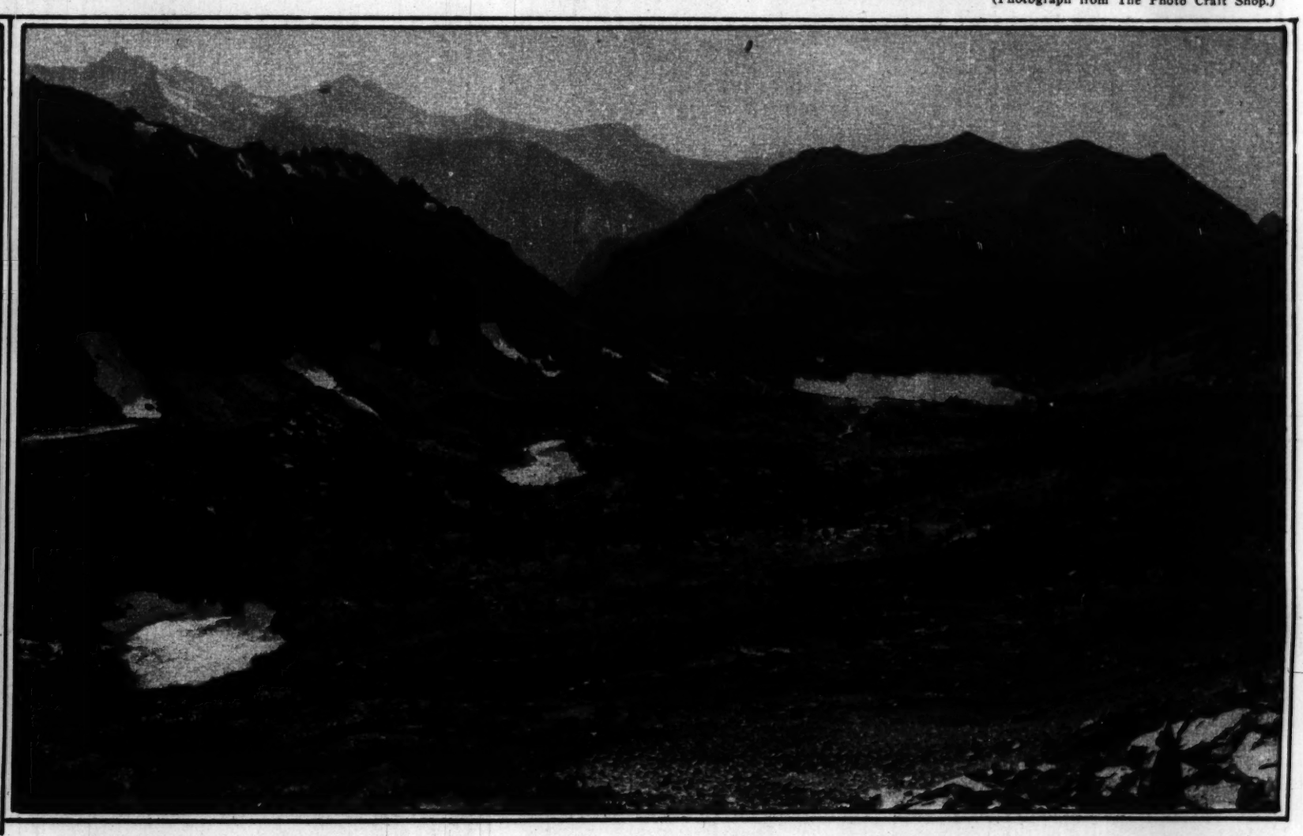
IN AMERICA'S SWITZERLAND—The silvery Lower St. Mary lake in Glacier National park, Montana, one of 250 such bodies of water fed by three-score glaciers that glisten in gorge and upon tumbled mountain. Glacier's crowning glory is the contrast presented here between placid valley and its background of rugged, crumbled grandeur. (Photograph copyright by Fred H. Kiser.)



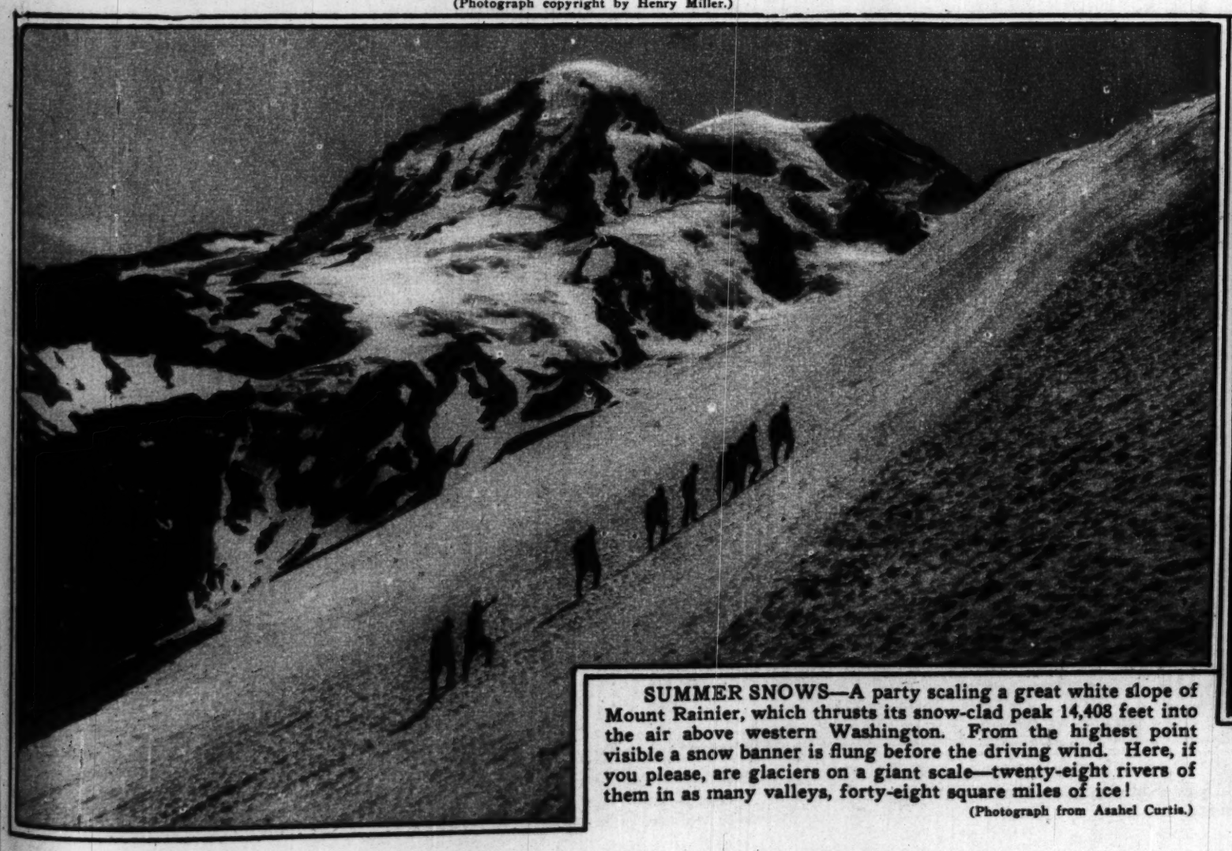
NEAR THE HEART OF THE ROCKIES—Odessa lake, in Estes park, Colorado, almost entirely girdled with snow-patched peaks. The summits of this wildly beautiful region, majestic though they are, are but the threshold to heights in Rocky Mountain park that are incomparably more sublime. (Photograph from The Photo Craft Shop.)



"A GIGANTIC STATEMENT FOR EVEN NATURE TO MAKE all in one mighty stone word," says John Muir of the profound abysses of Arizona's Grand Canyon. "A pageant of ghastly desolation and yet of frightful vitality," says William Winter, "such as neither Dante nor Milton in their most sublime conceptions ever even approached." (Photograph copyright by Henry Miller.)



A TITANIC MOUNTAIN WILDERNESS—Looking west from Kearsarge pass across the High Sierras toward Sequoia National park in California. To the south is Mount Whitney, highest point in the United States, towering to 14,502 feet; and to the westward, in Sequoia park, the giants of the forest, termed "the oldest and biggest things alive." (Photograph from Herbert W. Gleason.)



SUMMER SNOWS—A party scaling a great white slope of Mount Rainier, which thrusts its snow-clad peak 14,408 feet into the air above western Washington. From the highest point visible a snow banner is flung before the driving wind. Here, if you please, are glaciers on a giant scale—twenty-eight rivers of them in as many valleys, forty-eight square miles of ice! (Photograph from Asahel Curtis.)

SUNLIT SUBLIMITY—"Chimney Rock" and light-checkered shadows in Yellowstone park, greatest of the national reservations. In the foreground is a bit of rushing river, which vies in claim for interest upon the tourist with geyser, canyon, and scenic wilderness. (Photograph copyright by Asahel Curtis.)

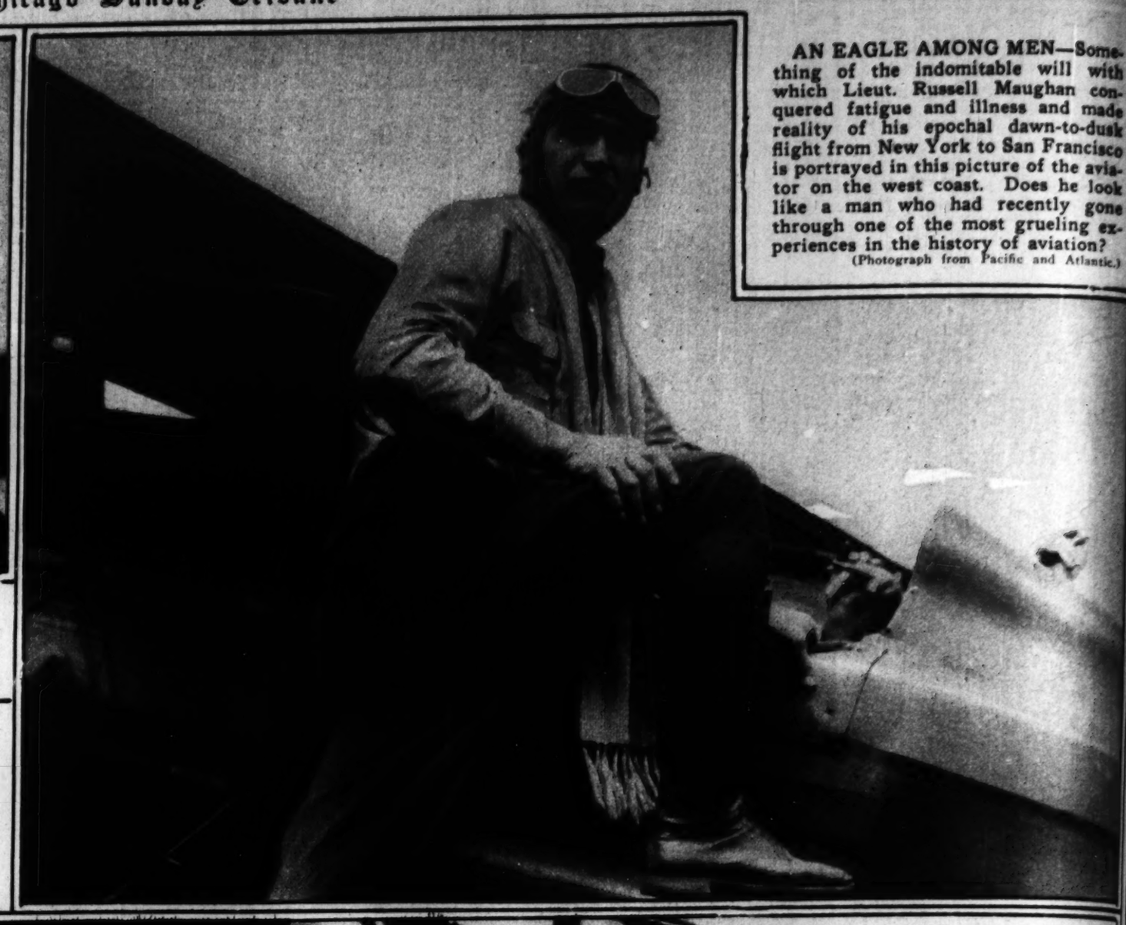
EYES OF THE NIGHT—You'll hardly be likely to get acquainted with those every day heroes of the postal air service who defy the extraordinary hazards of darkness to speed the mails on the thirty-two hour route from New York to San Francisco. Which is one good reason for this photograph of Claire Vance, one of the couriers who fly above a world asleep. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



AN EAGLE AMONG MEN—Something of the indomitable will with which Lieut. Russell Maughan conquered fatigue and illness and made reality of his epochal dawn-to-dusk flight from New York to San Francisco is portrayed in this picture of the aviator on the west coast. Does he look like a man who had recently gone through one of the most grueling experiences in the history of aviation? (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

A WEDDING OF TITLES AND MILLIONS—Of interest unusual in British titled society was the marriage of Lord Dalmeny, eldest son of Lord Roseberry and principal heir of the former Hannah de Rothschild, and Lady Eva Belper, who is wealthy in her own right. They were photographed immediately following the ceremony. (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

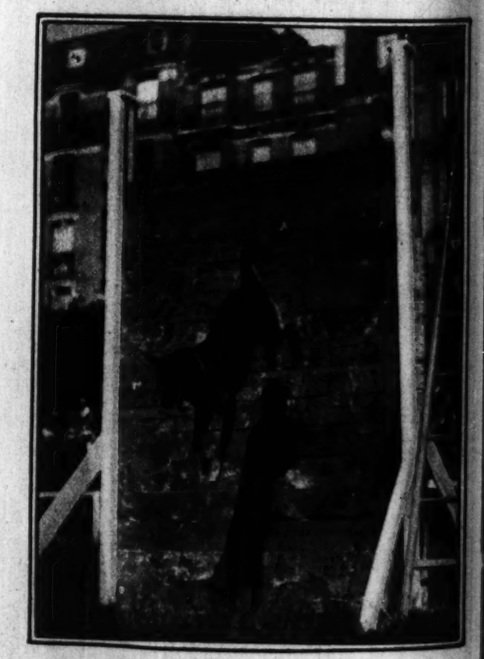
HITTING THE ROAD TO FAME—Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis, batting leader of the National League, is off with a great start this year toward breaking Hans Wagner's record of four straight batting championships in his league. Also he is the leading contender for the trophy of $1,000 as the league's most valuable player.

CHAMPIONS ALL—Johnny Weismuller of Chicago, Joe Kahanamoku, Aileen Riggin, and Duke Kahanamoku aboard the ship that carried them to Paris for the Olympic games. (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

A FAMILY AFFAIR—Lieut. Maughan with his mother, his wife, and his sisters, Ruth and Marjorie, at Salt Lake City on the return trip from the west. No one, surely, would deny his feminine folk a goodly modicum of pride over his achievement. (Photograph from Fotograms)



ANOTHER REASON FOR CALLING IT LEAP YEAR—Duc de Rupel, world's champion police dog, setting a mark of eight feet that other canine Olympians jumped at in vain in the police dog contest at Paris. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

SOME LITTLE QUEEN, Mack Sennett thinks Madeline Hurlock will prove, as the queen in his burlesque of "Three Weeks." Ben Turpin has been chosen as the lover. Can he make eyes? Foolish question! One has the idea that "Three Weeks" will prove rather satisfactory to those who are prowling about in search of laughter.—Mae Tinee.

RUTH CLIFFORD plays the part of Ann Rutledge, Lincoln's sweetheart of the screen, in the Rockett production of "Abraham Lincoln." George Billings has the title role. Charming enough to make the heart of even a great emancipator go pitty-pat, isn't she, as she looks here?—Mae Tinee.

EXIT "SNAKE HIPS"—ENTER HOOPS! At least Corinne Griffith has a dress like this which she wears in "Single Wives." It's made of white satin, overdraped with white velvet and trimmed with pearls.—Mae Tinee.

HAPPY DOG! Here's Whiskers, Mr. Ray's wire-haired fox terrier, in a state of ecstasy because his beloved Charles has consented to a game. (He'd probably be turning somersaults of glee if left to himself. But, being an obedient purp, he sat up like a little gentleman when the order came to "Sit up, Whiskers!") Between Mr. Ray and Whiskers is a ball, doomed, I'm afraid, to some hard punishment.—Mae Tinee.

BESSIE HAD A LITTLE CALF during the filming of "Sundown." It tagged her all over the Texas-Mexico border while she was making location scenes for this new First National release—Mae Tinee.

Simply wash your silver bright!

The secret is out! Just give your silver a Gold Dust bath and watch the amazing result! Every tiny crevice immaculate. Every piece thoroughly clean. Every bit of surface mirror-bright.

Washed bright! Easier than washing dishes. No rubbing. No harsh scouring. No mess. You need not even soil your hands! Just follow these simple directions:

A Secret Worth Knowing

Dissolve in each gallon of boiling water in a tin, aluminum or galvanized vessel two tablespoonfuls of Gold Dust. Be sure to have enough of the solution to cover the pieces of silver entirely. Leave them in the boiling solution and in contact with the vessel for at least one minute. Remove and rinse. Then polish with a soft cloth or chamois.

Hours reduced to minutes. Hard rubbing replaced by gentle washing. Stubborn tarnish gone like magic. All of the drudgery of silver cleaning forever done away with through the wizardry of Gold Dust. Try it and see for yourself.

Try it on your flat silverware, too—knives, forks, spoons—any and all bright-finish silverware.

More users and more uses than any other soap powder on earth—that's Gold Dust!

GOLD DUST

SAVE YOUR HANDS!
Wash dishes the simple, sanitary Gold Dust way!

Gold Dust and a dish mop! Grease and food particles melt away at a rub of the little mop. The "nice" way to wash dishes.

AND THINK OF THE DANGERS HE MUST GO THROUGH TO REACH UNCLE BIM- HE MIGHT GET LOST OR A KIDNAPPER MIGHT STEAL HIM- HIS TRAIN MIGHT GET WRECKED OR THE SHIP MIGHT SINK!

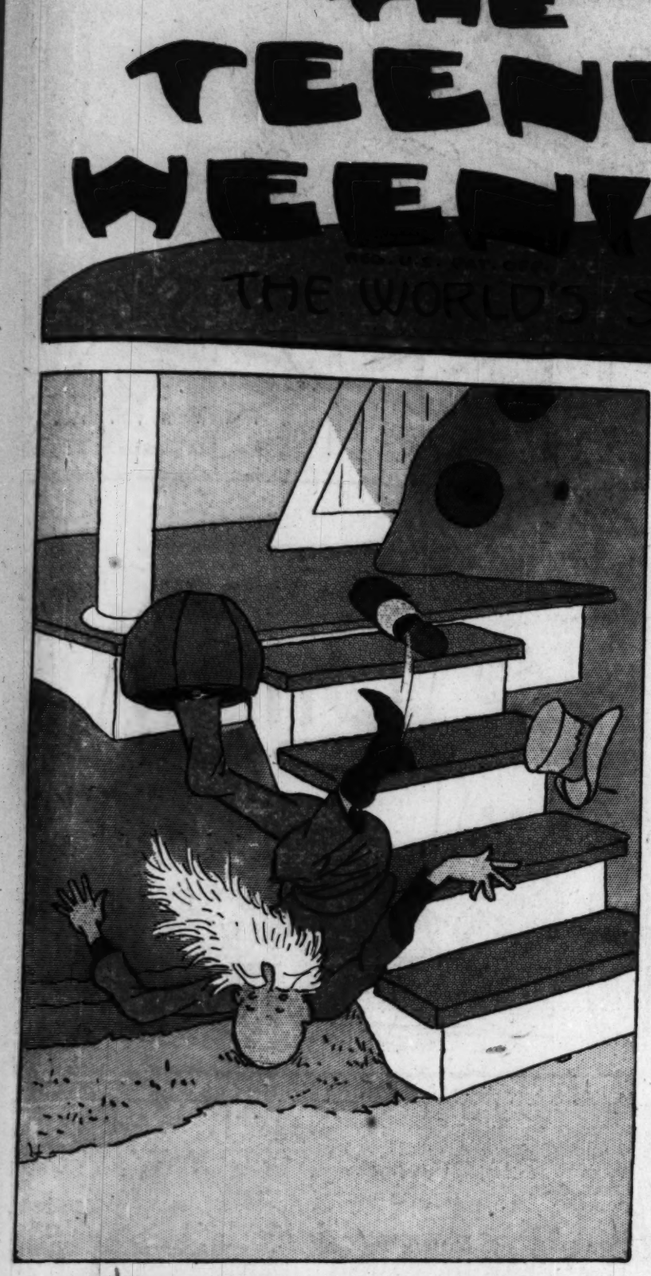
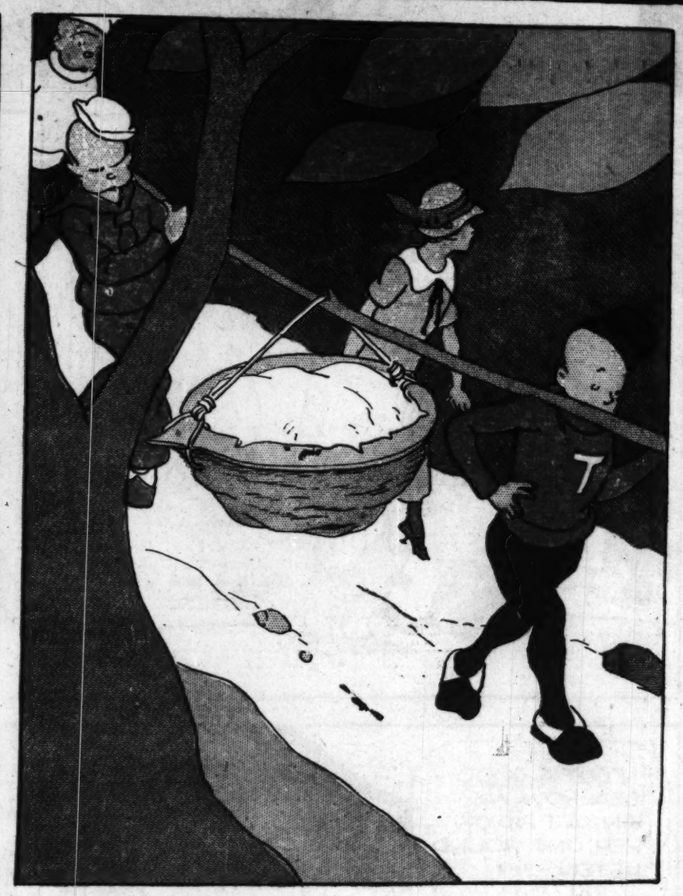
THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE WORLD'S SMALLEST PEOPLE.

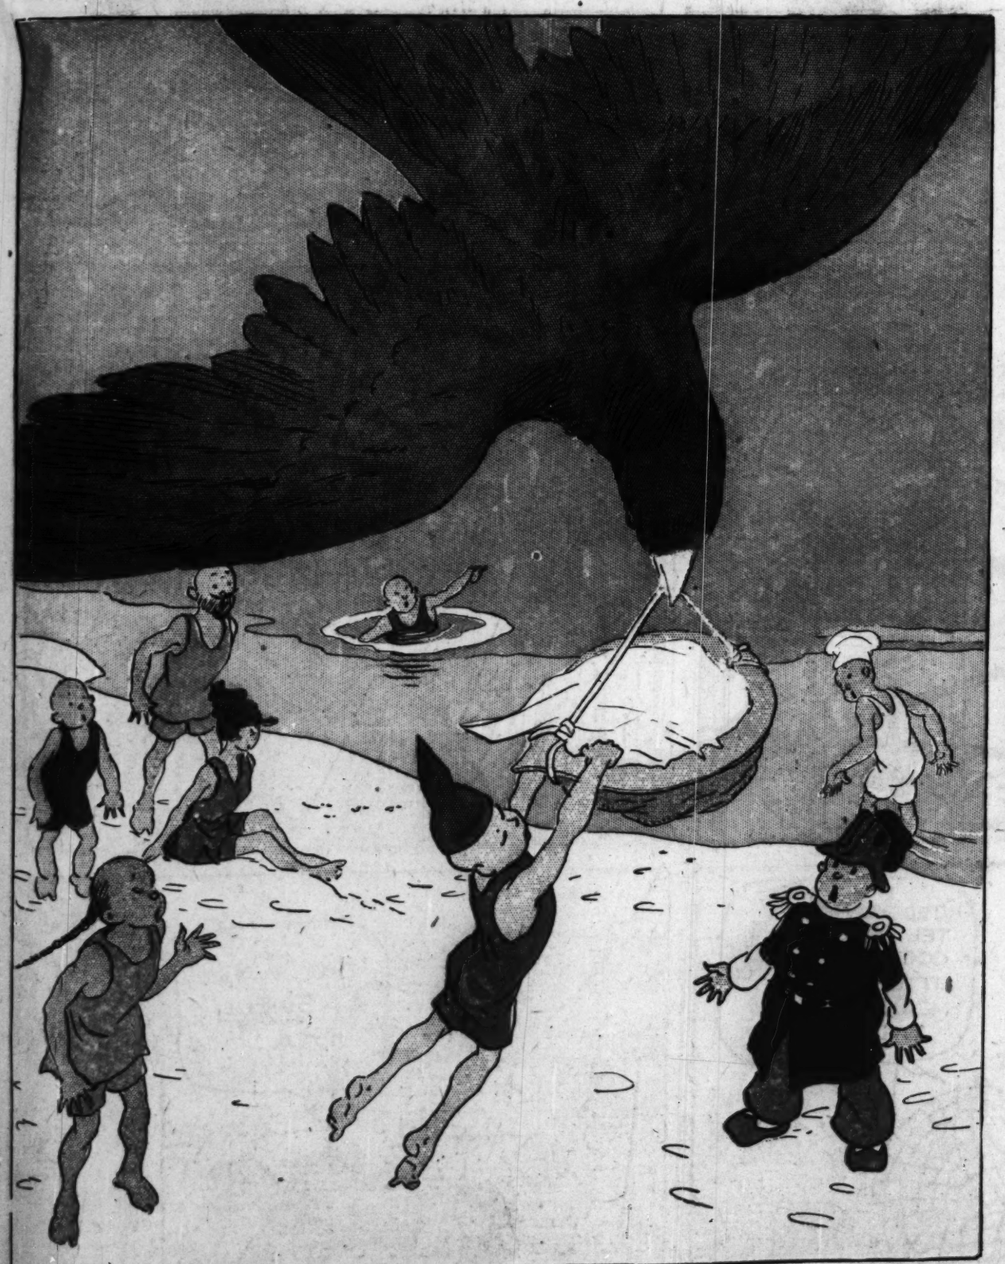
BY WM DONAHEY





The Teenie Weenies had planned a picnic, and everything seemed to go wrong from the start. It looked like rain early in the morning, and then Grandpa had to step into a hazel nut shell jardiniere and fall off the front porch. At first it looked as though the old gentleman was seriously hurt and that they would have to give up the picnic, but the Doctor gave the old fellow a drink of something and in a short time he was all right, so they finally got started.

The Cook had packed half an English walnut shell full of delicious food. There were two whole baked lima beans, half a thimbleful of hickory nut and pecan nut sandwiches, one whole boiled bird's egg, a cherry seed jar of jam and lots of cookies. Everything went smoothly until they got almost to the picnic grounds, and then Gogo, who was carrying a huge strawberry for the dessert, stubbed his toe, fell down and let the berry roll into the creek—it sunk like a B.B. buck shot and the Teenie Weenies almost wept—some of 'em did.



When the little folks got to the picnic grounds they put on their bathing suits and tumbled into the creek, but it wasn't long until something dreadful happened. A strange bird came prowling around, and spotting the shell of lunch he caught it in his bill and started to fly away with it. The Dunce, who was near by, grabbed the shell and tried to save it, but the bird was too strong, and it flew into the air, carrying the Dunce with him.

The Dunce held on, but seeing he was being carried up into the air, he had to drop, and he landed right on top of the General. Everybody was terribly mad and some wicked words were muttered, but that didn't help, for their lunch was gone, the Lover Twins cried, the Lady of Fashion sulked and the Dunce growled so loud the fish popped their heads out of the creek to find out what it was all about. Everybody was dreadfully hungry, so there was nothing to do but go home, so they shuffled mournfully back to the shoe house and filled up on cold tea and cherry tarts.
